EDITOR'S PREFACE

FOR the chief works used in the preparation of this edition of Exodus see on page 37, and acknowledgements in footnotes. The Editor is specially indebted to Prof. A. R. S. Kennedy's articles on the Tabernacle, &c., &c., in Dr. Hastings's Dictionary of the Bible. He has to thank Prof. Kennedy, Dr. Hastings, and Messrs. T. & T. Clark for permission to use some of the illustrations in the Dictionary; and the publishers of the Oxford Helps to the Study of the Bible for permission to use an illustration taken from the Arch of Titus. The division of the text between the documents out of which Exodus was compiled is indicated by capitals inserted in the text in brackets, and at the head of the pages. These capitals are explained in the Table of Symbols, p. 29.

Explanations of points in chapters xxxv–xl must for the most part be looked for in earlier sections, of which these chapters are largely a word for word repetition.

THE BOOK OF EXODUS

INTRODUCTION

I. HISTORICAL AND RELIGIOUS SIGNIFICANCE¹.

OUR book is of immense importance for Revealed Religion, partly on account of the light it throws on the social and religious history of Israel. Its value largely arises from the way in which it was composed; it is the last of several editions of the history and laws of the Chosen People; and thus it preserves for us traditions from many sources and periods². Briefly, two collections of traditions and customary law were compiled some time before the Fall of Samaria, B. C. 721: these two collections may be called the Primitive Document³ and the Elohist Document⁴; they passed through various editions, and were ultimately combined into a single work, and were further combined with other documents, notably the Priestly Document⁵, composed some time after the Exile. Other minor additions were made later, until our Exodus was completed in its present form.

Thus our book reflects the social and religious life of Israel for many centuries. As the hills, the river-beds and banks, the railway cuttings of a district, may reveal a succession of geological strata, and throw light upon the history of our globe through many thousands of years, so the striking variety of style and ideas in the Pentateuch teaches the humble and devout student of God's Word much concerning the successive stages by which Revelation was imparted to Israel. Or, to use another figure—let us imagine a rambling old manor house: an expert ‘conversant with the history and details of architecture’ will at once discern that it has been built in different styles at various periods. The main building, perhaps, is Elizabethan, but the hall has been taken over from a Tudor house on the same site; certain features of the stables and the cellars show that portions of Norman and even Saxon work have been preserved. On the other hand, a Georgian squire has added a picture-gallery, his grandson a billiard-room, and his great-great-grandson a motor garage. Such a building is an epitome of the history of England¹. So with Exodus, any one who is conversant with the history of the language, literature, and the political, social, and religious life of Israel at once discerns that its various sections have been composed at various times under different conditions. In the great groups of chapters belonging to the Priestly Documents he discovers an invaluable mass of information concerning the Jews of the Restoration; but embedded between these groups he finds traditions that were current in the time of David and Solomon, and customs that may partly belong to a still more remote antiquity. Indeed there is hardly a generation from David to Ezra, and even later, that has not left some trace of its religious thought and feeling on the Pentateuch. We cannot now indeed assign with certainty a date, a place of origin, and still less an author to every section, or—to recur to our figure—we cannot say with certainty when and by whom every piece of repair in the stonework was executed, or every additional pinnacle, turret, or other ornament was added. But the whole provides a vast store of information for the scholar, and is a perennial source of inspiration for the docile disciple of the Spirit of God. It stands as a monument of a continuous Revelation and a never-failing response. With the perfect candour from which the Bible never shrinks, it shows us how foolishness, selfishness, and sin interpreted the Divine message amiss, and obscured and distorted the Vision of the Most High. Yet, in spite of this, we see how at all times God was seeking man.

‘Eager to find if ever, or if any, Souls will obey and hearken to His will’—

God was seeking Man and finding him; and Man too was seeking God and finding Him.

The direct spiritual value of such a book is obvious, and the Church has owed much to Exodus, perhaps chiefly in the way of type and allegory. The fortunes of Israel were a parable of the believer's escape from the bondage of sin, of his backslidings and chastisements, and of Divine patience, discipline, and deliverance—a Pilgrim's Progress, long before Bunyan wrote. The Tabernacle and its ritual have been an inexhaustible mine of types and metaphors of Christ and His work.

II. MOSES AND THE EXODUS.

In these days the apostolic admonition to ‘prove all things’ is very thoroughly observed, and even the most fundamental persons and facts of Israelite history have not escaped a ruthless scrutiny. It has even been doubted whether such a person as Moses¹ ever existed, or whether the Twelve Tribes were ever in bondage in Egypt. Clearly if there were no sojourn in Egypt, there could have been no Exodus. Moses, it has been suggested, was the eponymous ancestor of a Levitical family. Distinguished names can, indeed, be quoted in favour of such views; but we believe that it is still true that the weight of authority supports the historical character of Moses and of the crucial events of the Exodus, i.e. the sojourn of Israelite tribes in Egypt ; the oppression ; the flight ; the deliverance at the Red Sea ; a period of nomad life ; the beginning of the national existence of Israel by a federation of tribes ; and an advance in Revealed Religion connected with the adoption of Yahweh as the God of Israel. In all this Moses was the leading spirit¹ ; and although most of the legislation belongs to a later time, doubtless the Pentateuch includes laws which Moses ordained or adopted.

But when we attempt to go further we are confronted by serious difficulties² ; Exodus itself preserves for us a number of conflicting traditions. The records of Assyria, Babylonia, and Egypt do not yet afford us any material help in reconstructing the detailed history of Moses and his followers. A few years, however, may make large additions to our knowledge from the inscriptions, so that any theories now held are merely tentative.

We may, however, mention one view which offers an explanation of some of the present evidence. It is suggested that there was more than one invasion of Canaan by the Israelites ; that first one group of tribes, and then another, endeavoured, with more or less success, to obtain a footing in Palestine ; that only some of the tribes, possibly only Joseph, sojourned in Egypt ; and that while some of the Israelites were in Egypt, others were still living a nomad life to the south and east of Palestine, while others, again, were already settled in the Promised Land. After the Exodus, the Israelites from Egypt joined the nomad tribes, and a subsequent invasion of Canaan united them with the earlier settlers, and completed the Twelve Tribes.

III. AARON AND THE TABERNACLE³.

³ Cf. on iv. 14 and Appendix II.

traditions as they were recorded in the earliest editions of either of the Primitive or the Elohist Document. He is supposed to have been introduced into the story by the authors of the later additions or notes to these works, some time before B. C. 700.

Aaron, the brother of Moses, the ancestor of the Jerusalem priesthood, belongs to the post-exilic Priestly versions of the tradition¹. In the earlier tradition Joshua is the Priest of the 'Tent of Meeting'².

In the sections of the earlier documents as they now stand the name of Aaron has been introduced by the editors³—freely, but not systematically; it is absent from whole sections where it would naturally occur. The result is that Aaron is as a rule a mere shadow of Moses. Curiously enough, in the only two sections in which he acts independently, he plays an unworthy part; he manufactures the Golden Calf, and he sets himself up in opposition to Moses⁴. Both of these incidents are ascribed to the Elohist Document; perhaps the author or one of the editors of that work was acquainted with a tradition in which Aaron figured not as a priest and a brother of Moses, but as a rival leader.

As the consonants of the Hebrew name Aharon (Aaron) only differ from aron, the word for 'ark,' by the insertion of 'h,' as Abraham differs from Abram, it has been suggested that originally Aaron was a personification of the Ark. The priesthood of the Ark might be called 'sons of the Ark' as a Christian might be called 'a child of the Cross.' Moses was identified with the northern kingdom as the ancestor of the priesthood of Dan⁵. Thus the rivalry of the two priesthoods may have given rise to the tradition of the antagonism of Moses and Aaron.

² Exod. xxxiii. 11.

⁴ Num. xii. ⁵ Judges xviii. 30.

The elaborate accounts of the Tabernacle and its furniture, of the priests and their vestments in Exodus xxv-xxxi, xxxv-xi also belong to the late Priestly writings. The chief historical value of these chapters lies in their relation to the Temple. Up to a certain point they reproduce the features of Solomon's Temple, and are based upon the ritual of its services in the closing years of the Jewish Monarchy. On the other hand, these chapters were intended as directions for the worship at Jerusalem after the Return, and largely determined the character of the post-exilic Temples and their services.

At the same time the earlier tradition is acquainted with a 'Tent of Meeting'; and there is nothing improbable in the idea that the Israelites in their nomad life had a sacred tent; but this would be smaller and less elaborate than the Tabernacle described in Exodus. Movable shrines of a comparatively simple character are shown in sculptures of Egyptian camps.

IV. THE DATE OF THE EXODUS.

It is customary to speak of Rameses II, B. C. 1300-1234¹, as the Pharaoh of the Oppression, and his son and successor, Merenptah, B. C. 1234-1214,¹ as the Pharaoh of the Exodus, as if this were an established fact. Really it is only one among many theories, though perhaps it is the theory most widely accepted at present, e. g. by Prof. E. L. Curtis². This theory rests on a very narrow and precarious foundation. In i. 11³ it is stated that the Israelites during the Oppression built Pithom and Rameses, and Egyptian inscriptions show that building operations were carried on at Pithom under Rameses II. The date thus obtained is inconsistent with the Biblical chronology ; and it is held by many scholars that this theory is rendered impossible by recent discoveries in Egypt ;¹ to this we shall return.

¹ These dates are those given by Prof. W. M. Flinders Petrie in his History of Egypt, iii. 2. There is no absolute agreement as to the chronology; but a comparison of authorities suggests that the above dates may be accepted as approximately correct.

² DB., CHRONOLOGY, with some hesitation as to Merenptah.

³ Cf. further the notes on this verse.

The old-fashioned traditional theories, following the more conspicuous evidence of the Old Testament, placed the Exodus much earlier². Take, for instance, Archbishop Ussher, whose dates, unfortunately, are still printed in the margins of many current editions of the Bible. Ussher dates the Exodus in B. C. 1491. On the other hand, some modern scholars propose the period after the death of Rameses III, c. B. C. 1200.

Let us consider first the Biblical data ; it will be seen that they are inconsistent.

(i) Exodus i. 11, just referred to, gives prima facie strong support to the view that Rameses II was the Pharaoh of the Oppression. Nevertheless it is only an isolated, uncorroborated assertion of a relatively late tradition ; nor does it seem absolutely impossible that the work of the Israelites at Pithom might be different from the building carried out under the orders of Rameses II.

Moreover, as many scholars have felt, even if Rameses II was the Pharaoh of the Oppression it does not follow that Merenptah was the Pharaoh of the Exodus. It is true that in Exodus the one seems to be the successor of the other, but tradition is not careful in such matters.

If, however, this theory is adopted, the Exodus would be dated in B. C. 1214. It is not, indeed, definitely stated that the Pharaoh of the Exodus perished in the Red Sea, but that is the obvious intention of the narrative.

This very precise determination of the date, however, has been set aside by the discovery of the mummy of Merenptah, which shows that he was not drowned in the

Red Sea. Thus we should merely have a date between B. C. 1234-1214.

(ii) In 1 Kings vi. 1 it is stated that Solomon began to build the Temple in the fourth year of his reign, in the 480th year after the Exodus. Solomon's son, Rehoboam, was a contemporary of the Egyptian king Shishak¹, B. C. 952-930². On this and other grounds the accession of Solomon is placed about B. C. 970. This would give us for the date of the Exodus B. C. 1450.

(iii) According to any natural application of the view that our books from Joshua to Kings are always to be understood as accurate literal history, a series of periods—reigns, judgeships, oppressions, &c.—would be taken to run consecutively; and this would give us an interval of considerably more than 534 years between the Exodus and the Building of the Temple³. This would fix the date of the Exodus some time before B. C. 1504.

(iv) According to Exodus xii. 40f. the Israelites were in Egypt 430 years⁴, and according to the figures in Genesis there was an interval of 190 years between the birth of Isaac and the settlement of Jacob in Egypt⁵. Now the birth of Isaac took place after the invasion of Amraphel⁶. Amraphel is usually identified with Hammurabi, who may possibly have reigned as late as B. C. 1920⁷. This would fix the Exodus before 1920—620=B. C. 1300.

(v) The genealogies are comparatively useless for such

⁴ In Gen. xv. 13, the 'affliction' is to last 400 years: cf. notes on the two passages.

⁷ Page 13. Winckler, however, Hist. Baby. and Assyr., dates Hammurabi, B. C. 2267-2213; others give B. C. 2100.

purposes as this; for many reasons, the most obvious being that it is always possible that links have been omitted for the sake of brevity or by accident. Nevertheless, it is worth while noticing the difference in the genealogies as to the number of generations. It may fairly be regarded as another trace of the existence of conflicting traditions. In view of the very slight value of this evidence, we need not dwell upon it, but a single instance may be given.

Combining Gen. xxxviii. 29 with Ruth iv. 18-22, we get nine names between Jacob and David¹. Again, combining Exod. vi. 16-20 with 1 Chron. vi. 49-53, there are thirteen names between Jacob and Zadok the contemporary of David².

Speaking generally, it is almost impossible to reconcile the genealogies with any of the earlier dates suggested for the Exodus.

(vi) We may turn next to the Egyptian and other inscriptions. The evidence from these sources is still meagre and ambiguous³, but a certain amount is slowly accumulating, and it is becoming more and more difficult to reconcile the testimony of the monuments with the Biblical narratives, if the latter are interpreted as a single consecutive story. If, however, we adopt some such division into sources as that of this volume, it may be possible to combine the statements of the older documents with the inscriptions. Possibly, too, we should find it necessary to modify the somewhat doubtful division of the material between the Primitive Document and the Elohist Document⁴.

We may mention two or three of the more important inscriptions which may bear upon our problems⁵.

² Not counting either Jacob or Zadok.

⁵ Cf. Bennett and Adeney, Biblical Introduction, pp. 64, 77.

In the celebrated Amarna Tablets, c. B. C. 1400, certain Habiri are spoken of as invading Palestine, and these are identified by some scholars with the Hebrews. This would place the Exodus about B. C. 1440, which fairly agrees with the date given us by 1 Kings vi. 1¹.

Inscriptions of Rameses II and his predecessor Seti I apparently mention the tribe of Asher in its proper district in Palestine, at a time when, according to the Rameses-Merenptah theory², it was undergoing oppression in Egypt together with the other tribes.

Then there is an inscription of Merenptah himself, which at first sight seems fatal to the Rameses-Merenptah theory. The natural interpretation of it seems to be that Merenptah laid waste the lands of Israel in Palestine, whereas if he was the Pharaoh of the Exodus he died before Israel had any lands in Palestine. However, it does not seem absolutely certain that it is correct to read one of the names in this inscription as Israel; and the sentence is sufficiently indefinite to admit of more than one possible explanation.

Turning to more general considerations, the Exodus seems to have taken place when Egypt was weak and had lost its dominion over Sinai and Palestine. Such a state of affairs existed in the period of the Amarna Tablets³ and after the death of Rameses III, c. B. C. 1200. The Syrian dominion was also lost for a time after the death of Merenptah, but was speedily recovered by Rameses III.

At present, therefore, it is impossible to combine the Biblical statements with the evidence of the monuments so as to fix the date of the Exodus with any certainty. On the one hand, Exodus i. 11 might, with sufficient manipulation of the figures, be combined with Exodus xii. 40; Gen. xv. 13, in support of the Rameses-Merenptah theory⁴.

And, on the other hand, 1 Kings vi. 1¹ might be supported by the Amarna Tablets and some of the other archaeological evidence. Perhaps the Israelites preserved traditions of two distinct invasions.

V. THE BOOK OF THE COVENANT AND THE CODE OF HAMMURABI².

For the historian the most valuable part of Exodus is chapters xx-xxiii, which include the Ten Commandments and the Book of the Covenant. From the latter we get a vivid picture of social conditions under the Early Monarchy. Israel, it appears, was a purely agricultural people—there is hardly any reference to trade. The extremes of wealth and poverty are rare; as a rule the free Israelite is a farmer cultivating his own land. Slavery exists in a comparatively mild form. There are survivals of primitive barbarism; we meet with the principle of ‘an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth,’ and a man is allowed to flog male and female slaves to death provided they do not actually die under his hand. But on the whole the Book of the Covenant is an attempt to secure an advance in justice and humanity. It compares favourably with the English criminal law in the eighteenth century, and with the statutes of the slave states of America in the earlier half of the nineteenth century. One of the most interesting discoveries of modern times, the Code of Hammurabi, shows that the Book of the Covenant largely reproduces the social principles and customs of the ancient Semitic peoples.

Hammurabi, probably the Amraphel of Gen. xiv. 1, was one of the most important personalities in the history of Western Asia, a great conqueror, administrator, and lawgiver. We may possibly put him as late as about B. C.

1900¹. In January 1902 a monument of this king's was discovered inscribed with a collection of laws. It was 'a block of black diorite, nearly eight feet high, found in pieces, but readily rejoined².' The inscription covers two sides of the block, and at the top of one side there is a sculpture representing Hammurabi receiving his laws from Shamash the sun-god, 'the judge of heaven and earth.' The inscription may be roughly described as about half the length of Exodus.

The contents show that the empire of Hammurabi was a much more highly organized and civilized state than the Israel of the Book of the Covenant; commerce especially played a much more important part in the life of the people.

There were law courts, legal documents, deeds of sale, marriage settlements, title-deeds, regulations as to the tenure, renting, and cultivation of the land; as to damage done to property; as to the relations of a merchant and his agent; as to the management of public-houses, as to betrothals, marriage, divorce, adoption, and inheritance; as to wages, doctors' fees, the hire of oxen, waggons, and boats.

In the detailed notes³ we point out the close agreement both in substance and in wording between some corresponding laws in the two codes. If we are asked to compare the ethical value of the two sets of laws⁴, each has points in which it is superior to the other. Both codes were, on the whole just, enlightened, and humane,

¹ But C. H. Johns, B. C. 2285-2242. See p. 37 for the title of Mr. Johns' translation of the legal portion of this inscription. This little work, published at eighteenpence or two shillings, places the Code within reach of every one. Cf. p. 10.

³ See on xxi. 2, 15 ff., 22, 26-32; xxii. 6-12.

⁴ Leaving theology out of the question. The introduction to the Code of Hammurabi brings into prominence the polytheism of the Babylonian King.

judged according to the circumstances of their times, but perhaps the balance would incline somewhat in favour of the Book of the Covenant.

Seeing that the Babylonian laws are centuries older than the Israelite, it might seem at first sight natural to explain the parallels by supposing that the more recent borrowed from the more ancient. And as Hammurabi's code was known and studied in Babylonia and Assyria from the time when it was composed until after the Jewish Exile, Israelite lawgivers might have used it at any period of the history. But, while it is clear that the Babylonian code must have had some general and indirect influence at least upon the Book of the Covenant, it is not certain that there was actual borrowing. The resemblances may be mainly due to two facts—(i) that the Israelites and the Babylonians were dealing with similar problems, in the same spirit; they were alike anxious to draw up a set of just laws; (ii) the two codes were alike based on the traditional law and custom prevailing throughout the ancient East.

VI. HOW EXODUS WAS WRITTEN ;¹ ITS NAME.

Exodus was not originally a separate book; it is merely the second volume into which the Pentateuch, or Five-Volumed-Work, the Jewish Torah or Law, was divided for the sake of convenience. Genesis concludes the story of the Patriarchs with the death and burial of Joseph. Exodus begins with the formation of the people of Israel by the rapid multiplication of the descendants of Jacob in Egypt; it tells the story of the Oppression, the birth and early years of Moses, the Ten Plagues, the Exodus or Departure from Egypt, the Deliverance at the Red Sea, the march to Sinai, the giving of the Law, and the episode of the Golden Calf; and concludes with the account of the Construction and Erection of the Tabernacle.

As Exodus was originally part of the Pentateuch, an account of its origin involves a brief sketch of the history of the larger work of which it is a part.

The Pentateuch was a compilation from earlier works: it was the final edition of the Law of Israel, these earlier works being former editions of that law.

The most important of these earlier works will be spoken of in this commentary as the Primitive Document¹, the Elohist Document², Deuteronomy³, and the Priestly Document⁴. These four were combined by the editors of the Pentateuch into a single continuous work, just as the Four Gospels are often pieced together to make a continuous story or 'Harmony.' In both cases the editors or harmonizers have largely retained the actual words of the older works. But in the case of the Pentateuch, the piecing together of paragraphs and phrases necessitated the additions of many words and sentences by the editors; who also added numerous notes and comments to explain or correct what they took from their sources. After the fashion of ancient literature these notes and comments came to be written as part of the book itself, with nothing to distinguish them from the portions taken from ancient documents.

⁴ Denoted by the symbol P, and often referred to as the Priestly Code: cf. p. 25.

At some time between the death of Solomon and the Fall of Samaria¹ two collections were made of ancient laws, customs, and traditions: one, the Primitive Document, in Judah; the other, the Elohist Document, in the Northern Kingdom. These two works passed through various editions.

In the reign of Manasseh or Josiah² a new edition of the laws and customs was compiled in Judah, and was accepted as the Law of Judah by a solemn covenant at the time of the reforms of Josiah³. This is the Book of the Law found in the Temple⁴, and included the central portions of our Deuteronomy. This also passed through various editions.

About the same time an editor combined current editions of the Primitive Document and of the Elohist Document into a single work, which we may call the Twofold Document⁵.

At some time during the Exile the current editions of Deuteronomy and the Twofold Document were combined into what we may call the Threefold Document⁶.

After the Exile another new edition of the history and laws was compiled at Babylon some time before the reforms of Ezra and Nehemiah⁷; this was the Priestly Document.

Soon after, our Pentateuch was formed by the combination of the Priestly Document with the Threefold Document, together with certain editorial changes⁸. Finally, the Pentateuch was divided into our Five Books, and Exodus arose as a separate work.

By way of a very rough diagram we may give the following :—

The Name EXODUS, 'Departure,' i.e. the departure of the Israelites from Egypt, is derived from the contents of the opening chapters of the book. This name is first found in the manuscripts of the Septuagint¹; it was adopted by the Vulgate and other Versions, and so became the title of the book in the English Bible. In the Hebrew Bible it is called We'ëlleh Shemôth, 'And these are the names,' from the opening words of the first chapter.

VII. SUMMARY OF THE CONTENTS OF EXODUS, ARRANGED ACCORDING TO THE MAIN SOURCES.

As the Deuteronomic Document, D, was placed, as a whole, almost at the end of the Pentateuch, thus forming the central portion of our Deuteronomy, no portion of this document is included in Exodus. Hence in this volume we have used the symbol D for various notes, &c., added by editors writing in the spirit or under the influence of the Deuteronomic Document; these are indicated in Table B, and in the notes on the text. Thus our summary is only concerned with the Primitive Document, the Elohist Document, and the Priestly Document; from these we have:—

(a) Contents of the Primitive Document, J¹. The portions of this Document which are included in Exodus refer to the period from the Oppression and the Birth of Moses to the Giving of the Law. A summary of these is given. Some of the earlier editorial additions which may have been added to this document before it was combined with E are given in italics—which, however, are also used for the headings of the Plagues.

i. 6, 8–12. Death of Joseph. A new Pharaoh oppresses Israel by making them build Pithom and Rameses. Nevertheless they continue to increase.

ii. 11–23*a*. Moses slays an Egyptian who was ill-treating a Hebrew, and flees to Midian, where he marries the daughter of the Priest of Midian, and has a son, Gershom. Pharaoh dies.

iii (Portions)². Yahweh appears to Moses in the Burning Bush, and bids him return to Egypt and announce to the elders of Israel the approaching deliverance of the people. Then, accompanied by the elders, he is to demand from Pharaoh permission to go three days' journey into the wilderness to sacrifice to Yahweh.

iv. 1–12. Moses objects that the Israelites will not believe him.

Yahweh gives him THREE SIGNS to work before them—a rod turned to a serpent; his hand made leprous and healed; water turned to blood.

Moses objects that he is not eloquent. Yahweh replies that He will teach him what to say.

iv. 13–16. Moses still demurs, and Yahweh promises to give him Aaron the Levite for a spokesman.

iv. 19–31 (Portions). At the bidding of Yahweh, Moses returns to Egypt with his wife and son¹. On the way Yahweh seeks to kill him, but is appeased by the circumcision of the son.

Moses announces the coming deliverance to the elders of Israel, and does the signs before the people. They believe.

v. 1—vi. 1 (Portions²). Moses and the elders appear before Pharaoh and demand permission to go three days' journey into the wilderness to sacrifice to Yahweh. Pharaoh refuses, and increases the tasks of the Israelites, who appeal in vain to Him for relief. They reproach Moses. He appeals to Yahweh, who promises deliverance.

vii. 14-25 (Portions²). As Pharaoh is stubborn, Yahweh sends on him a succession of *Plagues*³.

I. The Fish in the Nile are killed.

viii. 1-15 (Portions). II. Frogs. These are sent through all the land. Pharaoh promises to let the people go to sacrifice; the frogs are taken away; and Pharaoh breaks his promise.

viii. 20-32. III. Flies. These are sent through all the land, except the Israelite settlement in Goshen. Pharaoh suggests that they shall sacrifice in Egypt. When this offer is declined, he promises to let them leave Egypt to sacrifice; the flies are taken away, and Pharaoh breaks his promise.

ix. 1-7 (Portions²). IV. Murrain. A plague is sent on the cattle of the Egyptians.

ix. 13-35. V. Hail. A hailstorm is sent which destroys the vegetation; Pharaoh promises to let the people go; the storm ceases; and he recalls his promise.

x. 1-20, 24-6, 28 (Portions²). VI. Locusts. Pharaoh is threatened with a Plague of locusts: by the advice of his servants, he offers to let the men go alone. Locusts are sent which eat up all the vegetation which the hail had left. Pharaoh promises to let the people go; a wind takes away the locusts. Pharaoh offers to let the people go with their families, but without their flocks and herds. Moses refuses; and Pharaoh bids him go, and come again no more.

xi. 4-8, xii. 29-34. VII. The Death of the Firstborn. Moses answers that at midnight Yahweh will destroy the firstborn of the Egyptians, but will spare the Israelites. The threat is fulfilled, and Pharaoh bids them go, families, flocks, and herds. The Egyptians hasten their departure, and they depart without waiting for their dough to become leavened.

xii. 37-9 (Portions¹). Accompanied by a mixed multitude the Israelites march from Rameses to Succoth.

xiii (Portions¹). The Feast of Unleavened Bread is instituted. Firstlings belong to Yahweh. Pillar of Fire.

xiv (Portions¹). THE DELIVERANCE AT THE RED SEA. Pharaoh pursues Israel, and overtakes them by the Red Sea. They murmur, and Moses promises deliverance from Yahweh. An east wind drives back the water, and the Israelites cross on dry land. The Egyptians follow, but Yahweh harasses them, and in the morning the waters return, and drown them.

xv. 22-5a, 27. They reach Marah, where Moses sweetens bitter waters. They come to Elim and find springs and palm-trees.

xvii. 3-7 (Portions¹). At Massah Moses gives the people water from the rock.

xix. 11-22 (Portions¹). Yahweh appears upon Mount Sinai.

xxiv. 1f., 9-11 (Portions¹). Moses and the Elders of Israel ascend the Mount and behold the God of Israel.

xxxiv² (Portions¹). Moses is called up into the Mount. Yahweh makes a covenant with Israel, the terms of which are stated in TEN WORDS. These Moses writes on Two Tables of Stone. He remains forty days in the Mount with Yahweh.

xxxii. 25-9². . . . The people having rebelled, the Levites massacre 3,000, and receive the priesthood as their reward.

xxxiii. 1-4. Yahweh refuses to go up with them to Canaan.

xxxiii. 12-23, xxxiv. 6-9. Yahweh promises that His Presence shall go with Moses. He reveals Himself and His Character to Moses.

(b) *Contents of Elohist Document, E.*¹ The portions of this document included in Exodus are summarized below. Probably E included sections corresponding to some sections of J, but these E sections have been omitted by the Editor of JE because of their similarity to J. Words in square brackets are supplied to represent such sections. Italics are used as in the summary of J.

i. 15-22. Pharaoh bids the midwives destroy all the Hebrew male infants; when they disobey him, he charges the people to throw the male infants into the Nile.

ii. 1-10. Moses is born; when three months old he is exposed in an ark of bulrushes on the Nile. He is found by Pharaoh's daughter, who brings him up as her son.

iii (Portions²). As Moses is keeping the flock of Jethro, his father-in-law, on Horeb, God appears to him, promises to deliver Israel, and reveals His name Yahweh. He will smite Egypt with wonders until Pharaoh lets the people go. They are to borrow jewels of the Egyptians.

iv. 17 f., 20^b. God gives him a rod with which he is to do signs. Having obtained Jethro's permission [he sets out for Egypt].

iv. 27—v. 4 (Portions²). Aaron joins Moses, and they come to Pharaoh and ask for permission for Israel to hold a feast in the wilderness. Pharaoh refuses.

THE WONDERS.

vii. 15-23 (Portions²). I. The Nile turned to Blood. Moses smites the Nile with his rod; it turns to blood; but Pharaoh remains stubborn.

ix. 22-35 (Portions²). II. The Hail. Moses stretches his rod towards heaven, and hail smites all the people and cattle that are in the fields. Pharaoh remains stubborn.

x. 12-20 (Portions¹). III. The Locusts. Moses stretches his rod over the land of Egypt, and locusts devour all the vegetation. Pharaoh remains stubborn.

x. 21-3, 27. IV. The Darkness. Moses stretches out his hand to heaven, and Egypt is wrapped in darkness for three days, except in the houses occupied by the Israelites.

xi. 1-3, xii. 35 f. V. The Firstborn. Yahweh announces one final plague. The Israelites are to borrow jewels of the Egyptians. [The firstborn are slain.] The jewels are borrowed.

xiii. 17-19. God leads Israel out of Egypt by way of the Red Sea. Moses takes the bones of Joseph with him.

xiv. 7-19 (Portions¹). THE DELIVERANCE AT THE RED SEA. [Pharaoh] with 600 chariots pursues Israel. Moses lifts up his rod, the bed of the sea is left dry, and the Israelites march over, still pursued by the Egyptians². The Angel of God interposes between Israel and the Egyptians³; [the latter are drowned by the returning waters].

xv. 1-21. The Israelites praise Yahweh for their deliverance⁴.

xv. 25 b. Divine commands given to test Israel.

xvi. 4. Yahweh gives bread from heaven, with a command that a portion is to be gathered daily—to test the people.

the rock. Defeat of Amalek. Moses builds an altar to Yahweh-nissi.

xviii (Portions¹). Jethro brings Moses his wife and two sons; by his advice Moses organizes the administration of justice.

xix (Portions¹). Israel encamps at the Mount. Moses goes up to God: after certain preparations have been made, a trumpet sounds, Moses speaks, and God answers him.

xx. 18-21². The people are terrified, and withdraw to a distance, while Moses passes into the darkness, into the Divine Presence.

xx. 1. God makes the following revelations [to Moses].

xx. 2-17 (Portion¹). THE TEN WORDS.

xx. 22-xxiii. 33 (Most¹). THE BOOK OF THE COVENANT, containing laws as to Images and Altars; Hebrew Slaves; Injuries to the Person; Offences against Property; Various Ritual and Moral Offences; Festivals, &c., with a Concluding Exhortation.

xxiv. 3-8. Moses delivers these revelations to the people, and they enter into a covenant with Yahweh.

xxiv. 12-15 a, 18 b, Moses and Joshua go up into the Mount to Yahweh, leaving Aaron and Hur in charge of the people. Moses remains in the Mount forty days.

xxxi. 18 b-xxxii (Portions¹), xxxiii. 6. [God gives Moses] tables of stone, with inscriptions written by the finger of God.

In Moses' absence the Israelites induce Aaron to make an image of Yahweh in the form of a calf. They hold a festival in honour of Yahweh. As Moses descends with the tables he discovers what is going on, and in his anger throws down the tables and breaks them. He destroys the image. Yahweh punishes the people by a plague. The people put off their ornaments.

xxxiii. 7-11. The Tent of Meeting used to be pitched without the camp, and there Moses used to commune with Yahweh. Joshua was the custodian of the Tent.

(c) Contents of the Priestly Document, P.¹ The sections of this document contained in Exodus are summarized below. Some of the Secondary Sacerdotal passages, S, are added in italics; italics are also used for the headings of the Plagues.

i. 1-7. List of the sons of Israel. The Israelites multiply rapidly.

i. 13f. The Egyptians oppress the Israelites with forced labour.

ii. 23^b-25. The Israelites appeal to God. He hears them.

vi. 2-12. God reveals His Name, Yahweh, to Moses, and promises to deliver Israel. Moses tells the people, but they will not believe him. He bids Moses appeal to Pharaoh, but Moses objects that he is 'of uncircumcised lips.'

vi. 13-30. Genealogy of Reuben, Levi, Aaron, and Moses.

vii. 1-13. God replies that Aaron shall be Moses' prophet and speak as Moses instructs him. Moses is eighty and Aaron eighty-three.

THE WONDERS.

I. The Rod turned to a Serpent. At Yahweh's bidding Moses and Aaron appear before Pharaoh. Aaron's rod becomes a serpent; the magicians do likewise, but Aaron's serpent swallows up theirs. Yet Pharaoh remains stubborn.

II. All the Waters of Egypt turned to Blood, vii. 19, 20a, 21^b, 22. Aaron with his rod turns the waters of Egypt to blood; the magicians do likewise. Pharaoh remains stubborn.

III. The Frogs, viii. 5-7, 15^b. Aaron with his rod brings up frogs; the magicians do likewise; Pharaoh remains stubborn.

IV. The Lice, viii. 16-19. Aaron with his rod turns all the dust of Egypt into lice. The magicians own that this is the finger of God; yet Pharaoh remains stubborn.

V. The Pestilence, ix. 8-12. Moses scatters ashes to heaven, and they become boils on man and beast. The magicians, being afflicted with this disease, withdraw; Pharaoh remains stubborn.

VI. The Firstborn, xii. 1-20, 24, 28. The Institution of the Passover. The announcement of the coming destruction of the Firstborn. The Israelites observe the first passover as instructed.

xii. 40-2. The Sojourning in Egypt lasted 430 years.

xii. 43-50. Further instructions about the Passover.

[The Destruction of the Firstborn.]

xii. 51. The Israelites leave Egypt.

xiii. 1, 2. The Firstborn of man and beast to be dedicated to Yahweh.

xiv (Portions¹). THE DELIVERANCE AT THE RED SEA. Yahweh bids Israel encamp by the Red Sea, and sends Pharaoh in pursuit of them. He overtakes them, Moses stretches out his hand over the sea, and it becomes dry land. The Israelites cross over, and the Egyptians pursue them, Moses again stretches out his hand, and the waters return and drown the Egyptians.

xvi. 1-21 (Portions¹). Israel comes to the Wilderness of Sin. Provisions run short, and the people murmur. Yahweh sends quails and manna. Moses bids them leave nothing of one day's gathering till the next morning. Yet some is kept, and it breeds worms and stinks.

xvi. 22-30. But on the sixth day they must gather a double portion, and none on the Sabbath.

xvi. 31-5. A pot of the manna is kept before the Ark².

xxiv. 16-18*a*. The Glory of Yahweh rests upon Mount Sinai for six days. On the seventh day Yahweh calls Moses up to Himself.

xxv-xxxi. (Portions¹). Yahweh gives Moses directions as to the Tabernacle, its Furniture, the Priestly Vestment, the Consecration of Aaron and his Sons, the Sabbath, &c. He gives Moses the Two Tables of the Testimony.

xxxiv. 29-33. When Moses comes down from Mount Sinai his face shines. When he has told the people the Divine commands, he puts on a veil.

xxxiv. 34*f*. He makes a practice of wearing this veil, except when he is communicating Divine commands to the people.

xxxv. 1-3. The Sabbath is to be observed.

xxxv. 4-xl. Moses and the people carry out the Divine instructions as to the Tabernacle, &c., &c. When all the portions, furniture, &c., &c., are finished they set up the Tabernacle, and the Glory of Yahweh rests upon it.

VIII. HOW FAR AND WITH WHAT DEGREE OF CERTAINTY THE CONTENTS OF EXODUS CAN BE ASSIGNED TO THEIR ORIGINAL SOURCES.

We have explained² that Exodus was compiled from earlier works by a series of editings. None of these works survive, except so far as portions of them are contained in Exodus and other works of the Old Testament. Clearly it was a difficult task to determine from which original document or editor each section of our book was taken; indeed, it is a task which can never be fully accomplished. Nevertheless the devoted labours of Christian scholars during more than a century has accomplished much. There is very general agreement as to which portions were composed by the Priestly Writers ; and we can often assign sections with comparative certainty to the Primitive or the Elohist Document, as the case may be. But in many passages the division of the contents between the Primitive and the Elohist Documents cannot be made with any confidence. It is quite clear that certain phrases or sentences belong to the one, and that certain other phrases or sentences belong to the other, but there is a third set which might perfectly well belong to either. Hence, in many cases, the analysis given in the text, in the summary, and in the tables, where it refers to J and E, is only a probable and approximate solution of a stubborn problem, and not a certain result which has been determined with detailed accuracy. Such analysis, however, fairly represents the way in which our present book has been compiled. If we had a full knowledge of the facts, we should find that the actual process of composition had been more elaborate and complicated than is indicated by the division of the text in the present volume.

Happily the method of composition of the Pentateuch can be illustrated by a comparison of some Biblical books with others. Amongst the sources of Chronicles were sections now found in Kings, Samuel, &c. ; Matthew and Luke were partly compiled from Mark ; and 2 Peter from Jude. A comparison of parallel passages will show the use of the method which has been shown to be followed for the Pentateuch, viz., borrowing word for word, modified by editorial addition, omission, and alteration. The editorial work is fully as elaborate and minute as that illustrated by the analysis of the Pentateuch.

Take, for instance, the following passage, 2 Chron. xxxiv. 14-21. The portions in ordinary type are taken word for word from 2 Kings xxii. 8-13 ; the words in italics are additions made by the authors or editors of Chronicles ; dots indicate a simple omission of something from Kings :—

*And when they brought out the money that was brought into the House of Yahweh, Hilkiab the priest found the book of the law of Yahweh given by Moses. And Hilkiab answered and said to Shaphan the scribe, 'I have found the book of the law in the House of Yahweh.' And Hilkiab delivered the book to Shaphan. . . . And Shaphan carried the book to the king, and moreover brought the king word again, saying, 'All that was committed to thy servants, they do it. And they have emptied out the money that was found in the House of Yahweh, and have delivered it into the hands of the overseers . . . and into the hand of the workmen.' And Shaphan the scribe told the king, saying, 'Hilkiab the priest hath delivered me a book'; and Shaphan read therein before the king. And it came to pass, when the king had heard the words . . . of the law, that he rent his clothes. And the king commanded Hilkiab . . . and Ahikam the son of Shaphan, and Abdon the son of Micah, and Shaphan the scribe, and Asaiah the king's servant, saying, Go ye, inquire of Yahweh for me, and for them that are left in Israel and in Judah, concerning the words of the book that is found : for great is the wrath of Yahweh that is poured out upon us, because our fathers have not kept the word of Yahweh, to do according unto all that is written in this book.*

TABLES.

A. SYMBOLS.

The various documents, &c., are denoted by the following symbols, which are inserted in square brackets in the R.V. text, pp. 41 ff. e.g. [P], at the beginning of each section of a document. Also the document or documents from which the contents of a page were taken are indicated at the top of each page, e.g. P, or PJE, &c.

J. The Primitive Document (or Yahwistic or Jehovistic Document), see pp. 17, 19 ff.

E. The early Elohist Document, see pp. 17, 22 ff.

L. The Lyric, Exodus xv. 1-19.

R. Additions made by pre-exilic editors to either J or E; or contributions from the editor who combined J and E into a single work; or further editorial additions to the combined or Twofold Document JE, see pp. 16 f.

D. Additions made after B.C. 600 to either J, or E, or JE, by editors writing in spirit of, or under the influence of, Deuteronomy, see pp. 16 f.

These are often denoted by R^D or D².

P. The Priestly Document, or later Elohist Document, see pp. 17, 25 f.

S. Secondary Sacerdotal passages, including later additions to P (often denoted by P, P^x, &c.); contributions of the editor who combined P with the earlier documents (usually denoted by R^P); and other editorial additions from priestly hands or sources.

Remarks (a). When an incident is only found in one or more of the documents, and not in the others, it is sometimes possible that it was contained originally in the latter document or documents, but that this version or these versions of it have been omitted from the combined work to avoid repetition. Thus, for instance, J probably had an account of the birth of Moses, but this was so similar to E's account that the compiler did not think it necessary to insert any portion of it.

(b) In the following Tables B and C the items in heavy type under J and E belong to R; under P to S. The items in heavy type and in square brackets under J and E belong to D, e. g. [31 b-33], on p. 32.

These secondary sections are placed in the columns containing the primary sections with which they seem most closely connected: many of the R sections were added to J and E while they were still separate works; others were added to the combined work JE. It is not easy to distinguish between these two classes of additions.

D. THE CHIEF TEXTS AND VERSIONS¹.

Massoretic Text, often denoted by the abbreviation MT. The Jewish edition of the Hebrew text of the Old Testament. This text is derived from Jewish manuscripts not older than A. D. 800², and is the Textus Receptus or Received Text printed in Hebrew Bibles.

Samaritan Text, or Samaritan Pentateuch, the Samaritan edition of the Hebrew Text of the Pentateuch, written in a form of the ancient Hebrew character. It is derived from manuscripts obtained from, or held by, the Samaritans. These manuscripts are of uncertain date; but their claims to be very ancient are unfounded; probably they are not so old as some of the copies of the Massoretic Text. This text or Pentateuch is to be carefully distinguished from the Samaritan Version of the Pentateuch, a translation into the Samaritan dialect of Aramaic.

Septuagint. The translation of the Old Testament into Greek; the oldest manuscripts of this version belong to the Fourth Century A. D. The different books in this version were not all translated at the same time; the Pentateuch was translated first, probably between B. C. 250 and B. C. 100. This version is often denoted by the symbol LXX.

Syriac Version. The oldest extant Syriac Version was made somewhere between A. D. 100 and A. D. 300; largely under the influence of the Septuagint.

Vulgate, a revision of older Latin Versions made by Jerome about A. D. 400. The older Latin Versions were translations from the Septuagint, which Jerome carefully revised from the Hebrew.

THE BOOK OF EXODUS

REVISED VERSION WITH ANNOTATIONS

THE BOOK OF EXODUS

[P] Now these are the names of the sons of Israel, 1 which came into Egypt; every man and his household

i. THE BONDAGE IN EGYPT.

(Compiled from P, J, and E.)

N.B.—For the explanation of these and other initials see p. 29.

i. 1-5 (P). Names of the sons of Jacob, and the number of his family, seventy in all.

6 (J). The Twelve Patriarchs die.

7 (P). The Israelites become numerous and prosperous.

8-12 (J). A new Pharaoh, 'who knew not Joseph,' is alarmed at the increase of the Israelites; he subjects them to the corvée, in order to keep them in check. They build Pithom and Raamses; but continue to increase. The Egyptians are more and more alarmed.

13, 14 (P). The Egyptians oppress the Israelites by subjecting them to the corvée.

15-22 (E, except 20 which = R). Pharaoh calls the two midwives attending Hebrew women, and bids them kill all the male children that are born. They disobey him, and excuse themselves by a falsehood. God rewards them with prosperity. Pharaoh now charges his people generally to drown all male children born to the Israelites.

According to Josephus¹, the Israelites dug canals, embanked rivers, fortified cities, and built pyramids; and the Oppression lasted 400 years. The more active persecution of the Israelites was due to a prediction of a soothsayer, or according to the Targum of Jonathan, of Jannes and Jambres, that an Israelite child would be born who would bring disaster on Egypt and deliver Israel.

Sources, &c. Cf. pp. 15 ff. There are repetitions and prima facie inconsistencies which indicate that this chapter has been compiled from various documents. The enacting of forced labour from the Israelites is stated both in verse 11 and verses 13 and 14. Again, two midwives would not suffice for the mighty people

2 came with Jacob. Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah ;
 3,4 Issachar, Zebulun, and Benjamin ; Dan and Naphtali, 5 Gad and Asher. And all the souls that came out of the loins of Jacob were seventy souls : and Joseph was in 6 Egypt already. [J] And Joseph died, and all his breth-7 ren, and all that generation. [P] And the children of Israel were fruitful, and increased abundantly, and multiplied, and waxed exceeding mighty ; and the land was

described in verses 7 and 9. These and other minor points might not in themselves be sufficient to indicate composition from sources ; but as we know that elsewhere the narratives of the Pentateuch are taken from three sources or groups of sources commonly denoted by J, E, P, we may regard these repetitions, &c., as indications of the presence of two or more of these sources here. What is true of this chapter also applies to other passages where there are only slight marks of composite authorship.

Verses 1-5, 7, 13, 14 are connected with the Priestly Code, P, by style and choice of words ; and by similarity to a passage in Genesis ascribed to P¹. The Divine Name, 'God,' in verse 17 suggests the Elohistic Document, E ; and the third source, apparently present in verses 6, 8-12, will naturally be the Primitive Document, J.

This chapter, therefore, introduces us to one point, which is commonly held to distinguish the Primitive and the Elohistic Documents, or—using symbols—J and E. In J, Israel is very numerous, living apart in Goshen ; in E, Israel is a comparatively small tribe living amongst the Egyptians. Thus in verses 15-22 two midwives suffice for the tribe.

Neither the space nor the plan of this work allows us to go into detail as to the linguistic characteristics of the sources ; and we may say here once for all that the division of the text between the sources is partly based on language ; so that such statements need not be continually repeated.

2-4. The order of the names in these verses is the same as that in Gen. xxxv. 23-5, P.

5. seventy. The Septuagint has 'seventy-five,' see also the parallel passage Gen. xlvi. 27, P, where also the Hebrew Text has 'seventy,' and the Septuagint 'seventy-five.'

7. the land, i. e. Egypt.

[J] Now there arose a new king over Egypt, which 8 knew not Joseph. And he said unto his people, Behold, 9 the people of the children of Israel are ^a more and mightier than we: come, let us deal wisely with them; 10 lest they multiply, and it come to pass, that, when there falleth out any war, they also join themselves unto our enemies, and fight against us, and get them up out of the land. Therefore they did set over them task- 11 masters to afflict them with their burdens. And they

^a Or, too many and too mighty for us

8. a new king, the writer is apparently not acquainted with his name; nor does he give us elsewhere the names of any of the Egyptian kings to whom he refers. Pharaoh is not a name but a title. This feature of the book points to the conclusion that the document is separated by a considerable interval from the events it describes. On the other hand, it shows that we are dealing with genuine, simple-minded traditions, for the post-biblical Jewish literature invents names where they are lacking.

This 'new king,' the 'Pharaoh of the Oppression,' is variously identified with some otherwise unknown Rameses prior to the eighteenth dynasty, i. e. before B. C. 1587 or with Rameses II, B. C. 1300-1234¹, &c., &c.

knew not Joseph need not mean 'never heard of Joseph,' but 'had no experience or appreciation of his character and achievements,' and therefore did not take any friendly interest in Joseph's kinsfolk.

9. more and mightier than we, the R.V. marg. 'too many and too mighty for us,' i. e. 'to suit our convenience,' is better.

10. deal wisely, 'adopt a prudent policy.'

any war, the Israelites were settled in the north-east of Egypt, a frontier district peculiarly liable to invasion, and frequently threatened by the Syrian and Arabian nomads, and also by the Hittites, Babylonians, and Assyrians. Many of the Syrian tribes were nearly allied to Israel, so that its control of the frontier district was a danger to Egypt.

11. taskmasters, foremen or overseers of the corvée or forced labour. The poorer population, especially dependent peoples, like Israel, not belonging to the ruling nation, were compelled to labour on public works without pay, except food. One of the built for Pharaoh store cities, Pithom and Raamses.

12 But the more they afflicted them, the more they multi-grievances of the Israelites against Solomon was that he had exacted such labour from them, 1 Kings v. 13 ff., ix. 15 ff., xii. 4. A similar charge is brought against Jehoiakim: 'Woe unto him that buildeth his house by unrighteousness, and his chambers by injustice, that useth his neighbour's service without wages, and giveth him no hire,' Jer. xxii. 13. The Egyptian and Assyrian monuments show us gangs of labourers working under the lash of overseers; and the corvée is still an institution in the East.

to afflict them, to break their spirit and reduce their numbers. The language does not make it clear whether the Israelites were already subject to the corvée and their work was made more laborious, or whether they were now made subject to the corvée for the first time.

store cities, for provisions and equipment for the army; such dépôts would be necessary on an exposed frontier. Moreover, the Egyptian frontier was the base for Egyptian expeditions into Syria. Solomon, too, had 'store cities' for his chariots and cavalry.

Pithom. The site of Pithom is now generally located at the modern Tell el Maskhuta, west of Lake Timsah, not quite half-way between the Mediterranean and the head of the Gulf of Suez. Here, in 1883, E. Naville discovered extensive ruins with inscriptions which showed that the town was sometimes called P-atum, House of Atum, the Sun God of On or Heliopolis, and that it was built by Rameses II. The ruins included the remains of large granaries. It is chiefly on account of this discovery that the Pharaoh of the Oppression is often identified with Rameses II, whose statue has been discovered at Tell el Maskhuta. Cf. xiii. 20 on Etham, and xii. 37 on Succoth.

Raamses, a variant of Rameses. There is evidence that several towns of this name existed, most of them, at any rate, built by Rameses II. This Rameses has often been identified with Zoan or Tanis in the Eastern Delta near the Mediterranean coast; but some site nearer Pithom, e. g. Tell el Kebir, a little to the west (another identification) is more probable. At present the exact position of this 'Raamses' is uncertain.

After Raamses the Septuagint adds, 'And On which is Helionpolis,' i. e. the City of the Sun, Heliopolis, some distance to the south-west of Pithom, near the modern Cairo. On may have stood in the original Hebrew text and been omitted by accident or design; or it is possible, as has been suggested, that the addition in the Septuagint has arisen out of a gloss intended to give plied and the more they spread abroad. And they ^a were grieved because of the children of Israel. [P] And ¹³ the Egyptians made the children of Israel to serve with rigour: and they made their lives bitter with hard service, ¹⁴ in mortar and in brick, and in all manner of service in the field, all their service, wherein they made them serve with rigour.

[E] And the king of Egypt spake to the Hebrew mid- ¹⁵ wives, of which the name of the one was Shiphrah, and the name of the other Puah: and he said, When ye do ¹⁶ the office of a midwife to the Hebrew women, and see them upon the birthstool; if it be a son, then ye shall information about Pithom, which was called by the Greeks Heroonpolis. A scribe may have added after Pithom 'which is Heroonpolis,' and this may have been misread as Heliopolis, and then the gloss may have grown into the separate clause, 'And On which is Heliopolis.'

12. were grieved, because of R.V. marg., 'abhorred.'

14. service in the field, according to Deut. xi. 10 the Israelites sowed seed and watered it with their foot, i. e. irrigated the land by means of the shadoof, or some other machine equally cumbersome and laborious to work. The shadoof is still in use on the Nile. and pictures of it are found on the monuments (Erman. Life in Ancient Egypt, Eng. tr., p. 426). Various forms of water-wheels are also used for irrigation; see Driver on Deut. xi. 10.

15. Hebrew, the name given to Israelites by foreigners; see Gen. xiv. 13.

Shiphrah and Puah: the names only occur here; Shiphrah is Hebrew, and means 'beauty'; there is no certain available Hebrew etymology of Puah, but it may also be Hebrew and mean brightness. The pair are spoken of as 'Hebrew midwives,' and naturally Israelite mothers would be attended by women of their own people. Thus Pharaoh was asking the midwives to betray and murder their own kinsfolk.

16. birthstool, A. V. 'stools'; Hebrew 'obhnayim, a dual form, usually explained as referring to two stones on which the women in labour sat. The meaning, however, of the word is uncertain. It only occurs elsewhere in Jer. xviii. 3, where it is used of the two revolving discs of the potter's wheel. In any case, kill him; but if it be a daughter, then she shall live.

 17 But the midwives feared God, and did not as the king of Egypt commanded them, but saved the men children 18 alive. And the king of Egypt called for the midwives and said unto them, Why have ye done this thing, and 19 have saved the men children alive? And the midwives said unto Pharaoh, Because the Hebrew women are not as the Egyptian women; for they are lively, and are 20 delivered ere the midwife come unto them. And God dealt well with the midwives: and the people multiplied, 21 and waxed very mighty. And it came to pass, because the 22 midwives feared God, that he made them houses. And Pharaoh charged all his people, saying, Every son that is born ye shall cast into ^a the river, and every daughter ye shall save alive.

2 And there went a man of the house of Levi, and took

if it be a son, &c.: if the male Israelites were largely diminished the girls would be enslaved, and bear children to Egyptians, so that the Israelites would be absorbed in the native population.

19. lively, &c., i. e. 'full of vitality,' so that the natural function of bearing a child is performed, as the context states, easily and quickly. The clause has also been translated, 'when they are pregnant, they are delivered, &c.' Pregnancy is usually easy with women of primitive races, and is said to be so amongst the Bedouin at the present time.

21. made them houses, gave them husbands, children, and descendants; cf. 1 Kings ii. 24.

22. 'If, as we believe, this verse belongs to the same document as the preceding, Pharaoh, foiled in one attempt, tries a new method. Some, however, regard this as alternative to the command to the midwives.

ii. 1-22 THE BIRTH AND EARLY YEARS OF MOSES. (Cf. Acts vii. 19-29.)

1-10 (E). A son is born to a couple of the tribe of Levi. After being hidden for three months, he is exposed on the banks of the to wife a daughter of Levi. And the woman conceived, ²

Nile in an ark of bulrushes. There he is found by an Egyptian princess, who adopts him. First, his own mother is paid to nurse him; then he is brought up by the princess, who names him Moses.

11-15 (J). Moses, now grown up, slays an Egyptian who was ill-treating a Hebrew. The next day, attempting to reconcile two Hebrews who were quarrelling, he finds that the slaying of the Egyptian is known, and flees to Midian.

16-22 (J). There he helps the daughters of the priest of Midian to water their flock; is hospitably entertained by the priest; marries his daughter Zipporah, by whom he has a son, Gershom.

The narrative of Moses' early life in Egypt takes a familiar form. In folklore we constantly meet with the newborn child, destined to become a hero, whose life is sought by the king. The child is exposed, but is rescued in some wonderful way, and grows up to fulfil his destiny. The reader will remember how Romulus and Remus were exposed, and were suckled by the she-wolf. According to Herodotus, the elder Cyrus was ordered by Astyages, king of the Medes, to be exposed and left to die; but the herdsman, who should have carried out the king's orders, preserved the child's life and brought him up as his own son. Ultimately Cyrus became king of Persia, and defeated and deposed Astyages. A similar story is utilized by William Morris in his 'Man born to be king' in the Earthly Paradise. Similarly, we have a narrative written in the name of Sargon, king of Akkad, c. B.C. 3800, a precursor of the Babylonian and Assyrian kings, in which he says of himself: 'My mother, of noble race, conceived me and bore me in secret. She put me in a basket, and closed up the opening with bitumen. She cast me into the river, which did not flow over me [?]. The river carried me along to Akki, the irrigator, who took me up, reared me, and made me a gardener. While I acted as gardener, [the goddess] Ishtar showed me favour. Forty-five years I ruled over the black-haired race (i. e. the Semites).'¹ Cf. the story of Hadad and Genubath, 1 Kings xi. 17-22.

Later Jewish tradition freely supplemented the biblical account of the youth of Moses, e. g. Josephus, Ant. II. ix, x, tells us that the name of Pharaoh's daughter was Thermuthis, and that Moses commanded the Egyptian army in a successful campaign against the Ethiopians, and married Tharbis the daughter of the Ethiopian king. Philo (Vita Moysis, i. 5) gives details of his education in all the learning of Egypt, Greece, Assyria, and Chaldaea².

Sources, &c. At first sight ii. 1-22 seems to read all right as a single consecutive narrative ; a closer examination reveals slight prima facie inconsistencies ; see notes on verses 4, 7, and 18. Further, when we take into account the characteristics of the documents shown elsewhere, it seems probable that substantially 1-10 belongs to the Elohist document, E, and 11-22 to the Primitive Document, J, but that each section has been somewhat modified by editorial notes, e. g. the Reuel in verse 18.

Verses 1-10 are connected with E by the feature that the Israelites are not living apart in Goshen, but amongst the Egyptians, close to the Nile and the court.

Verses 11-22 are connected with J by the following features. We have the nameless 'priest of Midian' instead of E's Jethro. Instead of E's nameless 'wife and two sons' of Moses we have Zipporah and one son, Gershom. Verses 11-14, however, and part of verse 15 are sometimes given to E.

maidens walked along by the river side ; and she saw the ark among the flags, and sent her handmaid to fetch it. And she opened it, and saw the child : and, behold, the babe wept. And she had compassion on him, and said, This is one of the Hebrews' children. Then said his sister to Pharaoh's daughter, Shall I go and call thee a nurse of the Hebrew women, that she may nurse the child for thee? And Pharaoh's daughter said to her, Go. And the maid went and called the child's mother. And Pharaoh's daughter said unto her, Take this child away, and nurse it for me, and I will give thee thy wages. And the woman took the child, and nursed it. And the child grew, and she brought him unto Pharaoh's daughter, and he became her son. And she called his name ^a Moses, and said, Because I ^b drew him out of the water.

or may be due to corruption of the text. It is hardly likely that a half-sister is intended.

5. her maidens walked along by the river side: perhaps to protect their mistress from any intrusion (Holzinger).

her handmaid, her special personal attendant; the word āmā is characteristic of E.

7. his sister. When she saw that the ark was found she ventured to join the princess' attendants to see what would happen to her brother.

9. thy wages. Thus the mother got paid for nursing her own child, a feature of the story which would be fully appreciated by a primitive sense of humour.

10. he became her son: was brought up as her adopted son. The statement of Stephen, Acts vii. 22, that 'Moses was instructed in all the learning of the Egyptians,' and the similar statement of Philo, are legitimate deductions from the words 'he became her son.' As the adopted child of the princess he would receive the best education that Egypt could give.

Moses. The origin, derivation, and meaning of this name are uncertain. The Hebrew form of it, Mōshē, resembles the root māshā, 'drew'; hence the derivation in the text, which, however, is not justified linguistically; nor is it likely that the Egyptian

11 [J] And it came to pass in those days, when Moses was grown up, that he went out unto his brethren, and looked on their burdens: and he saw an Egyptian 12 smiting an Hebrew, one of his brethren. And he looked this way and that way, and when he saw that there was no man, he smote the Egyptian, and hid him in the sand.
 13 And he went out the second day, and, behold, two men of the Hebrews strove together: and he said to him that did the wrong, Wherefore smitest thou thy fellow?
 14 And he said, Who made thee a prince and a judge over us? thinkest thou to kill me, as thou killedst the Eryptian? And Moses feared, and said, Surely the thing is 15 known. Now when Pharaoh heard this thing, he sought to slay Moses. But Moses fled from the face of Pharaoh, princess would give her son a Hebrew name. In the Septuagint the name is Mōusēs, and in the Vulgate Moyses; the form Mōusēs is accepted by Josephus and Philo, and explained by them as derived from the Egyptian mō, 'water,' and ushe, 'saved,' or moū, 'water,' and se, 'taken'; a similar view has been held by some modern scholars. The name has also been connected with the Egyptian mes, mesu, 'son'; and there are many other theories.

The name is apparently not given till Moses' mother brings him back to the princess.

11. he went out unto his brethren. We should expect that Moses would have been brought up as an Egyptian; and possibly this unexplained reference to his knowledge that he was a Hebrew indicates a second source. But it might be taken for granted that he had in some way learnt his parentage. Josephus implies that his Hebrew birth was publicly known all the time.

15. Josephus omits the slaughter of the Egyptian by Moses, and states that he fled because he became aware that the king was plotting to kill him, having been moved to jealousy on account of Moses' success in an Ethiopian campaign. The statement in Hebrews xi. 24, that 'Moses . . . refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter,' may be merely based on this passage—by espousing the cause of his brethren, he deliberately forfeited the favour of Pharaoh and his daughter. But the narrative suggests that he tried to avoid any public identification of himself with the Israelites; and it is possible that Hebrews follows some lost tradition. (cf. Peake's Hebrews).

and dwelt in the land of Midian: and he sat down by a well. Now the priest of Midian had seven daughters: 16 and they came and drew water, and filled the troughs to water their father's flock. And the shepherds came and 17 drove them away: but Moses stood up and helped them, and watered their flock. And when they came to Reuel 18 their father, he said, How is it that ye are come so soon to-day? And they said, An Egyptian delivered us out of 19

he sat down by a well. The story is very similar to that of Jacob, Gen. xxix, J; cf. also Gen. xxiv. 11.

16. priest of Midian: nameless, so usually in J. In E Moses' father-in-law is Jethro. Cf. also on verse 18, Reuel, and on Num. x. 29, Hobab. The Septuagint introduces Iothor, i. e. Jethro, after 'their father.'

17. Moses stood up and helped them. Like the heroes of primitive story, he is more than a match single-handed for many opponents.

18. Reuel: Septuagint, Raguel; the name also occurs in Gen. xxxvi. 4 (which see), &c., for a son of Esau; in Num. ii. 14 for a Gadite; and in 1 Chron. ix. 8 for a Benjamite. In Num. x. 29, J, we have 'Hobab, the son of Reuel [A.V. Raguel] the Midianite, Moses' father-in-law,' where Hobab and not Reuel is the father-in-law: as in Judges iv. 11, R.V., 'Hobab the father-in-law of Moses,' where, however, Hobab is a Kenite. Perhaps too 'Hobab the Kenite, the father-in-law of Moses,' should be read in Judges i. 16, with some manuscripts of the Septuagint. Others, however, would read here, 'Cain the father-in-law of Moses,' and would regard Cain as the name given to father-in-law of Moses by the oldest tradition (E. Meyer, p. 90). In our passage Reuel seems an editorial addition or note; the name would have come more naturally in verse 16. at the first mention of 'the priest of Midian.' So too in Num. x. 29, 'Hobab, the son of Reuel,' is probably an editorial note, intended to harmonize the use of Hobab and of Reuel for the father-in-law of Moses. Probably in the original story the father-in-law was nameless, and various names were supplied as the tradition developed.

21. was content, agreed, decided.

Zipporah, the feminine form of Zippor, the name of the father of Balak, king of Moab, Num. xxii. 2, &c. These names denote 'small bird,' and may originally have been totemistic, i. e. persons so-called were named after the totem or animal deity of their tribe. Zipporah is also mentioned iv. 25, J, and xviii. 2, R. In Num. xii. 1 Moses is said to have married a Cushite, probably an Ethiopian woman; cf. Josephus's story about the Ethiopian princess. 'Cushite' can hardly be a description of Zipporah, and probably Num. xii does not belong to either the original J or the original E, but perhaps to a later addition of E. In the original E the name of Moses' wife is not given.

22. a son . . . Gershom: in E, xviii. 5 ff., Moses has two sons; cf. notes on xviii. 2-4. In P we do not read of any sons of Moses, but there is a Levitical clan Mushi, vi. 19, which probably at one time claimed to be descended from him. The explanation 'for he said, I have been a sojourner in a strange land' regards the name as compounded of ger, 'a sojourner,' and shām, 'there,' but this is popular etymology and not a real derivation. 1 Chron. xxiii. 14 ff., xxvi. 23 ff., give the names of sons of Gershom and Eliezer. In Judges xviii. 30 the priest of the sanctuary at Dan is Jonathan son of Gershom, son of Moses. Thus the priesthood of the Northern Dan traced its descent to Moses through Gershom. Probably the Levitical clan Gershon is the same family; in the final rearrangement of the genealogies it traced its descent to Levi.

that the king of Egypt died : [P] and the children of Israel

23^a (J, P). The king of Egypt dies.

23^b-25 (P). The Israelites appeal to God, who hears their cry.

iii. 1-5 (JE). As Moses is keeping the flock of Jethro on Horeb, he sees a bush which burns without being consumed; from this bush God speaks to him.

6-10 (JE). God tells Moses that He is about to deliver Israel from the Egyptians and to settle them in the land of Canaan. Moses is to be their leader.

11 (E). Moses says he is not equal to the task.

12 (E). God promises His presence. After their deliverance the Israelites will worship God on Horeb.

13 (E). Moses asks by what name he is to speak of God to the Israelites.

14-15 (RE). God reveals His name as 'I am that I am,' and declares Himself the God of the patriarchs.

16-22 (JE). Moses is to announce his mission to the Elders, and they are to go with him to the king of Egypt, to ask permission to go three days' journey into the wilderness to sacrifice to their God. The king will refuse, and will not let the people go till God has smitten Egypt with wonders. When the Israelites depart, they shall borrow jewels and clothing of the Egyptians.

iv. 1-9 (J). When Moses objects that the people will not believe him, Yahweh gives him the signs of the rod which becomes a serpent, and his hand becoming leprous. These signs Moses is to repeat before the people. If they are not convinced, he is to turn water into blood.

10 (J). Moses objects that he never was eloquent and has not become so through his interview with Yahweh.

11, 12 (J). Yahweh declares that as the Creator, He will teach Moses what to say.

13-16 (R). Moses still demurs, and Yahweh in anger says that his brother Aaron the Levite shall join him and be his spokesman.

17 (E). God gives him a rod with which to do signs.

Sources, &c. There are the usual signs of compilation and of the presence of portions of the Primitive, Elohist, and Priestly Documents. Thus ii. 23^b-25 are by common consent referred to P; iii. 16-18, iv. 1-12 to J; iii. 6, 9^b-13, 15, 19, 20, iv. 17 to E; and iii. 14 to R. Also iii. 21, 22 are usually ascribed to E. The source of some of the remaining verses, especially iv. 13-16, is not very certain. See the notes on iii. 1, 13, 15, 18, 22; iv. 2, 13-16, 17.

25. saw . . . took knowledge of them. The Hebrew text as it stands hardly makes sense. The Septuagint renders the last clause ‘and was known of them,’ i. e. ‘made Himself known unto them.’ The Targum has a paraphrase to the effect that the bondage or toil of the Israelites was manifest to Yahweh, and He promised to deliver them. Possibly this latter rendering is from a more original text, and indicates that the present Hebrew is corrupt, i. e. has been incorrectly copied.

iii. 1. Jethro, the name of the father-in-law of Moses in E ; cf. ii. 16. In iv. 18 it is written Jether, perhaps by mistake. The name is similar to a Hebrew root meaning ‘abundance,’ ‘excellence.’

to the mountain of God, unto Horeb. The sacred mountain of the giving of the Law is called Horeb in E and D, and Sinai in J and P. The Old Testament, especially in the earlier literature, specially connects Yahweh with Sinai, as apparently His home and sanctuary, e. g., in addition to the Pentateuch, Judges v. 5 ; Teman and Paran in Hab. iii. 3 are probably the district of Sinai.

Horeb. Sinai must have been somewhere in the districts to the south and south-east of Palestine ; otherwise its exact locality is matter of controversy. The early Israelite tradition placed Horeb-Sinai somewhere in or near Edom, Judges v. 4 ff. The localization of Sinai in what is now called the Sinaitic Peninsula is not older than the Exile, and may be the work of P. It is waste of time, therefore, to consider which particular mountain, Mt. Serbal or Jebel Musa, in the Sinaitic Peninsula is the Sinai of the Exodus. See further on Sinai. The words 'of God' are omitted by some texts of the Septuagint from the phrase 'mountain of God.'

2. the angel of the Lord, i. e. a special manifestation of Yahweh. In the earlier literature the phrase is often used interchangeably with 'Yahweh,' as here ; cf. verse 4. Later 'the angel of Yahweh' becomes nearly equivalent to our archangel. See also on Gen. xvi. 7.

bush, sené, some kind of thorny shrub, it is not certain which ; according to the Septuagint batos and the Vulgate rubus, the bramble. As the bramble is not found on the modern Sinai, the sené has also been identified with the acacia, on account of the superficial resemblance to sant, the Arabic name of the acacia. Probably the ancient writers would connect sené with the name Sinai. The word sené only occurs in the O.T. in this chapter and in Deut. xxxiii. 16.

5. put off thy shoes, still customary in the East as a mark of respect on entering a mosque or holy place.

holy ground. The scene of this revelation to Moses may have been an ancient sanctuary ; or the place may have been thought of as rendered holy by this appearance of God.

6. God of thy father. The phrase also occurs in God's address to Jacob in Gen. xlv. 3 ; it is a little striking here, as no stress is laid on Moses' father in E. Perhaps we should read 'thy fathers,' as in verse 15.

thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. And Moses hid his face; for he was afraid to look upon God. [J] And the LORD said, I have surely seen the affliction of my people which are in Egypt, and have heard their cry by reason of their task-masters; for I know their sorrows; and I am come down to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians, and to bring them up out of that land unto a good land and a large, unto a land flowing with milk and honey; unto the place of the Canaanite, and the Hittite, and the Amorite, and the Perizzite, and the Hivite, and the Jebusite. flowing with milk and honey, a standing description of Palestine; cf. xiii. 5, xxxiii. 3, &c., as affording abundant pasturage for flocks and herds. Possibly the honey, debbash, is grape-syrup; in Gen. xlix. 11, 12 wine is coupled with milk.

the Canaanite, &c., similar enumerations are common, and the lists are sometimes supposed to be editorial additions, where they are found in connexion with the earlier sources. Canaanite is sometimes a general term for the inhabitants of Palestine, especially in J, but properly Canaan is the lowlands, the maritime plain and the valley of the Jordan.

Hittite, a non-Semitic people, at one time dominant in Asia Minor and Syria. The reference here is to the Hittite settlements in Canaan, located about Hebron in P, Gen. xxiii.

Amorite, also often used for the inhabitants of Palestine generally, especially in E; sometimes for the inhabitants of Northern and North-East Palestine. Sihon in East Palestine is king of the Amorites, Num. xxi. 29.

Perizzite, either a tribe settled near Bethel or the inhabitants of the perazoth or open villages; cf. Gen. xiii. 7.

Hivite, inhabitants of the districts about Gibeon, Shechem, and Hermon.

Jebusite, inhabitants of Jerusalem and its district.

10. Pharaoh. See on ii. 23.

12. this shall be the token unto thee. According to R.V. the token that Moses is receiving a divine commission is that hereafter the Israelites will worship God on that mountain. This does not seem to suit the circumstances ; Moses needs some present assurance and encouragement, but this 'token' is only an added demand for faith. There is no certain explanation of the difficulty. Possibly the author forgets the circumstances of Moses, and writes from his own standpoint, from which the events of the sojourn of Israel at Sinai were a signal vindication of the claims of Moses. Some understand 'this' of the burning bush, and make 'When thou hast brought forth the people, &c.,' a separate sentence.

13. What is his name? In this, the Elohist, document, E, the Divine Name Yahweh is not known to the Israelites before the Exodus, and is now first revealed to Moses. Apparently in earlier times the Israelites are thought of as simply using the general term, Elohim, 'God.' See Genesis in this series, pp. 36, 45, 92. This passage is important because it explains the exclusive use of Elohim in the previous portions of E. Cf. the parallel passage from P in Exod. vi. 2, 3.

14. I am that I am. Hebrew, 'Ehyeh 'asher 'ehyeh. As the margins of the R.V. show, the translation and interpretation of these words is very uncertain. 'Ehyeh is the Hebrew imperfect, a most elastic verbal form, with a great variety of possible meanings. Its exact force in any particular instance must be determined by the context. Here, therefore, in two short phrases which practically have no context, it is difficult to say what the translation should be; the choice here lies, as the R.V. indicates, between 'I am' and 'I will be.' As, however, the root HYH may also mean 'become,' we must add 'I become' or 'I will become.'

Unfortunately the particle 'asher' is equally elastic; like our 'that.' it may be a relative pronoun of any gender or number, here 'who' or 'what,' or it may be a conjunction, here 'because.'

The various translations are all obscure, but they are generally understood as indicating that the Hebrew is an attempt to express the independence, the self-sufficiency, the self-consistency or the eternity of God, and the idea that the nature and attributes of God transcend thought and language.

Thus 'I am that I am,' God is an ultimate fact; He cannot be explained by anything else, but only by Himself. And, again, 'I am—always—that which I am—now, and always have been,' as in the New Testament, 'Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever.'

Then, 'I am, because I am,' there is no cause for God's existence outside of Himself.

Then, too, 'I am who am,' God is pure and essential being.

And, again, 'I will be that I will be,' or 'I become that which I will, or choose to, become'; God is lord of His own destiny.

The very vagueness and ambiguity of the words invest the Divine Name with a certain mystery which adds to its suggestiveness. At the same time, this attempt to express abstract ideas about God points to a comparatively late origin for this verse; it is more in accordance with Deuteronomy and 2 Isaiah than with J and E; so that here, probably, the verse is an editorial addition, and originally verse 15 was the answer to the question in verse 13; cf. on xvi 1.

15. moreover, probably an addition necessitated by the introduction of verse 14; 'moreover' often appears to be an indication of the presence or neighbourhood of an editorial addition, or of the combination of short portions of different sources.

The LORD. In Hebrew YHWH, the personal name of the God of Israel. The vowels are not given in the Hebrew text, and the original pronunciation is not known ; the English Jehovah is not a Hebrew form, but is due to a mistake. On various grounds, amongst others the etymology in the previous verse, it is generally believed that the Name was pronounced Yahweh ; but this may have been a Hebraized form of a non-Hebrew name. The fact that the Name is also found in Hebrew and other languages in the forms Yah and Yahu is no evidence against Yahweh as the ordinary Hebrew pronunciation. See further on Gen. ii. 4.

God of your fathers. The Yahweh now made known to Israel is identified with the God worshipped by the Patriarchs.

memorial, that by which one is remembered.

the elders, of a tribe or town, were probably the sheikhs or heads of families and clans, and formed a kind of governing council, exercising a measure of local authority. The prominence given in the Pentateuch to 'the elders of Israel' is often regarded as a characteristic of the Primitive Document, J.

18. thou and the elders of Israel. Note the absence of any reference to Aaron, who apparently did not figure in J.

him, The LORD, the God of the Hebrews, hath met with us : and now let us go, we pray thee, three days' journey into the wilderness, that we may sacrifice to the LORD our God. [E] And I know that the king of Egypt will not give you leave to go, no, not by a mighty hand. And I will put forth my hand, and smite Egypt with all my wonders which I will do in the midst thereof : and after that he will let you go. And I will give this people favour in the sight of the Egyptians : and it shall come to pass, that, when ye go, ye shall not go empty : but every woman shall ask of her neighbour, and of her that three days' journey into the wilderness, that we may sacrifice, implying that they would return, a device to obtain permission to leave Egypt, another characteristic of J. 'Three days' journey' from Egypt would not bring them to Horeb ; the phrase is a conventional formula for a short journey. The God of the Hebrews is thought of as dwelling in the wilderness, the home of the people before their settlement in Egypt under Joseph and Jacob.

19. no, not by a mighty hand. This does not make sense ; Pharaoh does send the Israelites away 'by a mighty hand,' either the mighty hand of God compelling him, xxxii. 11, or his own mighty hand with which he drives them forth, vi. 1, where 'strong' represents the same Hebrew as 'mighty.' We should read with the Septuagint and Vulgate 'except by a mighty hand,' i. e. under Divine compulsion.

22. ask. This root shā'al is also found in the sense of 'borrow,' but in a different form. It is just possible that the writer has in view the death of the firstborn ; under the terror of this disaster the Egyptians might yield to the demand for their valuables, and by a grim irony this might be referred to as giving the Israelites favour in the eyes of the Egyptians. But even if we translate 'ask,' it is easier to understand 'ask as a loan.' We might connect with the request to go three days' journey into the wilderness to sacrifice. The jewels and raiment would be borrowed for the women and children to wear at the festival, on the understanding that they would come back at the end of the three days, and return the borrowed articles to their owners. If these verses are independent of J (cf. above Sources, &c.), we must imagine the Israelites making suitable pretexts. In xi. 2, and xii. 35, the people generally 'ask,' and not merely the women.

It is possible to devise interpretations which would justify the ideas of verses 21, 22, from a moral standpoint ; but it is probable that we have here an illustration of a stage of morality at which no scruples were felt as to deceiving a heathen enemy.

her neighbour. The Israelites are settled amongst the Egyptians, a feature of E.

her that sojourneth in her house. The sojourner, gēr, in later times was a foreign client or dependent of a family ; and perhaps in introducing this feature the writer is unconsciously reproducing the circumstances of his own period. It is unlikely, though not impossible, that the households of the oppressed Israelites should include Egyptian dependents. As the protection of the gēr was an imperative duty in ancient times, it is apparently felt that the sanctions of morality may be altogether set aside in the case of Egyptians.

iv. 1. behold, they will not believe me. We may perhaps understand this with the Septuagint, 'If' or 'suppose they do not believe me.' The Septuagint adds at the end of the verse, 'What shall I say unto them?' Moses' experience of his fellow countrymen after he had slain the Egyptian would suggest that they might not believe him.

2. A rod. The rod here, J, is an object operated on by the wonder-working gift, not as in E and P, a magic rod by means of which signs are wrought.

3. it became a serpent. In vii. 9-12 Aaron performs this

5. that they may believe. The construction is elliptical ; we must supply some such words as, 'And Yahweh said to Moses, Thus shalt thou do before the people, that, &c.'

6, 7. The infliction and the healing of leprosy were specially regarded as direct acts of God, so that Moses' ability to produce and remove its symptoms would be a convincing proof that he was invested with a Divine commission.

9. the river, the Nile, ye'ôr. In vii. 14-35 this sign on a large scale is performed before Pharaoh, and is successfully imitated by the magicians.

10. I am not eloquent. Cf. Isaiah's sense of unworthiness on thou hast spoken unto thy servant: for I am slow of speech, and of a slow tongue. And the LORD said unto 11 him, Who hath made man's mouth? or who maketh a man dumb, or deaf, or seeing, or blind? is it not I the LORD? Now therefore go, and I will be with thy mouth, 12 and teach thee what thou shalt speak. [R] And he said, 13 Oh Lord, send, I pray thee, by the hand of him whom thou wilt send. And the anger of the LORD was kindled 14 against Moses, and he said, Is there not Aaron thy nor since thou hast spoken unto thy servant. As Moses had been endowed with supernatural power to work wonders; he might also have been rendered eloquent.

13-16. In the J narratives Moses speaks for himself, and Aaron does not appear, e. g. vii. 16, viii. 1, &c., though in many places Aaron's name has been added by an editor, e. g. viii. 8. The position of Aaron in E is doubtful; see on xxxii; but he is not Moses' spokesman; that position is expressly assigned to him in P, vii. 1 ff. Thus these verses seem to be an editorial addition; see further on verse 14.

13. send, I pray thee, &c. A polite attempt to decline the commission; hence the anger of Yahweh.

by the hand. A conventional phrase for agency, used where the hand is not actually in question.

14. Aaron. Hebrew 'Ahārōn'; the origin and meaning of the name are unknown. Various improbable derivations have been suggested, e. g. 'illuminated,' 'lascivious,' the latter (Gesenius) is obtained from the meaning of a cognate word in Syriac, and might receive some slight support from the incident of the Golden Calf, xxxii. 25. A view adopted by many scholars is that 'Aharon' is a variant of 'aron,' 'ark'; either Aaron is the ark personified², or the name arose from the description of the priesthood of the ark as bnē ha-'aron, 'Sons of the Ark,' which became bnē 'aharon, the 'aharon being eventually understood as a proper name of a person³. In that case Aaron cannot have figured in the original tradition of the Exodus. Aaron is frequently mentioned in the the Levite here is not 'member of the tribe of Levi' in which sense Moses also was a Levite; but, as in the older literature and in Deuteronomy, 'Levite' is an official title for 'priest.' This usage was superseded by P, in which 'Levites' are temple servants inferior to the priests. The presence of the term here is very difficult; its use, as we have seen, is not that of P; Aaron is never called 'the Levite' elsewhere; and the paragraph does not fit into the original J or E (see above). It does not seem likely that there was an ancient tradition in which Aaron bore this title as priest. There is no certain explanation of the difficulty; the word 'the Levite' might be got rid of by simple omission; or by a very slight emendation of the text¹ we might read, 'Is there not Aaron thy brother? Dost thou not know, &c.' Or perhaps the addition was written soon after the publication of the Priestly Code by an editor who adopted its theory of the history, but was accustomed to the language of the Deuteronomic school.

16. he shall be thy spokesman unto the people: lit. 'he shall speak for thee to the people.' We do not find Aaron acting as Mose's spokesman to the people except in verse 30, which is probably also an addition.

as one might expect from what precedes; but rather places him on a pinnacle of solitary grandeur. In vii. 1, P, it is said that Aaron is Moses' prophet, and Moses is as God to Pharaoh.

17. this rod, wherewith thou shalt do the signs. Here, in E, the rod in the hand of Moses is an instrument for working wonders; cf. verse 2. In P the rod works wonders in the hand of Aaron. This verse may have been the continuation in E of iii. 22, or some portion of E may have been omitted in order to identify 'this rod' with the ordinary shepherd's staff of Moses in verse 2. In the original, E, Moses received a magic rod from God, thus in verse 20*b* it is called the 'rod of God.' In P the rod is simply Aaron's rod as it is Moses' in J; cf. vii. 9 and iv. 2.

iv. 18-31. MOSES RETURNS TO EGYPT.

(A narrative compiled from J and E.)

18 (E). Moses obtains permission from Jethro to return to Egypt.

19, 20*a* (J). At the command of Yahweh Moses sets out for Egypt with his wife and sons (see notes).

20*b* (E). Moses takes the rod of God with him.

21 (R). Yahweh bids Moses perform the signs before Pharaoh; Yahweh, however, will harden Pharaoh's heart, so that he will not let the people go.

22, 23 (R). Moses is to threaten Pharaoh with the death of his firstborn son.

24-6 (J). On the way Yahweh seeks to kill Moses, but is appeased by the circumcision of his son.

27, 28 (E). At the command of Yahweh Aaron meets Moses in the mount of God.

29-31 (J). Moses (see notes) delivers his message to the Elders of Israel, and performs the signs before them.

Sources, &c. Verses 21-23 or 22, 23 are often given to J, and 27, 28 sometimes to R, otherwise there is substantial agreement as to the analysis.

Verse 27 can hardly be the original sequel of the previous verses, in which Moses has left 'the mountain of God,' returned to Jethro, started for Egypt, and made some progress on his journey. In view of the nomadic character of Midian, our own uncertainty as to the geography, and the possibly vague ideas of some of the Pentateuchal writers on that subject—in view of all in law, and said unto him, Let me go, I pray thee, and return unto my brethren which are in Egypt, and see whether they be yet alive. And Jethro said to Moses, 19 Go in peace. [J] And the LORD said unto Moses in Midian, Go, return into Egypt: for all the men are dead

 20 which sought thy life. And Moses took his wife and his sons, and set them upon an ass, and he returned to the land of Egypt: [E] and Moses took the rod of God in 21 his hand. [R] And the LORD said unto Moses, When thou goest back into Egypt, see that thou do before Pharaoh all the wonders which I have put in thine hand:

these considerations we cannot say definitely that 'the mountain of God' did not lie on the way from Midian to Egypt. But it would be natural to connect the meeting of Moses and Aaron on 'the mountain of God' with the appearance of God to Moses on that mountain. Perhaps verses 27, 28 were originally the immediate continuation of verse 16, and have been transposed by a later editor.

18. Jethro his father in law. In the different authorities the spelling varies here between Jethro and Jether.

my brethren, &c. Brethren is kinsfolk generally (Holzinger). Moses would hardly think it possible that the whole nation had been exterminated. Jethro would have been alarmed if he had announced his real mission; he therefore pretends that he is merely paying a visit to his family to see how they fare. The language suggests that Moses has spent a long time with Jethro.

19. The Septuagint inserts ii. 32*a*, 'And after those many days the king of Egypt died,' between verses 18 and 19; the clause would be a suitable introduction to verse 19. It seems probable that verses 19, 20*a* in the original J followed ii. 23*a* and preceded the appearance of Yahweh in the Burning Bush, which would then take place as Moses was on his way to Egypt.

20. his sons. Read 'his son': in J, ii. 22, and in this immediate context in verse 25, Moses has only one son. In view of xviii. 2-4, E, the alteration to 'sons' would be very natural.

rod of God: cf. verses 2 and 17.

21. In verses 1-12 Moses is bidden perform the signs before the people, which he does in verse 30. But in vii. 8 foll. he also performs them before Pharaoh. This verse was probably inserted by an editor to prepare the way for the second performance.

but I will ^aharden his heart, and he will not let the people go. And thou shalt say unto Pharaoh, Thus saith the ²² LORD, Israel is my son, my firstborn: and I have said ²³ unto thee, Let my son go, that he may serve me; and thou hast refused to let him go: behold, I will slay thy ²⁴ son, thy firstborn. [J] And it came to pass on the way

I will harden his heart: a point constantly insisted on in Exodus. Pharaoh's stubbornness was necessary in order that God may fully display His power. It is not really a prolonged contest between God and Pharaoh; God might have compelled the king to give way at once, he only persists in his refusal because God hardens his heart. On the theological difficulty cf. Introduction, p. 5.

22, 23 can hardly belong to either J or E at this point of the story; they have no connexion with the context. But they may have belonged to a later stage of J, e. g. xi. 4, and have been transferred here by the editor; or they may be a later addition: the editor seems anxious to make Moses' instructions complete by including references to the leading points in the history of the sequel. It is curious, however, that the words 'I will slay thy son, thy firstborn' are immediately followed by Yahweh's attempt to slay Moses' firstborn; it is possible that the presence of these verses here is due to some confusion between the two slayings of the firstborn.

22. Israel is my son, my firstborn: a familiar idea in the Old Testament, Deut. xxxii. 6; Isa. i. 2; Jer. xxxi. 9; Hos. ii. 1.

24-6. This incident is strange and unexpected. Why should Yahweh seek to kill the man whom He has just called to be the deliverer of His people? Apparently because he has failed to circumcize his son; but this explanation does not seem adequate. If the omission was a crime deserving death, why had Yahweh chosen the culprit as His agent? The narrative must belong to tradition so ancient that even the author of the Primitive Document did not fully understand its original meaning; he probably introduced it in connexion with his theory of the origin of circumcision, to prepare the way for Joshua v. 2, 3¹. Originally the story had nothing to do with the context in which it now stands.

This struggle in the night between Zipporah and Yahweh is at the lodging place, that the LORD met him, and sought 25 to kill him. Then Zipporah took a flint, and cut off the foreskin of her son, and ^a cast it at his feet ; and she said, a parallel to the wrestling of Jacob by night with Elohim at Penuel ; see on Gen. xxxii.

The story was no doubt connected with an ancient theory of circumcision, but with a theory that J did not endorse, and has obscured by omissions and alterations. We have not ventured to attempt a complete reconstruction of the ancient story ¹.

24. the lodging place, lit. 'the place where one spends the night,' used Gen. xlii. 27, xliii. 21, of the first halting-place of Joseph's brethren after leaving Egypt. It might mean a khan, or resting-place for travellers, chiefly an enclosed courtyard ; but it seems more likely that here it is simply a camping-ground.

a flint. Cf. the flint knives for circumcision in Josh. v. 2, 4 ; the use of flint knives was doubtless a survival of primitive ritual. In Egypt flint knives were used for circumcision and other ceremonial purposes.

cast it at his feet, we should rather follow the literal rendering of R.V. marg., 'made it touch His feet,' i. e. she touched with it the person of Yahweh, and the touch was a magic spell which made Him relinquish His purpose of slaying Moses. Probably at one time circumcision was regarded as a spell which protected a new-born child from hostile spiritual powers. Probably 'made to touch His feet' means the same as 'touched the hollow of His thigh,' in Gen. xxxii. 25 ; 'made to touch,' and 'touched' are the same in the consonantal text. We have pointed out in the notes on Gen. xxxii that, in the original story, Jacob touches the hollow of the thigh of the Elohim with whom he contends, and thus overcomes Him. But as there the Penta-teuchal writers have partly reversed the relations of the antagonists, so here also they probably understood 'his feet' as the feet of Moses. This view is also taken by many modern scholars ; e. g. Baentsch supposes that Yahweh was angry because both Moses and his son were uncircumcized, and that the 'touching' of Moses symbolically included him in the rite, so that the circumcision of the son was accepted for both. The narrative is often understood as explaining how the more primitive custom of circumcizing adults before marriage was changed to the circumcizing of children.

Surely a bridegroom of blood art thou to me. So he let ²⁶ him alone. Then she said, ^a A bridegroom of blood art thou, because of the circumcision.

[E] And the LORD said to Aaron, Go into the wilder- ²⁷ ness to meet Moses. And he went, and met him in the mountain of God, and kissed him. And Moses told ²⁸ Aaron all the words of the LORD wherewith he had sent him, and all the signs wherewith he had charged him.

[J] And Moses [R] and Aaron [J] went and gathered ²⁹ together all the elders of the children of Israel: [R] and ³⁰ Aaron spake all the words which the LORD had spoken unto Moses, [J] and did the signs in the sight of the a bridegroom of blood. In the original story this would refer to Yahweh in the first instance, and probably be transferred to human bridegrooms. The original no doubt made it clear how it applied to Yahweh, but J has judiciously suppressed the explanation¹, intending that the phrase should be applied to Moses. The 'blood' is that due to circumcision; and the phrase was understood as 'the bridegroom who was the cause of the shedding of that blood.'

^a Or, A bridegroom of blood in regard of the circumcision

26. he let him alone: Yahweh refrained from slaying Moses.

A bridegroom of blood art thou, because of the circumcision, rather as R.V. marg., 'A bridegroom of blood in regard of the circumcision,' or 'A bridegroom of circumcision-blood,' an explanation of 'A bridegroom of blood.' The longer phrase was probably derived from the ancient ritual of circumcision.

27. Aaron. Even if 'Aaron thy brother the Levite' belongs, as some hold, to the ancient tradition, the introduction of Aaron is abrupt, and the information about him meagre in the extreme. Possibly something has been omitted in the compilation.

29, 30. From a comparison with other passages of J in which Moses speaks for himself, e. g. v. 22, viii. 1, 9, &c., it seems that here and elsewhere Aaron's name in J is an addition of the editor; here, for instance, the combination with verses 27, 28 would almost necessitate the insertion. Verses 29-31 narrate the fulfilment of the command given in iii. 16 foll., where there is no mention of Aaron.

v. 1—vi. 1. UNSUCCESSFUL APPEAL TO PHARAOH.

v. 1, 2 (E). Moses and Aaron request permission to hold a feast in the wilderness ; Pharaoh refuses.

3 (J). [Moses and the Elders] (see note) request permission to go three days' journey into the wilderness to sacrifice to Yahweh.

4 (E). The king of Egypt reproaches Moses and Aaron with encouraging the Israelites to neglect their work.

5 (J). Pharaoh reproaches [Moses and the Elders] with encouraging the Israelites to neglect their work.

6-9 (J). Pharaoh bids the taskmasters compel the Israelites to find their own straw, and yet make the same tale of bricks as before.

10-14 (J). The taskmasters obey ; when the tale of bricks is not made up, the Israelite foremen are beaten.

15-19 (J). The foremen appeal in vain to Pharaoh.

20-vi. 1 (J). The foremen reproach Moses' who appeals to Yahweh. Yahweh promises deliverance.

Sources, &c. These verses are shown to be a later addition by the fact that they interrupt the sequence of the story.

It should be noted that some of the names indicate clans, and not individuals ; e. g. Mushi, the Mushites or Mosesites, apparently a clan which once traced its descent to Moses. Some of the names are connected with places, and indicate Levitical clans dwelling there ; e. g. Hebron and Libni, the men of Libnah. Many of the names, too, were current amongst the Levites or elsewhere at various periods of the history, including the time after the Exile. These features indicate that the genealogy more or less represents the Levitical families and their relationships after the Exile.

The possible presence of Egyptian names—Assir, Putiel, Phinchas, may indicate an Egyptian influence upon the priesthood of Jerusalem.

The writer has taken the beginning of Gen. xlvi. 8 ff. and expanded the section on Levi from Numbers. He probably only retained the verses on Reuben and Simeon for the sake of an introduction, his object being to give a genealogy of Moses and Aaron.

Verses 14-16 a are substantially a repetition of Gen. xlvi. 8 a-11, which see.

22 sons of Izhar ; Korah, and Nepheg, and Zichri. And Verses 16-19, 20 consist of Num. iii. 17-20, xxvi. 59, P, with the lengths of the lives added. In Numbers Jochebed is clearly intended to be the actual daughter, not merely the descendant of Levi. In Lev. xviii. 12, xx. 19 the marriage of an aunt and nephew is forbidden ; accordingly in the Septuagint here Amram is Jochebed's cousin, and this may have been the original reading (Cheyne, EB.). The 'Jo' in Jochebed is probably a contraction for 'Yahweh,' so that the name means 'Yahweh is my glory.' If so, we are confronted with the difficulty that Moses' mother bears a name compounded from a Divine name which, according to P, was first revealed to Moses. Jochebed, however, only occurs in these two passages, both of which are from additions to P ; and an editor supplementing P may have forgotten P's theory on this point.

20. Aaron and Moses, as if Aaron were the firstborn, in contradiction to ii. 1, 2. In vii. 7 Aaron is the elder brother.

21. Korah, identified in Num. xvi. 1 with one of the leaders of a rebellion against Moses, who was slain for his insubordination. To remove any difficulty as to the genealogies, a late note, Num. xxvi. 11, states that his children did not perish with him. See further on Num. xvi, xxvi.

Nepheg, not mentioned elsewhere ; also the name of a son of David, 2 Sam. v. 15.

Zichri, not mentioned elsewhere, but occurs as the name of several other persons, some of them priests or Levites. It may be a contraction for Zechariah.

the sons of Uzziel ; Mishael, and Elzaphan, and Sithri. And Aaron took him Elisheba, the daughter of Amminadab, the sister of Nahshon, to wife ; and she bare him Nadab and Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar. And the sons of Korah ; Assir, and Elkanah, and Abiasaph ; these are the families of the Korahites. And Eleazar Aaron's son took him one of the daughters of Putiel to wife ; and Mishael and Elzaphan figure in the narrative in Lev. x. 4. There is a Levite Mishael in Neh. viii. 4, and one of Daniel's companions, better known as Meshek, was named Mishael. Elzaphan also occurs in Num. iii. 30, 1 Chron. xv. 8, and perhaps 2 Chron. xxix. 13. There was also a prince of Zebulun of that name, Num. xxxiv. 25.

Sithri, only mentioned here.

23. Elisheba, the daughter of Amminadab, the sister of Nahshon. Elisheba is only mentioned here. In Num. i. 7, &c., Nahshon the son of Amminadab is prince of the tribe of Judah. According to Gen. xlvi. 12, Ruth iv. 20 we have the genealogy—Judah, Pharez, Hezron, Ram, Amminadab, Nahshon. Thus Aaron's wife is the sixth generation from Jacob (not counting Jacob himself) ; but from this section we get for Aaron—Jacob, Levi, Kohath, Amram, Aaron—only four generations. The care given here to the wives and children of Aaron and Eleazar, and the absence of any reference to the family of Moses, seems to imply that, according to this writer, Moses had no wife.

Nadab and Abihu, slain by Yahweh for offering strange fire, Lev. x. 1, 2.

Eleazar, Aaron's successor ; in Exod. xviii. 4, E, Moses has a son Eliezer, practically the same name.

Ithamar. A priestly family, tracing its descent to Ithamar, existed after the Exile, Ezra viii. 2.

24. Assir only occurs in the genealogies here and 1 Chron. vi. 22. In 1 Chron. vi. 23, 37 there is an Assir, son of Abiasaph ; and Jeconiah is called Assir, 1 Chron. iii. 17 R.V. marg. The name has been connected with the Egyptian Osiris.

Elkanah, only mentioned elsewhere 1 Chron. vi. 23. The name occurs as that of several individuals, three or four of whom are Levites.

Abiasaph, only mentioned elsewhere in 1 Chron. vi. 23, 37, ix. 19, where the name is given as Ebiasaph.

25. Putiel, only mentioned here. As pt is often an element in Egyptian names, Potipher, Potiphera, &c., the name has been supposed to be Egyptian. The document may originally have she bare him Phinehas. These are the heads of the fathers' houses of the Levites according to their families.

preserved more information about Putiel, or he may have figured in the traditions of the priestly families; and the names may have been sufficiently well known amongst them to need no explanation.

Phinehas, the successor of Eleazar as High Priest, often explained as an Egyptian word meaning 'negro,' 'brown men,' or 'men of dark complexion.' The name also occurs for a son of Eli, and for the father of an Eleazar, a priest who returned with Ezra.

26, 27. These verses explain the object of the preceding genealogy. We might paraphrase, 'Please observe that the preceding section gives the family history of Aaron and Moses, the deliverers of Israel.'

27. These are that Moses and Aaron. Probably a note inserted later than the rest of verses 26, 27, in order to restore Moses to his proper pre-eminence. The annotator had observed the unusual order 'Aaron and Moses,' and added these words by way of correction. A similar note, 'This is that Dathan and Abiram,' &c. is added to Num. xxvi. 9.

Thou shalt speak all that I command thee: 2 and Aaron thy brother shall speak unto Pharaoh, that he let the children of Israel go out of his land. And 3 I will harden Pharaoh's heart, and multiply my signs and my wonders in the land of Egypt. But Pharaoh will 4 not hearken unto you, and I will lay my hand upon Egypt, and bring forth my hosts, my people the children of Israel, out of the land of Egypt by great judgements. And the Egyptians shall know that I am the LORD, when 5 I stretch forth mine hand upon Egypt, and bring out the children of Israel from among them. And Moses and 6 Aaron did so; as the LORD commanded them, so did they. And Moses was fourscore years old, and Aaron fourscore 7 and three years old, when they spake unto Pharaoh.

6. as Yahweh commanded them, so did they: a favourite phrase of P; cf. verse 10, xii. 28, &c.

7. This verse illustrates P's fondness for chronology and statistics. Aaron is older than Moses, as in vi. 20-6, but in contradiction to ii. 1.

vii. 8-13. THE SIGN OF THE ROD THAT BECAME A SERPENT.

8, 9. Yahweh bids Moses meet Pharaoh's demand for a wonder by directing Aaron to cast his rod down before Pharaoh that it may become a 'serpent.'

9 saying, When Pharaoh shall speak unto you, saying, Shew a wonder for you : then thou shalt say unto Aaron, Take thy rod, and cast it down before Pharaoh, that it
 10 become a ^aserpent. And Moses and Aaron went in unto Pharaoh, and they did so, as the LORD had commanded : and Aaron cast down his rod before Pharaoh 11 and before his servants, and it became a serpent. Then Pharaoh also called for the wise men and the sorcerers : and they also, the ^bmagicians of Egypt, did in like 12 manner with their ^cenchantments. For they cast down every man his rod, and they became serpents : but 13 Aaron's rod swallowed up their rods. And Pharaoh's

11. wise men . . . sorcerers . . . magicians, may be three different names for the same class according to different views or forms of their art ; or wise men and sorcerers may denote two different classes of magicians. With 'wise men' cf. our 'wizard' and 'wise women.' The root of 'sorcerer,' K Sh Ph, is found in the same sense in Assyrian. It is sometimes explained as meaning originally 'cut,' either 'cut oneself,' like the prophets of Baal, or cut up herbs, &c., for a magic potion.

In 2 Tim. iii. 8 there are only two magicians who withstood Moses, viz. Jannes and Jambres. The names were no doubt derived from Jewish tradition ; they are found in various forms in the Jerusalem Targum, the Talmud, and other Jewish literature, but are not given by Josephus or Philo.

vii. 14—xii. 30. THE TEN PLAGUES.

To the modern Christian 'the Ten Plagues' are a well-defined whole, and he is inclined to think of the narrative concerning them as complete and distinct from what precedes and follows. But this narrative, or rather these narratives, are not so marked off in Exodus. We pass from the Sign of the Rod that became a serpent to the First Plague by a perfectly easy transition, and the story of the Tenth Plague is interwoven with the institution of the Passover, and the preparations for departure ; and we pass from these matters without a break to the actual departure. As 'ten' is a round number, and fairly common, the editor of the Pentateuch probably arranged to have Ten Plagues ; but the later inspired writers were not interested in the number ; 'the Ten Plagues' is not a Scriptural phrase.

Moreover, the number did not belong to any ancient tradition, it only arises in the editing of the complete Pentateuch. Taking, in the first instance, the present arrangement of the text, just as it stands, we get the following table, showing which plagues were present in which sources :—

J.	E.	P.
1. Nile smitten.	Nile turned to Blood.	Nile turned to Blood.
2. Frogs.	—	Frogs.
3. —	—	Lice.
4. Flies.	—	—
5. Murrain.	—	—
6. —	—	Boils and Blains.
7. Hail.	Hail.	—
8. Locusts.	Locusts.	—
9. —	Darkness.	—
10. Firstborn.	Firstborn.	Firstborn.

But if the reader will refer to the detailed notes on the various plagues, he will find that there are strong grounds for believing that P's Lice is only another version of J's Flies, we might call them both Vermin ; that J's Murrain is a variant of P's Boils and Blains, we might put Pestilence ; and that the section of J at present connected with E's Darkness had nothing whatever to do originally with any such plague, there being no Darkness in J.

15 is ^astubborn, he refuseth to let the people go. [E] Get ^a Heb. heavy.

Our table, therefore, would have to be modified as follows:—

J.	E.	P.
		[Rod and Serpent.]
1. Nile smitten.	Nile turned to Blood.	Nile turned to Blood.
2. Frogs.	—	Frogs.
3. Vermin.	—	Vermin.
4. Pestilence.	—	Pestilence.
5. Hail.	Hail.	—
6. Locusts.	Locusts.	—
7. —	Darkness.	—
8. Firstborn	Firstborn.	Firstborn.

We cannot be sure that all the E material has been preserved, and, on the other hand, we are not quite sure that he had an account of the Death of the Firstborn, though it is very difficult to believe that it was absent from his narrative; cf. on xii. 21-7.

Taking our second table, we have five plagues each in E and P, and seven in J. Probably P reckoned the plagues as signs, and included the Rod and Serpent, making six.

The three writers have strongly marked characteristics both in phraseology and as to the machinery, so to speak, of the Plagues.

The formula of the Primitive writer, J, is as follows:—

And Yahweh said unto Moses . . . tell him [Pharaoh] . . . Thus saith Yahweh, The God of the Hebrews hath sent me unto thee, saying, Let my people go that they may serve me . . .

vii. 14, 16 (viii. 1), 20, ix. 1, 13 f., x. 1-3.

If thou refuse to let them go, I will . . . to-morrow . . .

viii. 2, 21, ix. 1, 17, x. 4.

. . . and Yahweh did so . . .

viii. 10, 23, ix. 5, 18, x. 4.

. . . and Pharaoh called for Moses and said, Intreat Yahweh . . . and Moses went out from Pharaoh and intreated Yahweh, and Yahweh did according to the word of Moses . . .

viii. 24, ix. 6.
viii. 8, 12, 13, (ix. 27),
x. 16, 18.

But Pharaoh hardened his heart and did not let the people go.

(viii. 15) 32, ix. 7, 34.

The formula of the Elohist Writer, E, is as follows:—

And Yahweh said unto Moses, Stretch out thine hand toward heaven, that there may be . . .

ix. 22 (x. 12), x. 21.

thee unto Pharaoh in the morning ; lo, he goeth out

And Moses stretched forth his rod¹ towards heaven [over the land of Egypt]. (vii. 20 b). ix. 23 a, x. 13 a, 22.

The formula of the Priestly writer, P, is as follows : —

And Yahweh said unto Moses, Say unto Aaron, Stretch forth [thine hand with] thy rod . . . (vii. 8, vii. 19, viii. 5, 16.

And Aaron stretched out his hand . . . (vii. 10), viii. 16, 17.

And the magicians did in like manner with their enchantments . . . vii. 11, vii. 22, viii. 7, 18.

And Pharaoh's heart was hardened², and he hearkened not unto them ; as Yahweh had spoken. vii. 13, vii. 22 (viii. 15 b), 19 (ix. 12).

Apart from phraseology, the main difference is in the way in which the plagues are brought about. In J they are the direct work of Yahweh, for the most part, apparently, by natural means ; the river swarms with frogs, and later on they die, viii. 1, 13 ; the flies come and go, viii. 21, 31 ; a murrain falls upon the cattle, ix. 6 ; there is a hail, ix. 23 ; an east wind brings the locusts and a west wind takes them away, x. 13, 19. The supernatural character of the plagues appears from their unprecedented severity, ix. 18, 24, x. 6, 14, xi. 6 ; and from the fact that they happen at a time fixed by Yahweh and announced by Moses.

In E the plagues come when Moses stretches out his rod.

In P Aaron stretches out his rod.

Other peculiarities are the exemption in J of the land of Goshen, the settlement of the Israelites. Also in P the competition of magicians with Aaron.

As has already been pointed out in connexion with J, the Plagues are in themselves natural phenomena, their supernatural character appears from the circumstances under which they come and go, and from their extreme severity. Even the changing of the water into blood is usually illustrated by the fact that between June and August the Nile turns to a dull red, owing to the presence of vegetable matter. However, the actual changing to blood as in E and P would not be a natural phenomenon. In J's account of the First Plague, apparently, the water does not change to blood, but becomes polluted so that the fishes die. But even in J there is the Sign of the water changing to blood, but only a small quantity is affected.

Cf. note on ix. 22.

² The word for 'harden' in J is from the root KBD, lit. 'be heavy' ; in E and P, from the root HZQ.

unto the water ; and thou shalt stand by the river's brink

The Editor has mainly relied upon J, and has generally used his narratives, supplementing them from E and P, but portions of J have been omitted. Only fragments of E are preserved.

If we had J by itself in its original form we should have a dramatic story of great literary value. Though, like Homer and other ancient epical poets, he has his formulae, yet he is not hampered by them, but uses them with complete freedom. Note, for instance, the growing impression made on Pharaoh by the Plagues. Nothing is said about the effect of the pollution of the Nile, but the frogs extort from Pharaoh a promise of release, which he promptly repudiates when they are taken away, having had no intention of keeping it. When the Flies come he endeavours to make a serious bargain ; they shall sacrifice 'in the land' ; eventually he agrees to let them go into the wilderness, but not far. After the Murrain, the cattle being dead beyond recall, he does not offer any terms. After the Hail he agrees without discussion to let them go at once. But when the Locusts are only threatened he tries to make terms, and afterwards expresses much contrition ; and if the view taken in the notes on xi. 21-27 be correct, after the locusts had been removed and before another plague was threatened, Pharaoh offered to fulfil his promise with some limitations.

If we attempt to construct a chronology of the plagues from the various indications of time, they might seem to extend from the summer, between June and August, to the following Easter. But the absence of any direct statements shows that the Editor was not concerned with any chronological scheme ; and the original documents imply that they happened within a few days, therefore shortly before Easter. J mentions an interval of seven days between the First and Second Plagues, otherwise they seem to happen in quick succession. The only note of time in E is 'three days' of darkness ; whereas in P the Plagues are signs, and P's narrative as it stands is quite capable of the interpretation sometimes put upon it, that the Plagues are wrought one after another, in a single audience before Pharaoh. P refers to the Death of the Firstborn, but his account of the actual event has been omitted in favour of J's.

In Ps. lxxviii. 44-51, we have a list of the Plagues thus :—
(1) Rivers turned to Blood, (2) Flies, (3) Frogs, (4) Locusts¹, (5) Hail, (6) Pestilence, (7) Death of the Firstborn.

The plagues enumerated are those of J, though in a different order.

In Ps. cv. 26-36 we have (1) Darkness, (2) Water turned to Blood, (3) Frogs, (4) Flies, or Lice, (5) Hail, (6) Locusts, (7) Firstborn.

Again the order is changed, and the Murrain and the Boils and Blains are omitted. From the structure of the poem 'Flies' and 'Lice' are equivalents, so that again there are seven plagues¹. As these psalms only make a selection of the incidents of the history, we cannot be sure that they were only acquainted with the plagues they mention ; but they show a tendency to reckon seven plagues as if the number ten for these were either unknown or not commonly accepted².

vii. 14-24. THE FIRST PLAGUE. THE WATER TURNED TO BLOOD.

(A narrative compiled from J, E, and P.)

14 (J). Yahweh's instructions to Moses.

15 (E). Moses with his rod is to meet Pharaoh.

16, 17^a (J). Yahweh's instructions to Moses. He, Yahweh, will smite the river.

17^a (E). Moses is to turn the waters of the Nile to blood by smiting them with his rod.

18 (J). The fish in the Nile will die, so that the water will not be fit to drink.

19, 20^a (P). Yahweh instructs Moses that Aaron is to stretch his rod over all the waters of Egypt and turn them to blood. Moses and Aaron carry out these instructions.

20^b (E). [Moses] smites the Nile with his rod and turns its water to blood.

21^a (J). The fish in the Nile die, so that the water is not fit to drink.

21^b, 22 (P). All the water in Egypt is turned into blood. The magicians also turn water to blood, and Pharaoh continues stubborn.

23 (E). Pharaoh continues stubborn.

24 (J). The Egyptians get water by digging.

Sources, &c. There are two complete sets of instructions, 14-18, JE ; 19, 20^a, P. There are different views as to the details of the Plague. In J Yahweh Himself smites the Nile, so that the fish die, and the water is not fit to drink.

In E Moses smites the Nile with his rod, and the water of the Nile becomes blood.

In P Aaron stretches out his rod over all the waters of Egypt, and they become blood.

P's and J's narratives seem complete, but parts of E have been omitted, their place being supplied by material from J. Thus E's 17 b 'with the rod, &c.,' is inserted after J's 17 a '. . . I will smite,' so that the corresponding words in E become unnecessary and are omitted.

15. which was turned to a serpent. E does not seem to have narrated the turning of the rod into a serpent, so that probably these words are a later addition.

17. In this thou shalt know that I am Yahweh. The marvels wrought in the name of Yahweh will teach Pharaoh His nature and power.

behold, I will smite with the rod that is in mine hand. If this were a single, straightforward narrative, and not a compilation, we should suppose that Yahweh was still the speaker; but that is impossible; we read nothing of a rod in Yahweh's hand. We might put a full stop at the second Yahweh, and make 'Behold, &c.' the words of Moses; but then Yahweh's sentence is left unfinished, 'this' is not defined.

The combination of the sources has not been quite successful; originally E's account at this point ran somewhat as follows, (15 b) 'the rod thou shalt take in thine hand, and thou shalt say to Pharaoh, &c., &c., and (17 b) thou shalt smite with the rod that is in thine hand, &c.'

become blood ; and there shall be blood throughout all the land of Egypt, both in vessels of wood and in vessels of stone. And Moses and Aaron did so, as the LORD 20 commanded ; [E] and he lifted up the rod, and smote the waters that were in the river, in the sight of Pharaoh, and in the sight of his servants ; and all the waters that were in the river were turned to blood. [J] And the 21 fish that was in the river died ; and the river stank, and the Egyptians could not drink water from the river ; [P] and the blood was throughout all the land of Egypt. And the magicians of Egypt did in like manner with their 22 enchantments : and Pharaoh's heart ^a was hardened, and he hearkened not unto them ; as the LORD had spoken. [E] And Pharaoh turned and went into his house, neither 23 did he ^b lay even this to heart. [J] And all the 24 Egyptians digged round about the river for water to drink ; for they could not drink of the water of the river. And seven days were fulfilled, after that the LORD had 25 smitten the river.

19. vessels of stone, including pottery.

22. the magicians of Egypt did in like manner. If, as in verses 19 and 21 b, all the water in Egypt had been turned into blood, where did the magicians get water from for their magic? Apparently in P the plague was a mere transient phenomenon, and the water turned to blood almost at once returned to its natural state (Baentsch). It should be noticed that if verse 24 were taken to be part of the same narrative this explanation would be excluded.

24. Nothing is said about the restoration of the Nile to its natural state. We have accounts of deliverance from the other plagues ; clearly the Nile did not always remain either blood or full of dead fish. A paragraph about the restoration may have been omitted, or it may have been taken for granted that the flow of fresh water from the Upper Nile would cleanse the Nile in Egypt.

Yahweh instructs Moses to threaten Pharaoh with a Plague of Frogs.

5-7 (P). At the bidding of Yahweh, conveyed through Moses, Aaron stretches out his rod over the waters of Egypt and brings up frogs. The magicians do likewise.

8-15 a (J). At Pharaoh's entreaty and his promise to release the people, Moses intercedes with Yahweh, and the frogs die. But Pharaoh breaks his promise and remains stubborn.

15 b (P). Pharaoh remains stubborn.

Sources, &c. Either E had no Plague of Frogs, or his story was so similar to that of J that the compiler has omitted it. J's account of the actual bringing of the frogs has also been omitted, only P's being given. The sections from J and P present the characteristics already noted on pp. 82 ff.

J's account of the removal of the plague is a new feature.

Aaron has been introduced into verses 8 and 12 by the Editor ; he is ignored in the rest of the J portion.

2. frogs. Varieties of frogs are found both in Palestine and in Egypt. In the Bible they are only mentioned in connexion with this plague, here and Psalms lxxviii. 45, cv. 30, and in Apoc. xvi. 13, where there appear 'three unclean spirits like frogs.'

3. kneadingtroughs. The meaning of the word mas'ereh, translated 'kneadingtrough' is not certain ; it also occurs Deut. xxviii. 5, 17 and Exod. xii. 34 J, where the Israelites carry mas'erehs bound up in their clothes upon their shoulders. It is commonly explained as a shallow wooden trough or bowl, but also as a leathern-bag (DB. Art. BREAD). Egyptian monuments show dough being kneaded by the hand in a shallow bowl, and by the feet in a large tub. (Erman, pp. 189 f.)

 frogs came up, and covered the land of Egypt. And the 7 magicians did in like manner with their enchantments, and brought up frogs upon the land of Egypt. [J] Then 8 Pharaoh called for Moses [R] and Aaron, [J] and said, Intreat the LORD, that he take away the frogs from me, and from my people; and I will let the people go, that they may sacrifice unto the LORD. And Moses 9 said unto Pharaoh, Have thou this glory over me:
 against what time shall I intreat for thee, and for thy from thee and thy houses, and remain in the river only?

 And he said, Against to-morrow. And he said, Be it ¹⁰

viii. 16-19. THE THIRD PLAGUE. THE LICE.

(A narrative from P ; cf. pp. 81 ff.)

16, 17. At the bidding of Yahweh, conveyed through Moses, Aaron turns all the dust of Egypt into lice.

18, 19. The magicians unsuccessfully attempt to do the same, and own that this is 'the finger of God.' Pharaoh remains stubborn.

16, 17. smite . . . smote. In P Aaron usually only 'stretches forth his hand with the rod' ; he does not smite, vii. 19, viii. 6 ; the smiting with the rod usually belongs to E, vii. 20 ; and the presence of the words here may be due to the influence of E.

16. lice, marg. sandflies or fleas. The traditional rendering varies between 'lice' (Josephus, &c.) and some species of gnats (LXX) ; both are common in Egypt. If we adopt 'gnats' this narrative may be P's equivalent of J's Plague of Flies.

16, 17. throughout all the lands of Egypt . . . all the dust of the earth became lice throughout all the land of Egypt. The wide extent of the plague recalls P's narrative in vii. 19, viii. 5, and the parallel indicates that 'all' is literal, not rhetorical. As in vii. 22, a difficulty arises: all the dust having been turned into lice, where did the magicians find dust to experiment on ? Apparently, as in the case of the water and the blood, vii. 22, the change was only temporary ; there is no account of the removal of the lice. One text of the Septuagint omits 'throughout all the land of Egypt' in 16, 17, though it is retained in vii. 19, 21.

with his rod, and smote the dust of the earth, and there were lice upon man, and upon beast ; all the dust of the earth became lice throughout all the land of Egypt. And the magicians did so with their enchantments to 18 bring forth lice, but they could not : and there were lice upon man, and upon beast. Then the magicians said 19 unto Pharaoh, This is the finger of God : and Pharaoh's heart ^awas hardened, and he hearkened not unto them ; as the LORD had spoken.

^a Heb. was strong.

19. This is the finger of God: no mere marvel, but a real proof of a special Divine intervention. The magicians say 'God,' not 'Yahweh,' because they are not Israelites. It is not clear why the magicians could not imitate this wonder ; perhaps the changing of a rod into a serpent, of water into blood, and the production of frogs resembled feats which the Egyptian magicians were supposed to perform ; while the changing of the dust into lice or gnats was not one of their performances.

viii. 20-32. THE FOURTH PLAGUE, THE FLIES.

(A narrative from J, cf. pp. 81 ff.)

20, 21. Yahweh bids Moses threaten Pharaoh with a plague of flies.

22, 23. The plague will not affect Israel in Goshen.

24. Yahweh sends the flies.

25-31. Pharaoh by a promise to let Israel sacrifice in the wilderness induces Moses to intercede with Yahweh and obtain the removal of the flies.

32. Pharaoh hardens his heart and breaks his promise.

Sources, &c. This narrative has characteristics of J which we have already referred to, viz. the direct action of Yahweh without the intervention of Moses or Aaron or a rod ; the three days' journey into the wilderness to sacrifice ; the intercession ; the removal of the plague ; and the broken promise. There is also the location of Israel in a separate district, Goshen, and exclusion of the plague from that district. The first two plagues were specially connected with the Nile, and would naturally not touch Goshen, so that there was no need to say that Goshen was not affected.

This narrative is probably J's equivalent of P's Plague of Lice or Gnats (which see).

the morning, and stand before Pharaoh ; lo, he cometh forth to the water ; and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Let my people go, that they may serve me. Else, if thou wilt not let my people go, behold, I will send swarms of flies upon thee, and upon thy servants, and upon thy people, and into thy houses : and the houses of the Egyptians shall be full of swarms of flies, and also the ground whereon they are. And I will sever in that day the land of Goshen, in which my people dwell, that no swarms of flies shall be there ; to the end thou mayest know that I am the LORD in the midst of the earth. And I will ^a put a division between my people and thy people : by to-morrow shall this sign be. And the LORD did so ; and there came grievous swarms of flies into the house of ^a Or, set a sign of deliverance Heb. set redemption.

20. Rise up early. It is doubtful whether the Hebrew really expressly states 'early' ; cf. on Gen. xix. 2.

21. swarms of flies. A single word in the Hebrew, 'ārōbh, only used in the account of this plague and in the references to it in Ps. lxxviii. 45, cv. 31. The word 'ārōbh itself probably means 'swarm,' and here the 'swarm' is 'a swarm of flies.' The root may mean 'mix' and the word 'mixture,' hence the Vulgate 'every kind of flies.' The Septuagint translates 'dog-fly.' Philo, in his account of this plague, has an eloquent description of this 'stinging and treacherous beast,' as he styles the dog-fly.

22. the land of Goshen, the district east of the Delta ; cf. above, pp. 82 f., and on Gen. xlv. 10.

22 b. to the end, &c., probably an addition ; cf. on verse 10.

23. I will put a division. The Hebrew means literally as R. V. marg. 'set deliverance,' of which 'set a sign of deliverance' is an interpretation. As a matter of fact the existing Hebrew text does not make sense. The E. V. is a translation of the Vulgate, which follows the Septuagint. Probably instead of the pedûth of our Hebrew text, the Hebrew text used by the Septuagint had pe'ûth, 'distinction,' from the root PL, used in ix. 4, xi. 7 in the phrase 'And Yahweh shall distinguish' or 'divide between' and in a similar clause.

24. and Yahweh did so. The appeal to Pharaoh and its failure are taken for granted.

Pharaoh, and into his servants' houses: and in all the land of Egypt the land was ^acorrupted by reason of the swarms of flies. And Pharaoh called for Moses [R] ²⁵ and for Aaron, [J] and said, Go ye, sacrifice to your God in the land. And Moses said, It is not meet so to do; ²⁶ for we shall sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians to the LORD our God: lo, shall we sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians before their eyes, and will they corrupted, polluted by these unclean creatures and their carcasses, or better as marg. 'destroyed.' Josephus says men perished and the land lay uncultivated for want of husbandmen.

in the land, in Egypt or Goshen, where they would be under Pharaoh's control, and could not escape.

26. the abomination of the Egyptians. In 2 Kings xxiii. 13 we have 'Milcom the abomination of the Ammonites,' and the word for 'abomination' both here and in Kings is the same¹. Hence 'abomination' may be an Egyptian idol or deity, e. g. the Apis bull or the ram in which Amon manifested himself. But 'abomination' more often means some obnoxious object or practice, so that 'to sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians' would mean to offer a sacrifice abominable to the Egyptians. In either case it is implied that the Israelites would sacrifice animals which according to Egyptian ideas ought not to be sacrificed; and such worship would obviously not be safe. Disturbances often arise in India owing to the behaviour of Mohammedans or Europeans towards the cow, which is sacred to the Hindoos. Josephus, Against Apion, i. 26, speaks of sacred animals, for which the Egyptians had the greatest respect. According to Herodotus, ii. 41-6, the Egyptians sacrificed bulls and calves, but not cows; in some districts goats were sacrificed but not sheep, in others sheep but not goats. At Egyptian Thebes a ram was never put to death except at the annual festival of Jupiter. The Israelites sacrificed bulls, sheep, goats, pigeons, and doves, so that they stood a fair chance of

¹ Tōēbhā, but shiqqūç is more often used in such phrases, as e. g. 1 Kings xi. 5, 7, and elsewhere in 2 Kings xxiii. 13.

27 not stone us? We will go three days' journey into the wilderness, and sacrifice to the LORD our God, as he 28 shall command us. And Pharaoh said, I will let you go, that ye may sacrifice to the LORD your God in the wilderness; only ye shall not go very far away: intreat for me.
 29 And Moses said, Behold, I go out from thee, and I will intreat the LORD that the swarms of flies may depart from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people, to-morrow: only let not Pharaoh deal deceitfully any more in not letting the people go to sacrifice to the LORD.

wounding the religious susceptibilities of any Egyptian who might witness their sacrifice.

26-8. Moses maintains the fiction that the Israelites only desire a temporary leave of absence for ritual purposes, and Pharaoh professes, at any rate, to think that Moses is sincere, 'only ye shall not go very far away.'

ix. 1-7. THE FIFTH PLAGUE. THE MURRAIN.

(Narrative from J; cf. pp. 82 ff.)

1-5. Yahweh instructs Moses to threaten Pharaoh with a cattle-plague.

6, 7. All the cattle of Egypt are slain, but none of the cattle of the Israelites. Still Pharaoh is stubborn.

Sources, &c. J's 'Murrain' is perhaps the equivalent of P's 'Boils and Blains.'

still, behold, the hand of the LORD is upon thy cattle ³ which is in the field, upon the horses, upon the asses, upon the camels, upon the herds, and upon the flocks: there shall be a very grievous murrain. And the LORD ⁴ shall sever between the cattle of Israel and the cattle of Egypt: and there shall nothing die of all that belongeth to the children of Israel. And the LORD appointed a set ⁵ time, saying, To-morrow the LORD shall do this thing in the land. And the LORD did that thing on the morrow, ⁶ and all the cattle of Egypt died: but of the cattle of the children of Israel died not one. And Pharaoh sent, and, ⁷ behold, there was not so much as one of the cattle of the Israelites dead. But the heart of Pharaoh was ^a stubborn, and he did not let the people go.

murrain. The original is debher, 'pestilence,' a perfectly general term.

4. Cf. viii. 23, xi. 7.

6. all the cattle of Egypt. The 'all' may be rhetorical; but it is probably to be taken literally. Verses 19-25 are mostly from sources other than J.

7. There is no paragraph as to entreaty for removal of the plague, &c. Pharaoh would hardly ask Moses to restore the cattle to life.

ix. 8-12. THE SIXTH PLAGUE. THE BOILS AND BLAINS.

(Narrative from P.)

8-10. At the command of Yahweh Moses sprinkles ashes towards heaven, and it becomes boils on men and beasts.

11. The magicians, smitten with the boils, can no longer face Moses.

12. Yahweh hardens Pharaoh's heart, so that he remains stubborn.

Sources, &c. This plague may be P's equivalent of J's 'Mur-

Take to you handfuls of ^a ashes of the furnace, and let Moses sprinkle it toward the heaven in the sight of Pharaoh. And it shall become small dust over all the land of Egypt, and shall be a boil breaking forth with blains upon man and upon beast, throughout all the land of Egypt. And they took ashes of the furnace, and stood before Pharaoh ; and Moses sprinkled it up toward heaven ; and it became a boil breaking forth with blains upon man and upon beast. And the magicians could not stand before Moses because of the boils ; for the boils were upon the magicians, and upon all the Egyptians. And the rain.' We have several of the characteristics of P, e. g. the magicians ; Aaron, however, is not so conspicuous as he usually is in P ; his rod does not appear. Possibly P reserved the final, more important, acts for Moses ; Aaron's rod does not appear in P's account of the death of the firstborn, or the crossing of the Red Sea. It is often, however, supposed that the sprinkling of the ashes is borrowed from a parallel account, perhaps from E. Apparently this plague also is thought of as temporary and passing away of itself.

8. ashes, marg. soot. The word only occurs here.

9. shall become small dust. As the handfuls of soot are thrown up they will break up into fine dust ; this will settle on men and animals and cause an eruption.

a boil breaking forth with blains. 'Boil,' shehin, is the word used of Job's disease, Job ii. 7, and of a boil which might be leprous, Lev. xiii. 18-23. In Deut. xxviii. 27, 35 we read of 'the boil of Egypt' and of a 'boil' that attacked the knees and the legs. Hezekiah suffered from a 'boil.' Shn is said to be used in Egyptian for an abscess (Macalister, DB. MEDICINE). 'Blains' only occurs in this passage. The phrase means that the disease did not consist in a single boil, but in a number of swellings. The data are not sufficient to indicate the exact disease intended ; very probably the author thinks of a special supernatural disease, devised for this particular occasion.

upon beast. According to verse 6 all the cattle are dead. Though the words are different, they would naturally refer to the same animals. This is one of the many indications that different paragraphs are taken from different sources ; cf. further verses 19-25.

ix. 13 35. THE SEVENTH PLAGUE. THE HAIL.

(A narrative from J, supplemented by fragments from E and editorial notes.)

13 (J). Yahweh bids Moses appeal to Pharaoh to release Israel.

14-17 (R). Yahweh will now send all these plagues; He has only spared the Egyptians so far that He might manifest His power.

18 (J). Yahweh will send terrible hail.

19-21 (R). The Egyptians are to call in their slaves and cattle from the fields, that they may not be killed by the hail. Some obey, some disobey.

22, 23 a, 24 a, 25 a (E). At the bidding of Yahweh Moses stretches forth his rod, and Yahweh sends thunder, hail, and lightning. The hail smites the men and animals left in the fields.

23 b, 24 b, 25 b (J). Yahweh rains hail such as was never known in Egypt before, it smites the trees and crops.

26 (J). There was no hail in Goshen.

27-29 a (J). Pharaoh promises to let the people go, and Moses agrees to intercede for him.

29 b, 30 (R). For the glory of Yahweh, though he knows Pharaoh will break his promise.

31, 32 (R). The extent of the damage done to the crops.

33, 34 (J). At Moses' intercession the hail is stopped. Pharaoh remains stubborn.

35 (E) (R). Pharaoh remains stubborn.

Sources, &c. The main narrative here is J; verse 13 is almost identical with vii. 14, 16, viii. 1, ix. 1, 13; the land of Goshen is spared, and there are the intercession and the broken promise, and other characteristics of J. On the other hand, some verses show the notes of E; c. g. Moses brings the plague by his rod, 23 a. Moreover, J destroyed all the cattle with murrain in verse 6, and according to him the hail destroys the trees and the crops, 25 b; but in E the hail smites man and beast, 25 a. If the verses given to E are omitted, we still have a complete story. The presence of verses 14-17 make the speech too long and didactic for J, and are an editorial expansion (cf. on viii. 10), unless 17, as some think, belongs to J.

19 and 20 f. do not resemble either J or E, and are probably

 15 For now I had put forth my hand, and smitten thee and thy people with pestilence, and thou hadst been cut 16 off from the earth: but in very deed for this cause have I made thee to stand, for to shew thee my power, and that my name may be declared throughout all the earth.
 17 As yet exaltest thou thyself against my people, that 18 thou wilt not let them go? [J] Behold, to-morrow about this time I will cause it to rain a very grievous hail, such as hath not been in Egypt since the day it was founded 19 even until now. [R] Now therefore send, hasten in thy cattle and all that thou hast in the field; for every two separate additions, perhaps suggested by 25 a. Again, 29 b, 30 are an expansion similar to 14-16; and 31, 32 interrupt the connexion, and read like a note; some, however, regard them as a fragment of E. The repetition in 34, 35 indicates the presence of E, and the concluding clause is an addition based on a P formula.

30. The LORD God. Yahweh God, an unusual combination, chiefly found in Gen. ii, iii (which see), and probably never original, but always due to editors or scribes (BDB.). Here the Septuagint omits 'God,' and the Samaritan Hebrew text has 'Lord (Adonay) Yahweh.'

31, 32. The time indicated by these verses is about the end of January or the beginning of February. The barley, as is implied here, ripens earlier than the wheat. Some doubt has been expressed as to whether the wheat would still be too young to be injured by hail when the barley was in ear.

spelt, kussemeth, only occurs here and Isa. xxviii. 25, where A. V. renders 'rye,' and Ezek. iv. 9, where A. V. renders 'fitches.' The rendering 'spelt' (a kind of wild wheat) is from the Septuagint. Others regard it as a kind of vetch, the Arabic name of which is karsana; or as the divra, African millet or sorghum. The divra is known to have been common in ancient Egypt, and there is sufficient evidence of the cultivation of spelt. The identification with the 'vetch' seems to imply a knowledge of its existence in ancient Egypt, but I have not met with any express statement to that effect. Rye is not known to have been cultivated in Egypt.

X. 1-20. THE EIGHTH PLAGUE. THE LOCUSTS.

(A narrative from J, supplemented from E, and slightly annotated.)

1-6 (J) [1*b*, 2, D.] Yahweh bids Moses go to Pharaoh . . . [D. He has hardened Pharaoh's heart, that He may work signs which will become a tradition, and will reveal his nature] . . . Moses goes to Pharaoh and threatens him in the name of Pharaoh with a plague of locusts, if he will not let the people go. He leaves Pharaoh.

7-11 (J). The courtiers induce Pharaoh to recall Moses. Pharaoh offers to let the men go without their families. Moses refuses the offer, and is driven out from the presence of Pharaoh.

12, 13*a*, 14*a*, 15*a* (E). At the bidding of Yahweh, Moses stretches out his rod, and brings up over all the land of Egypt locusts, which devour the vegetation which had survived the Plague of Hail 13*b*, 14*b*, 15*b*-19 (J). An east wind covers the land with locusts, which devour the vegetation. Pharaoh calls for Moses, confesses his sin, and prevails upon him to intercede with Yahweh, who sends a west wind and takes away the locusts.

20 (E). Yahweh hardens Pharaoh's heart and he remains stubborn.

Sources, &c. As in the previous narrative, a few fragments of E, e. g. 12, 13*a*, Moses' rod, have been introduced into a section bearing the characteristics of J; cf. pp. 82 ff. Aaron has been brought in here and there by the editor, possibly from E, and there is a didactic expansion in verses 1 and 2; cf. notes. A comparison of verses 3, 6 and 7 shows that the presence of Aaron is due to the editor; Moses and Aaron went in, but only Moses came out, 'he turned and went out . . . how long shall this man

- 3 And Moses and Aaron went in unto Pharaoh, and said [J] unto him, Thus saith the LORD, the God of the Hebrews, How long wilt thou refuse to humble thyself before me ? let my people go, that they may serve me.
- 4 Else, if thou refuse to let my people go, behold, to-5 morrow will I bring locusts into thy border : and they

^a Or, How I have mocked the Egyptians be a snare?' again in 16 Moses and Aaron are called for in haste, but only Moses goes away, 'he went out.'

Nothing is said about the exemption of Goshen, it is perhaps assumed ; or a verse or two of J's account may have been omitted.

2. Cf. Deut. iv. 9 ; Joel i. 2 f.

3. And Moses and Aaron went in unto Pharaoh, and said unto him. In J's other plague-narratives Yahweh's instructions to address certain words to the king are given in full, and the repetition of the words by Moses to Pharaoh is not given, but is taken for granted, viii. 20-4, ix. 1-5. Apparently this was also the case here, and the statement about Moses and Aaron going in unto Pharaoh has been introduced in consequence of the addition of 1 b, 2.

4. locusts are still a trouble in Egypt. A number of striking accounts of swarms of locusts are quoted in G. A. Smith, The Book of the Twelve Prophets, ii. 398 ff., from which we borrow the following experience of Mr. Bryce in South Africa. Referring to a swarm of locusts, he writes, 'It is a strange sight, beautiful if you can forget the destruction it brings with it. The whole air, to twelve or even eighteen feet above the ground, is filled with the insects, reddish-brown in body, with bright, gauzy wings. When the sun's rays catch them it is like the sea sparkling with light. When you see them against a cloud they are like the dense flakes of a driving snowstorm. You feel as if you had never before realized immensity in number. Vast crowds of men gathered at a festival, countless tree-tops rising along the slope of a forest-ridge, the chimneys of London houses from the top of St. Paul's—all are as nothing to the myriads of insects that blot out the sun above and cover the ground beneath and fill the air whichever shall cover the face of the earth, that one shall not be able to see the earth : and they shall eat the residue of that which is escaped, which remaineth unto you from the hail, and shall eat every tree which groweth for you out of the field : and thy houses shall be filled, and the 6 houses of all thy servants, and the houses of all the Egyptians ; as neither thy fathers nor thy fathers' fathers have seen, since the day that they were upon the earth unto this day. And he turned, and went out from Pharaoh. And Pharaoh's servants said unto him, How long shall 7 this man be a snare unto us ? let the men go, that they may serve the LORD their God : knowest thou not yet that Egypt is destroyed ? And Moses [R] and Aaron [J] were brought 8 again unto Pharaoh : and he said unto them, Go, serve the LORD your God : but who are they that shall go ? And 9 Moses said, We will go with our young and with our old, with our sons and with our daughters, with our flocks and with our herds will we go ; for we must hold a feast

There is also a graphic description of a plague of locusts in Joel i, e. g. verses 6-10: 'A nation is come up upon my land, strong, and without number ; his teeth are the teeth of a lion, and he hath the jaw-teeth of a great lion. He hath laid my vine waste, and barked my fig-tree : he hath made it clean bare, and cast it away ; the branches thereof are made white . . . The meal offering and the drink offering are cut off from the house of Yahweh . . . the corn is wasted, the new wine is dried up, the oil languisheth.'

X. 21-9. THE NINTH PLAGUE. THE DARKNESS.

(A narrative compiled from J and E.)

21-3 (E). At the bidding of Yahweh Moses stretches out his hand and brings darkness for three days on Egypt, but the Israelites have light.

24-6 (J). Pharaoh offers to let the Israelites go, but without their flocks and herds. Moses refuses.

27 E). Yahweh hardens Pharaoh's heart, and he remains stubborn.

28 9 J). Pharaoh sends Moses away, and bids him come no more. Moses agrees.

Sources, &c. The structure of this narrative is quite different from that of the preceding; there are no Divine instructions for an appeal to Pharaoh, and no interview between him and Moses; in other words, the main framework is not J. We begin at once with the bringing on of the plague by Moses at the bidding of Yahweh, in the manner of E, except that the rod is missing, probably through an alteration of the original text (see note on verse 22).

The second part, however, 24-6. 28 ff., is a bargaining between Pharaoh and Moses in the manner of J; this time, however, Pharaoh does not give way. As the darkness was definitely for three days its removal has already been implied.

But did 24-6, 28 ff. originally belong to a J account of a Plague hand toward heaven, that there may be darkness over the 22 land of Egypt, ^a even darkness which may be felt. And Moses stretched forth his hand toward heaven; and there was a thick darkness in all the land of Egypt three days; 23 they saw not one another, neither rose any from his place for three days: but all the children of Israel had

^a Or, so that men shall grope in darkness of Darkness? If so, why should the editor in this case omit the rest of J? It should be noticed that there is a development in the bargaining in successive plagues in J. It first appears in connexion with the Flies, after the plague has been sent; it appears next in connexion with the Locusts, while the plague has only been threatened, before it has been sent. It seems natural, therefore, to suppose that in J originally 24-6, 28 ff. were the sequel to the narrative of the locusts, and that J had no Plague of Darkness, except indeed that the land was darkened by the locusts, 15 a. Thus J would represent that Pharaoh by this time has been so much impressed that, even after the removal of the locusts, he is willing to make large concessions.

According to some 23 a, 'but all the children of Israel had light in their dwellings,' is an editorial note. It has also been held that verse 25 comes from E. In one way this would remove the difficulty arising out of 25, 26; but it is hard to understand how Moses could simply ask for gifts of victims from Pharaoh, and—apparently—acquiesced in leaving their own cattle behind—unless they had no cattle in E. Elsewhere, too, there is no bargaining in E, but so little of that source has been preserved that this objection is not serious (cf. above, p. 84). It is possible that an editor has added something in 25 or 26 or both.

21. darkness which may be felt. The description would suit a London fog in November, but the condition which causes such a fog did not exist in Egypt; and the three days of verses 22, 23 exclude explanation by an eclipse. The natural phenomenon corresponding to this plague is commonly supposed to be the electric wind Khamsin, which blows for many days in the spring, and brings with it clouds of sand and dust, loading the atmosphere and darkening the sun. It usually lasts about three days. (Ryssel.)

22. stretched forth his hand. Elsewhere in E it is 'his rod,' and perhaps we should read 'rod' here. The alteration might very easily be made by a scribe in view of the 'hand' in the corresponding phrase in Yahweh's instructions.

light in their dwellings. [J] And Pharaoh called unto 2.
 Moses, and said, Go ye, serve the LORD ; only let your flocks and your herds be stayed : let your little ones also go with you. And Moses said, Thou must also give into 25 our hand sacrifices and burnt offerings, that we may sacrifice unto the LORD our God. Our cattle also shall go 26 with us ; there shall not an hoof be left behind ; for thereof must we take to serve the LORD our God ; and we know not with what we must serve the LORD, until we come thither. [E] But the LORD ^a hardened Pharaoh's 27 heart, and he would not let them go. [J] And Pharaoh 28 said unto him, Get thee from me, take heed to thyself, see my face no more ; for in the day thou seest my face thou shalt die. And Moses said, 'Thou hast spoken well ; 29
 I will see thy face again no more.

23. in their dwellings. In E the Israelites are thought of as living amongst the Egyptians, and the exemption has to be given to each house ; in J it is simply given to the land of Goshen.

24. unto Moses. The Septuagint and Vulgate add 'and Aaron,' showing how natural it was to make such an addition.

let your flocks and your herds be stayed, as a pledge of their return.

25-26. The meaning apparently is : 'Not only must we take our own cattle, but you [Pharaoh] must contribute victims for the sacrifices ; and we must take all our cattle, because we cannot tell till we get to the scene of our worship which particular cattle Yahweh requires,' the idea being that at the place of sacrifice Yahweh will indicate by an oracle the number and nature of the offerings He demands.

It would be simpler to understand the verses, 'You must also concede victims for the sacrifice, and therefore we must take our own cattle, &c.' The Hebrew as it stands can scarcely mean this, but the text may have been slightly altered.

Or, again, 25 may belong to one source, and 26 to another (cf. above, Sources).

xi. 1—xii. 30. THE TENTH PLAGUE. THE SLAYING OF THE FIRSTBORN.

(A narrative and laws compiled from J, E, and P, and freely annotated by editors.)

xi. 1-3 (E). Yahweh announces to Moses a final plague. The Israelites are to 'borrow' of the Egyptians. The renown of Moses.

4-8 (J). Moses declares [to Pharaoh] that at midnight Yahweh will slay all the firstborn of Egypt; Pharaoh's courtiers will beg the Israelites to depart. Moses leaves the presence of Pharaoh.

9-10 (S). Yahweh tells Moses that Pharaoh will not hearken, and so it happens.

xii. 1-13 (P). The Law of the Passover. Yahweh instructs Moses and Aaron thus: This month shall be the first month. On the tenth day each household is to take a lamb; on the fourteenth they are to kill it and put some of its blood on the doorposts and lintels of the house. That night they are to eat it roast, with unleavened bread, and bitter herbs. Anything left till the morning is to be burnt. Those partaking are to eat as if about to start on a journey. That night Yahweh will smite all the firstborn of Egypt, but the blood will protect the Israelites.

14-20 (S). This is to be a permanent feast; for seven days only unleavened bread is to be eaten; any one transgressing this law is to be 'cut off.' The first and last of the seven days are to be specially observed.

21-3 (J E). Moses bids the elders of Israel kill lambs for the Passover, and put some of the blood on the doorposts and lintels of the houses, and remain in the house till the morning. Yahweh will pass through to smite the Egyptians, but seeing the blood, He will spare the Israelites.

24 (P). This is to be a permanent law.

25-7 (J E). The ritual is to be observed in the Promised Land, and explained to each succeeding generation. The people reverently receive the instructions.

28 (P). The Israelites carry out the instructions given to Moses and Aaron.

29, 30 (J). At midnight Yahweh slays all the firstborn of the Egyptians. Pharaoh and his courtiers and his people arise in the night and raise great lamentation over their dead.

Sources, &c. There is abundant evidence that this section has been compiled from various sources. Moses' final defiance of Pharaoh, x. 29, xi. 4-8, is interrupted by irrelevant instructions from Yahweh to Moses about borrowing jewels, xi. 1-3. xii. 18, more will I bring upon Pharaoh, and upon Egypt; afterwards he will let you go hence: ^awhen he shall let you go, he shall surely thrust you out hence altogether. Speak now in the ears of the people, and let them ask ² every man of his neighbour, and every woman of her neighbour, jewels of silver, and jewels of gold. And ³ the LORD gave the people favour in the sight of the Egyptians. Moreover the man Moses was very great in

^a Or, when he shall let you go altogether, he shall utterly thrust you out hence

21, 22 take for granted that the people are well acquainted with matters which, according to xii. 1-20, have only just been revealed to Moses, &c., &c.

But the process of compilation and annotation has been so complicated that it is impossible to indicate at all adequately the considerations that justify the present analysis; cf. however the notes on xi. 1, 4, 9, 10, xii. 15, 16, 19, 21 f.

The section xii. 14-20 does not belong to the main Priestly writer who composed xii. 1-13, but is a later supplement; it hardly attempts to maintain the standpoint of the night of the Exodus, but gives directions for observing an annual feast according to rules which could not have been followed in Egypt.

Verses 21-3, 24-7 appear to be based upon material both from J and E. Moses deals with the elders as in J; but in 23 and 27 the people seem to be dwelling among the Egyptians, as in E. The editor has so combined, supplemented, and otherwise modified his material, that we cannot recover the original elements; but the section is certainly older than P; cf. xii. 27.

1. when he shall let you, &c. As the variation between the text and margin shows, the translation of the latter part of this verse is uncertain. The 'altogether' would refer to Pharaoh's attempts to induce the Israelites to go without their families or their cattle, so that the text would mean, 'When he does let you go, he will let you all go, men, women, and cattle,' and the margin, 'When he does make up his mind to let you all go, he will drive you out.' The latter seems preferable, and the clause 'when he shall let you go altogether' is probably an editorial note; as apparently the bargaining was not narrated by E.

2-3. Cf. notes on iii. 21 ff.

3. Egyptians. The Septuagint and the Samaritan text add 'and they lent to them.'

the land of Egypt, in the sight of Pharaoh's servants, and in the sight of the people.

4 [J] And Moses said, Thus saith the LORD, About 5 midnight will I go out into the midst of Egypt: and all the firstborn in the land of Egypt shall die, from the firstborn of Pharaoh that sitteth upon his throne, even unto the firstborn of the maidservant that is behind the 6 mill; and all the firstborn of cattle. And there shall be a great cry throughout all the land of Egypt, such as there hath been none like it, nor shall be like it any 7 more. But against any of the children of Israel shall not a dog ^a move his tongue, against man or beast: that ye may know how that the LORD doth put a difference 8 between the Egyptians and Israel. And all these thy servants shall come down unto me, and bow down themselves unto me, saying, Get thee out, and all the people that follow thee: and after that I will go out.
And he went out from Pharaoh in hot anger.

Moreover the man Moses was very great, &c., i. e. 'had a great reputation, &c.'; probably an editorial note.

and all the firstborn of cattle. All dead ix. 6; the clause is a rhetorical addition by a scribe who had overlooked the earlier passage.

7. Yahweh doth put a difference between the Egyptians and Israel: implying that this plague, like the others, will not affect the Israelites.

8. Thy servants shall come. According to x. 28 f., Moses is not to see Pharaoh again. He will not therefore be sent for to come into the king's presence as before; there will be no question of any further bargaining; but the courtiers will be sent in haste to grant all that has been asked; or perhaps they will come of their own accord, without waiting to be sent. (Baentsch.)

[S] And the LORD said unto Moses, Pharaoh will not 9 in the land of Egypt. And Moses and Aaron did all 10 these wonders before Pharaoh: and the LORD "hardened Pharaoh's heart, and he did not let the children of Israel the land of Egypt, saying, This month shall be unto you 2 year to you. Speak ye unto all the congregation of Israel, 3 9-10. These verses were apparently inserted by an editor as a concluding summary of the narrative of the plagues (Oxf.

 Hex.); the actual slaying of the firstborn and the Passover being reserved for a separate section. In ch. xii the death of the first-born is subordinated to the other topics. We might perhaps read 'Yahweh had said, &c.'

xii. 1-27. THE INSTITUTION OF THE PASSOVER; cf. Deut.

xvi. 1-8. See also Appendix

1. in the land of Egypt. This was implied by the context ; but the writer was anxious to emphasize the place of institution of the Passover. Moreover, this section would often be read as a separate lesson, so to speak, and the clause would then help the hearers to realize the situation. Most of the laws were given at Sinai.

2. This month. At first sight there is nothing to tell the reader which month is meant. Various features of the plagues show that they took place in the spring ; see on ix. 31 f., x. 21.
 The author knew that his readers would understand the month to be that in which they were accustomed to observe the Passover, viz. the month known as Abib or Nisan, about April or Easter.
 The date is given clearly later on xiii. 4.

the beginning of months . . . the first month: implying that up till now the year had begun at some other time, but henceforth it would begin in the Passover month. Before the Exile the year began in the autumn ; thus in xxiii. 16, E, the autumn or vintage feast is 'at the end of the year'; but after the Return the Jews adopted the Babylonian custom of beginning the year in the spring.

3. tenth day. Perhaps the choice of 'tenth' points to a time of reckoning by periods of ten days.

them every man a ^a lamb, according to their fathers' houses, 4 a lamb for an household: and if the household be too little for a lamb, then shall he and his neighbour next unto his house take one according to the number of the souls; according to every man's eating ye shall make 5 your count for the lamb. Your lamb shall be without blemish, a male of the first year: ye shall take it from 6 the sheep, or from the goats: and ye shall keep it up until the fourteenth day of the same month: and the whole assembly of the congregation of Israel shall kill fathers' houses, here explained as 'household,' family in the narrower sense. It is also used for the family in the larger sense, the clan.

4. if the household be too little, &c., a practical concession. If small families had been compelled to consume a whole lamb apiece or destroy what was left (verse 10) there would have been great waste.

souls, persons, as in our 'a ship with two hundred souls on board.'

according to every man's eating, ye shall make your count, &c. This English suggests that the extent of each person's appetite was to be carefully ascertained, and the families grouped accordingly; which is absurd. The clause has been rendered, 'Each person's share of the lamb shall be apportioned according to his capacity for eating.' Not apparently that each is to have his fill; but that definite portions were to be allotted according to age or sex, so that the meal might proceed quickly and orderly (Baentsch). Another rendering is, 'A lamb is to be provided (lit. reckoned) for as many as can eat it' (Kautzsch); cf. on xvi. 16.

5. The conditions laid down here are those prescribed for animals for sacrifices. Apparently the Passover was originally considered a sacrifice; cf. verse 27; later on, when sacrifices could only be offered at the Temple, the Passover which was celebrated elsewhere was necessarily distinguished from sacrifices.

6. ye shall keep it up, lit. 'ye shall have it in keeping,' i. e. 'ye shall take care of it.' It is not clear why the animal was to be got four days before it was killed; it may be some feature of ancient ritual whose significance had been forgotten when the laws were committed to writing.

it ^a at even. And they shall take of the blood, and put 7 it on the two side posts and on the lintel, upon the houses wherein they shall eat it. And they shall eat the 8 flesh in that night, roast with fire, and unleavened bread ; with bitter herbs they shall eat it. Eat not of it raw, nor 9 sodden at all with water, but roast with fire ; its head

at even, possibly the original phrase had this meaning, i. e. at sunset or nightfall. The Hebrew in its present form was probably intended by the final editors of the Hebrew text to mean, as in R. V. marg., 'between the two evenings' ; either at the point at which the one evening ended and the other began or at some time in the period covered by the two evenings. The two evenings are commonly explained as the hour before and the hour after sunset, but sometimes as from sunset to dark, or from about 3 p.m. to sunset.

7. The blood-ritual, again, is also a survival of primitive ritual. Similarly Ezek. xliii. 18. The priests put the blood of the sin-offering on the doorposts of the Temple ; and both in Arabia and Syria the doorposts of houses, &c., are sprinkled with sacrificial blood (Jeremias, p. 260). At some stage of the development of the ritual the lamb may have been regarded as a sin-offering, and the sprinkling of its blood on the doorposts, &c., conveyed its atoning efficacy to the inmates of the house. But these directions for the first, the Egyptian, Passover, rather suggest that the blood originally protected the family from the attacks of a hostile spirit. See further in Appendix I.

8. roast with fire, perhaps to distinguish it from the sacrifices at which boiled flesh was eaten, e. g. Lev. viii. 31. According to Deut. xvi. 7 the Passover lamb was to be boiled.

unleavened bread, as being more pure ; so in Lev. ii. 4 unleavened cakes are to be used for a meal-offering. In J, xii. 34, the unleavened bread is due to the haste with which they departed ; they had no time to wait for it to leaven. The theory of the Priestly Code also seems to be that the Passover ritual consists of commemorative symbols ; cf. on verse 15.

9. Eat not of it raw, nor sodden. The prohibition implies that this or other sacrifices were at one time eaten raw ; we know that they were eaten sodden, i. e. boiled ; cf. on the previous verse.

- 10 with its legs and with the inwards thereof. And ye shall let nothing of it remain until the morning ; but that which remaineth of it until the morning ye shall burn with fire.
- 11 And thus shall ye eat it ; with your loins girded, your shoes on your feet, and your staff in your hand : and ye
- 12 shall eat it in haste : it is the LORD'S passover. For I will go through the land of Egypt in that night, and will smite all the firstborn in the land of Egypt, both man and beast ; and against all the gods of Egypt I will
- 13 execute judgements : I am the LORD. And the blood shall be to you for a token upon the houses where ye are : and when I see the blood, I will pass over you, and there shall no plague be upon you ^a to destroy you, when
- 14 I smite the land of Egypt. [S] And this day shall be unto you for a memorial, and ye shall keep it a feast to the LORD : throughout your generations ye shall keep it a

^a Or, for a destroyer

10. let nothing of it remain until the morning, in order that this specially sacred object might not be used for an ordinary meal ; a similar rule is laid down for sacrificial victims in Lev. iv. 12, vii. 15, 17. So the consecrated elements of the mass (unless reserved for ritual purposes) must all be consumed by the worshippers or the priest.

11. On the night of the Egyptian Passover the Israelites were to partake of the meal prepared to start at once on their journey, as soon as the call came.

passover : see Appendix I.

12. and against all the gods of Egypt I will execute judgements. The sentence may mean that in triumphing over Pharaoh, and plaguing him and his people, Yahweh conquers the gods of Egypt and executes judgements on them ; or may refer to the fact that the Egyptians worshipped animals such as were destroyed in the plagues.

14. a memorial. Verses 1-13 are instructions for the night of the Exodus ; 14-20 direct that a permanent annual festival shall be observed.

15. Seven days. The original observance was confined to the night of the Passover, unleavened bread ; even the first day ye shall put away leaven out of your houses : for whosoever eateth leavened bread from the first day until the seventh day, that soul shall be cut off from Israel. And in the first day there 16 shall be to you an holy convocation, and in the seventh day an holy convocation ; no manner of work shall be done in them, save that which every man must eat, that only may be done of you. And ye shall observe the 17 feast of unleavened bread ; for in this selfsame day have I brought your hosts out of the land of Egypt : therefore shall ye observe this day throughout your generations by an ordinance for ever. In the first month, on the 18 fourteenth day of the month at even, ye shall eat unleavened bread, until the one and twentieth day of the month at even. Seven days shall there be no leaven 19 found in your houses : for whosoever eateth that which unleavened bread. Verses 14-20 are wholly occupied with this feature of the ritual. Originally Mazoth, or the Feast of Unleavened Bread, was distinct from the Passover ; cf. Appendix I.

that soul shall be cut off from Israel. 'Person' would be better than 'soul.' 'Cut off' is ambiguous, perhaps intentionally ; judging from Num. iii. 4, xv. 36, where death is the penalty of offering the wrong kind of incense and of gathering sticks on the Sabbath, the Priestly writers would have been quite willing to interpret 'cut off' by 'put to death.' But as the Jewish authorities in the period when the priestly writings were published, and for the most part afterwards, had not the power of life and death, 'cut off' came to mean 'excommunicated,' excluded from worship at the Temple and from intercourse with faithful Jews.

16. an holy convocation, migrā' qodesh, a characteristic term of the Priestly writers for a religious gathering on a sacred day. On these particular 'holy convocations' no work might be done, as 16*b* tells us, except that involved in the preparation of food ; so that these days were less sacred than the weekly or Sabbath, on which no work of any kind might be done.

17. in this selfsame day, the first day of unleavened bread, the fourteenth day of the first month.

18. In the first month, taking for granted the new arrangement made in verse 2.

is leavened, that soul shall be cut off from the congregation of Israel, whether he be a sojourner, or one that 20 is born in the land. Ye shall eat nothing leavened ; in all your habitations shall ye eat unleavened bread.

21 [R] Then Moses called for all the elders of Israel, and said unto them, ^a Draw out, and take you ^b lambs 22 according to your families, and kill the passover. And ye shall take a bunch of hyssop, and dip it in the blood that is in the bason, and strike the lintel and the two side posts with the blood that is in the bason ; and none of you shall go out of the door of his house until the

19. the congregation, 'ēdhâ, 'company,' used especially, by the Priestly writers, for the Jewish community. To use modern terms, the Church and the Nation were identical, so that the 'congregation' is at once the body of citizens and the company of believers ; but in the Priestly use of 'ēdhâ the emphasis is on the religious character of the community.

sojourner, gēr, 'resident alien,' a foreigner residing more or less permanently in Israel, under the protection of an Israelite family or authority ; later on a proselyte.

one that is born in the land, a native Israelite, 21 ff. These verses seem to assume that the Passover is an institution already known—note 'the passover,' 'the blood which is in the basin' ; Yahweh's instructions to Moses and Aaron said nothing about the hyssop or the basin.

21. Draw out, perhaps 'Proceed forthwith' (BDB.) ; the Syriac version has 'Make haste.'

22. hyssop, also used for ceremonial sprinkling in case of leprosy, Lev. xiv. 51, and in the ritual of the red heifer, Num. xix. 6. The nature of this plant is not certainly known ; it is said that it cannot be our hyssop, which is not found in Palestine, but that it is either the caper or the Origanum malu, a kind of marjoram.

23. to smite the Egyptians. We should probably understand the firstborn ; but, if so, the words are those of an author assuming his reader's general acquaintance with the facts, rather than those of a speaker communicating fresh information.

and on the two side posts, the LORD will pass over the door, and will not suffer the destroyer to come in unto your houses to smite you. [P] And ye shall observe this 24 thing for an ordinance to thee and to thy sons for ever. [D] And it shall come to pass, when ye be come to the 25 land which the LORD will give you, according as he hath promised, that ye shall keep this service. And it shall 26 come to pass, when your children shall say unto you, What mean ye by this service? that ye shall say, It is 27 the sacrifice of the LORD's passover,^a who passed over the houses of the children of Israel in Egypt, when he smote the Egyptians, and delivered our houses. And the people bowed the head and worshipped. [P] And 28 the children of Israel went and did so; as the LORD had commanded Moses and Aaron, so did they.

[J] And it came to pass at midnight, that the LORD 29 smote all the firstborn in the land of Egypt, from the firstborn of Pharaoh that sat on his throne unto the firstborn of the captive that was in the dungeon; and all the firstborn of cattle. Here, as elsewhere, the connexion between Yahweh and the Malakh Yahweh or Angel of Yahweh are so close that the terms are used interchangeably; cf. Gen. xvi. 7. xii. 31-4 (J). The Israelites are sent away in great haste.

35, 36 (E). They 'borrow' jewels and raiment of the Egyptians.

37-9 (J R). They journey to Succoth accompanied by their flocks and herds and a mixed multitude.

40-2 (S). The duration of the sojourn in Egypt was four hundred and thirty years.

43-50 (P). Supplement to the Law of the Passover. The Passover only to be eaten by circumcized persons.

51 (P). The Israelites leave Egypt.

xiii. 1, 2 (P). Supplement to the Law of the Passover. The firstborn to be dedicated to Yahweh.

3-9 (J R). Unleavened Bread to be eaten seven days, as a sign.

10-13 (J). The firstborn to be dedicated to Yahweh.

14-16 (R). The story to be told to future generations.

Sources, &c. The composite nature of the section is obvious. There are frequent repetitions; cf. xiii. 1, 2 with 12, 13; xiii. 6, 7 with xii. 14-20; and xiii. 3, 8, 9 with 14-16. The narrative of the sudden, hurried departure of two or three million persons is interrupted to introduce repetitions and expansions of laws already revealed, a repetition of the law as to the Feast of Unleavened Bread being inserted in the middle of the laws as to the firstborn. This second law as to the Unleavened Bread is inconsistent with the former; in xiii. 6 the feast is on the seventh day, whereas in xii. 14 f. the feast is on the first day, though there is also a 'holy convocation' on the seventh day.

Thus the narrative is interwoven with laws from different sources. The cause of this combination is the theory that all the laws as to the firstborn, the Passover, and the Feast of Unleavened Bread were delivered at the time of the departure from Egypt, a theory not always observed elsewhere in the Pentateuch. The attempt to apply it here has given rise to much annotation on the part of editors.

children of Israel ; and go, serve the LORD, as ye have said. Take both your flocks and your herds, as ye have 32 said, and be gone ; and bless me also. And the 33 Egyptians were urgent upon the people, to send them out of the land in haste ; for they said, We be all dead men. And the people took their dough before it was 34 leavened, their kneadingtroughs being bound up in their clothes upon their shoulders. [E] And the children of 35 Israel did according to the word of Moses ; and they asked of the Egyptians jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment : and the LORD gave the people favour 36 in the sight of the Egyptians, so that they let them have what they asked. And they spoiled the Egyptians.

33. We be all dead men. No one could tell what new plague would follow if the Israelites were not sent away at once, perhaps the extermination of the whole people.

34. According to this narrative the people are not prepared for any journey, and have had no orders to get rid of leaven ; on the contrary, they have dough in their houses which they expect to leaven, and are only prevented from doing so by their sudden departure—a view of matters quite different from that of verses 1-20, P.

This verse gives a traditional explanation of the Feast of Unleavened Bread ; it commemorates the hasty start at the Exodus, when there was no time for leavening.

dren' is to be understood as including women. The 600,000 is probably a round number, representing the 603,550 of Num. i. 46, P, and the 601,730 of Num. xxvi. 51, P. These figures in Numbers stand for the fighting men of Israel, the tribe of Levi being excluded. The 600,000 also occurs in Num. xi. 21 in a J passage; it is probably an editorial insertion in both places. The words used here imply that the 600,000 were fighting men, so that with the 'mixed multitude' the total could hardly be less than 3,000,000; and although J thinks of the Israelites as very numerous, he has a measure of historical feeling, and probably did not use numbers in this reckless fashion. Such figures do not call for serious discussion.

38. mixed multitude, 'erebh, a heterogeneous collection of non-Israelites, probably slaves who took advantage of the panic of the Egyptians to escape. An interesting recognition on the part of ancient tradition that the Israelite community was of mixed origin. In Neh. xiii. 3 we read that in the time of Nehemiah the 'mixed multitude' was separated from the Jews.

flocks and herds. The Israelites were not mere slave-labourers on the Egyptian public works, but nomad tribes with cattle.

40 f. four hundred and thirty years. This date is a great puzzle, and cannot be reconciled with the other chronological data: e. g. vi. 16-20, Aaron was the son of Jochebed the daughter of Levi, and Levi was grown up before the sojourn began. In Gen. xv. 13 (which see) the period of the 'affliction' of the Israelites in Egypt is given as 400 years, which may be a traditional round number. Our passage would then add the 30 years for the period of sojourning in Egypt before the 'affliction' began. It has been pointed out that this makes the time from the Creation to the Exodus 2,666 years, two-thirds of 4,000 years; according to P, 26 generations of 100 years each, up to and including Aaron and Moses, the odd 66 years being for the next generation, which was already on the scene, but had not run its course. This would fit in with the male genealogy of Aaron, viz. Levi, Kohath, Amram, Aaron—which would account for the 430 years at the rate of 100 years a generation, and an extra 66 as before, less 36 years for the part of the life of Levi before he settled in Egypt. The above is a good example of the artificial and unreal character of P's chronology; a further illustration is afforded by the fact that 430 years is double the length of the sojourning of the patriarchs in Canaan, viz. 215 years, Gen. xii. 4, xxi. 5, xxv. 26, xlvii. 9. The Septuagint here has 435 years in both verses. Also the Septuagint and the Samaritan Hebrew text attempt to lessen the difficulties by making the number include the sojourns both in Canaan and in Egypt, thus reducing the latter to 220 years. The Septuagint has 'in the land of Egypt and in the land of Canaan,' the Samaritan 'in the land of Canaan and in the land of Egypt.'

41. the selfsame day, the fifteenth Nisan.

42. a night to be much observed (twice), marg., a night of watching. The word shimmurim, translated 'to be much observed,' 'watching,' only occurs in this passage; the root Sh MR means 'keep,' 'watch,' 'observe'; 'night of watching' will refer to the night-long vigil observed at the Passover. The verse has been explained, 'It is a night when Yahweh kept watch to bring out, &c., therefore the night when the Israelites keep watch for the sake of Yahweh, &c.' (Baentsch).

45. A sojourner and an hired servant. The context implies that both are foreigners; the term gēr, 'resident alien' (see on ii. 22), would apply to both. The sojourner, here tōshābh, is a foreigner who is his own master as distinguished from one who works for hire. It is assumed that 'an hired servant' will as a rule be a foreigner.

Here verse 17 shows that the children were not to be sacrificed; but the use of the term may be a survival of a time when the firstborn were sacrificed, or may be borrowed from the Canaanites, amongst whom such sacrifices were common; cf. on xxii. 29.

And thou shalt write them upon the doorposts of thy house, and upon thy gates.' In Exodus, at any rate, 'the expressions are evidently meant figuratively; cf. Prov. i. 9' (Driver, on Deut. vi. 8, 9). The passage in Deuteronomy may be intended literally; it was so interpreted by the Jews, and gave rise to the custom of wearing phylacteries, or cases containing inscribed scrolls, on the arms; and of affixing somewhat similar cases to the doorposts; see on Deut. vi. 8, 9.

The derivation and original meaning are uncertain; it is commonly explained as a band round the forehead, but also as a kind of tattoo mark. In post-biblical Hebrew the word is used for 'phylacteries,' and so is the corresponding word in Aramaic.

xiii. 17—xiv. 31. THE PASSAGE OF THE RED SEA.

(Narrative compiled from J, E, and P.)

xiii. 17-19 (E). The Israelites leave Egypt. God leads them a circuitous route by the Red Sea. Moses takes the bones of Joseph with him.

20 (P). They go from Succoth to Etham.

21, 22 (J). Yahweh goes before them in a pillar of cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night.

xiv. 1-4 (P). Yahweh bids the Israelites encamp by the Red Sea that Pharaoh may think they are shut in. Yahweh will harden his heart that he may pursue them, that Yahweh may be glorified. They do so.

5-6 (J). After the Israelites have fled Pharaoh changes his mind and musters his army.

7a (E). Pharaoh takes six hundred chosen chariots, 7b (R). and all the chariots of Egypt.

8 (P). Yahweh hardens the heart of Pharaoh, and he pursues the Israelites.

9a (J). The Egyptians pursue the Israelites.

9b (R P). Pharaoh overtakes the Israelites at Pi-hahirôth.

10a (J). The Israelites see the Egyptians overtaking them, and are afraid.

10b (E). They appeal to Yahweh.

people go, that God led them not by the way of the land of the Philistines, although that was near ; for God said, 11-14 (J). The people complain to Moses ; he assures them that Yahweh will deliver them.

15 a, 16 a (E). Yahweh bids Moses lift up his rod.

15 b, 16 b-18 (P). [Yahweh bids Moses] stretch out his hand over the sea and divide it, that the Israelites may go through on dry ground. Then He will harden the hearts of the Egyptians, that they may follow.

19 a (E). The angel of God moves from the van to the rear of Israel.

19 b, 20 (J). The Pillar of Cloud moves from the van to the rear of Israel. The Egyptians cannot get near the Israelites.

21 a, c, 22, 23 (P). Moses stretches out his hand, the waters divide ; the Israelites enter the dry bed of the sea, and the Egyptians follow.

21 b (J). Yahweh drives back the sea by an east wind.

24, 25 (J). Yahweh discomfits the Egyptians, and they propose to flee.

26, 27 a, 28 a (P). At the bidding of Yahweh Moses stretches his hand over the sea that the waters may return ; the waters return and drown the Egyptian army.

27 b, 28 b (J). The waters return in the morning ; the Egyptians flee, but none escape.

29 (P). The Israelites go safely over.

30 (J). Israel sees the Egyptian dead on the shore.

31 (R). Israel believes in Yahweh and Moses.

Sources, &c. Characteristics of the sources noticed in the account of the Ten Plagues recur here. As in the case of the Locusts, x. 13, an east wind plays an important part in J's narrative, xiv. 21. Moses' rod appears, as elsewhere in E, xiv. 16.

But Aaron does not appear in this narrative ; cf. however xv. 20. Evidently Aaron did not figure in the original tradition, and although P had associated him with Moses in the account of the Plagues, it did not occur to P to introduce him here.

Cf. also the notes on xiii. 17, 19, xiv. 15, 19, 21, 22.

Josephus, Ant. II. xvi. 5, supports the credibility of the narrative by telling his readers that 'for the sake of those that accompanied Alexander, king of Macedon, who yet lived comparatively but a little while ago, the Pamphylian Sea retired and afforded them a passage through itself, when they had no other way to go.' This experience of Alexander is mentioned in other writers, one of whom alleges that 'the Pamphylian Sea did not only open 17-19. God, a mark of the Elohist Document. Although his theory allowed him to use 'Yahweh' after the revelation of that name to Moses, and he usually does so; yet, having used 'Elohim,' 'God,' so far, he retains the usage in some measure, perhaps as a habit.

repent when they see war. Their spirits might prove to have been broken by their drudgery and subjection in Egypt, so that they could not face armed opposition.

18. Red Sea, Yam Sûph, 'Sea of Rushes or Reeds.' Rushes or reeds are fresh-water plants, e. g. in ii. 3 (which see) Pharaoh's daughter, bathing in the Nile, sees the ark amongst the sûph, R.V. 'flags.' Hence the Yam Sûph has been identified with lagoons along the Mediterranean to the north-east of Egypt; but this does not suit the route assigned to the Israelites. Moreover, in 1 Kings ix. 26 Elath and Ezion-geber in Edom are on the Yam Sûph, so that it includes the Gulf of Akaba, the north-east extremity of our Red Sea. Hence the Yam Sûph here also will be, at any rate, the northern part of our Red Sea, including the Gulf of Suez and the Gulf of Akaba. Why it should be called Yam Sûph is a mystery; there may have been freshwater marshes or shallow lakes continuing the present Gulf of Suez, but why should these give a name to the sea? Possibly Sûph is a proper name which originally had no connexion with sûph, 'reed.' The translation 'Red Sea' is derived from the Septuagint.

20. Etham, sometimes supposed to be a variation of Pithom, 'P' being the Egyptian article; but if Succoth is practically Pithom (see on xii. 37), either this identification must be rejected or the Priestly writer is more ignorant of geography here than he appears elsewhere. Pithom, too, was not 'on the edge of the wilderness.' Some texts of the Coptic (Egyptian) Version have Epethom here, and in Num. xxxiii. 6, 7 the Septuagint has for Etham, Bouthan, which may represent Pithom. There are many other conjectures as to Etham, but at present its locality is uncertain. Cf. Num. xxxiii. 7.

21. pillar of fire . . . pillar of cloud. In Gen. xv. 17, J, Yahweh manifests His presence at night by 'a smoking furnace and a flaming torch,' and in Exodus iii. 2 'in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush.' In connexion with the 'pillar of fire' the fire signals borne in front of a caravan are sometimes referred to.

xiv. 2. turn back, rather 'turn.' At first they would naturally march north-east so as to pass to the north of the end of the Gulf of Suez; now they are bidden turn south or south-east so as to strike the west shore of the gulf.

Pi-hahiroth . . . Migdol . . . Baal-zephon. These places are not identified with certainty; they were obviously close together on the west shore of the Gulf of Suez near its north end. There is also some doubt as to the extent of the gulf in ancient times. Migdol is Hebrew for 'fortress'; cf. Num. xxxiii. 7.

12 Is not this the word that we spake unto thee in Egypt, saying, Let us alone, that we may serve the Egyptians? For it were better for us to serve the Egyptians, than there was the cloud and the darkness, &c. The exact sense is obscure, and the text may not be correct; the versions differ in some respects from the Hebrew. But probably the meaning of the original was that the cloud was dark to the Egyptians, while it gave light to the Israelites (Holzinger).

21. a strong east wind would seem to drive the waters on to the Israelites; perhaps a north-east wind is meant. A 'violent wind' is less likely.

xiv. 21-22. In these verses we have two different views. In verse 21 a, by J, a strong east wind drives back the water and leaves a dry passage, i. e. the whole bed of a shallow arm of the sea is left bare. Probably the returning tide was checked for a time.

In 22, P, a narrow passage is left dry and the water is heaped up high on each side like a wall.

19. Conclusion.

20, 21 (E). Miriam, Aaron's sister, leads the Israelite women while they celebrate the deliverance with dance and song, singing the opening lines of the above lyric.

Sources, &c. Verses 1 b, 21 b, 'I will sing unto Yahweh . . . into the sea,' are an ancient couplet which has been expanded into the poem of verses 1-19. This lyric was not composed by any one of the main authors of the Pentateuch. It may have circulated as an independent work, or may have been preserved in a collection of poems.

It implies the Conquest of Canaan, verses 13-16, and the establishment of the Temple, verse 17, and the writer seems acquainted with the narratives of J and E, so that the poem cannot be much older than 750 B. C. The relation to P is not certain. Possibly some of the points in P's narrative, cf. xiv. 21, xv. 8, were suggested by this poem, and if so it may have been composed towards the close of the monarchy. It is also possible, though less probable, that the author of the poem was acquainted with P, in which case it would be post-exilic. It has been inserted by one of the editors.

Verses 20, 21 are ascribed to E on account of the mention of Miriam, who only appears in E in the older documents; and because of her description as 'prophetess'—E takes a special interest in prophecy.

17. the mountain of thine inheritance. Taken by themselves these words would suggest the Temple-hill in Jerusalem ; cf. 1 Kings viii. 13. But we can hardly think of Israel as 'planted' in the Temple-hill, so that here, as in verse 13, the reference seems to be to Palestine, thought of as a hill-country. The last two lines, however, seem to refer to the Temple ; we might perhaps render, 'where is the place which Thou hast made,' &c.

20. Miriam, the prophetess, the sister of Aaron. Considering that Aaron is much less conspicuous than Moses in the preceding narratives, we should have expected Miriam to be described as the sister of Moses. It almost seems as if in this source Aaron was not the brother of Moses. The leading of the women in songs and dances is an example of the prophetic functions of Miriam. The earlier prophets were subject to religious ecstasy ; cf. 1 Sam. x. 5. See also on Exod. vii. 1 and Gen. xx. 7. The only other references to Miriam in the Pentateuch are Num. xii. 1-15, the rebellion of Aaron and Miriam against Moses ; cf. Deut. xxiv. 9 ; Num. xx. 1, her death ; Num. xxvi. 59,

25. the LORD shewed him a tree. Another illustration of J's habit of referring results to natural causes under Divine guidance and control. It is said that a shrub in this district has the quality ascribed to the 'tree.'

present context 'he' would be Moses; but it is Yahweh who 'proves' Israel. The fragment is usually assigned to E. Perhaps a paragraph of E stood here in an early edition of the narrative, and most of its contents have been replaced by other material. We should have expected to hear how Yahweh 'proved' Israel; the bitter water is not an adequate explanation. 'Proved' is from NSH, the root of Massah; E's Massah story may have stood here originally.

26. and he said. The subject is Yahweh.

I will put none of the diseases upon thee, &c. This verse is not very suitable to the situation. Apparently something went wrong with the piecing together of the sources, or a bit of the manuscript got torn away, and the editor did his best to set things right. We might make some such connexion as follows: At Marah the Israelites had found themselves threatened with one of the plagues of Egypt, undrinkable water; Yahweh had delivered them from this, and similarly, if they were obedient, He would protect them from the diseases which had afflicted the Egyptians.

the LORD that healeth thee: 'Yahweh thy Healer' sounds like a title of Yahweh, perhaps a reminiscence of a lost narrative.

22-30 (S). On the sixth day they gather two omers apiece ; this apparent disregard of his instructions is reported to Moses, who explains that this is a special provision for the Sabbath—a double amount is to be gathered on the sixth day and none on the Sabbath.

31-35 (P). The Israelites call the 'bread' Manna ; an omer is put in a pot and laid up before Yahweh. The Israelites eat manna forty years.

36 (S). The amount of an omer.

Sources, &c. With the exception of the fragment of E in verse 4, the section belongs to the Priestly Code and the editors who supplemented and annotated it. But as the Priestly writer did not invent such narratives as that of the manna and the quails, it is probable that he has used a story from J, and expanded it into an illustration of the application of the Law of the Sabbath, a piece of case law. The omission of the J story is probably due to the fact that all its leading features were reproduced in P, so that it is quite reasonable to suppose that some of the more purely narrative phrases and sentences are simply appropriated from J ; cf. xvi. 31 and Num. xi. 7, J or E.

But the section is clearly out of place ; it implies at least the Law of the Sabbath, the Ark, and the Tables of the Law, none of which existed at this time ; cf. verses 9, 23, 33 f. Moreover, the episode of the Quails is given in Num. xi, after the giving of the Law on Sinai. Thus this chapter must have stood in the Priestly Code after the Sinai legislation. As it stands the reference to the Quails has nothing to lead up to it, and no sequel. Any explanation can only be advanced with much hesitation ; but something like the following may possibly have happened. The original Priestly Code may have combined the Manna and children of Israel came unto the wilderness of Sin, which is between Elim and Sinai, on the fifteenth day of the second month after their departing out of the land of the Quails in one narrative. When the editor combined this with J and E, he may have found a narrative of the Manna at the beginning, where it now stands, and have transferred P's account to that place, adding to it verse 4 and perhaps other elements from J E. The need for food would arise as soon as the Israelites entered the wilderness and exhausted the scanty stores they would be able to bring with them; therefore the miraculous provision for their wants would naturally begin at once. To avoid clashing with J's story of the Quails, Num. xi, he intended to omit the references to them, but did not fully carry out his intention. He and his followers overlooked the anachronisms caused by transferring the chapter to the beginning of the Wanderings; cf. also on verse 1.

The late origin of verse 15*a* is seen from the fact that the word man, translated 'what,' is not Hebrew but Aramaic.

In Num. xxxiii. 11 the route is Elim, 'camp by the Red Sea,' wilderness of Sin.

1. the wilderness of Sin, some district east of the Gulf of Suez. If Sinai is our 'Sinai,' this wilderness would be one of the plains not far from the Gulf; but if Sinai is somewhere south of the Dead Sea, the wilderness would be farther west. It is only mentioned here, xvii. 1 and Num. xxxiii. 11 f. It can hardly be connected with the Sin of Ezek. xxx. 15 f., which is usually located north-east of Egypt. The resemblance to Sinai suggests that the wilderness and the mountain were in the same district, and that the names are connected. According to Num. xx. 1, &c., after leaving Sinai the Israelites came to a wilderness of Zin, where they were distressed for want of water, as at Rephidim. Hence it has been supposed that Sin and Zin are two forms of the same name. In Num. xxxiii. 36 Zin is identified with Kadesh.

Sinai. For the position, see on Horeb, iii. 1. The name is derived from the Babylonian moon-god, Sin, and it should be noted that Ur and Haran, the early homes of Abraham, were seats of the worship of Sin; Sarah is a name of the female counterpart of Sin; Milcah, the name of Nahor's wife, is a title of Ishtar, who was worshipped at Haran; and Laban may be another name of the moon-god, KAT., p. 364 f. A title of Sin is 'the self-producing one' (Jeremias); cf. iii. 14.

 Israel murmured against Moses and against Aaron in the wilderness: and the children of Israel said unto 3 them, Would that we had died by the hand of the LORD in the land of Egypt, when we sat by the flesh pots, when we did eat bread to the full; for ye have brought us forth into this wilderness, to kill this whole assembly with hunger. [E] Then said the LORD unto Moses, Behold, 4
 I will rain bread from heaven for you; and the people shall go out and gather a day's portion every day, that I may prove them, whether they will walk in my law, or no.
 [S] And it shall come to pass on the sixth day, that they 5

we did eat bread to the full seems hardly consistent with the earlier descriptions of their wretched condition in Egypt; but perhaps 'distance lent enchantment to the view.'

4. that I may prove them. Cf. xv. 25. It is not clear what the nature of the test was in the original context, but in the chapter as it stands the test would be connected with the limitation of the daily amount gathered; the daily provision, none to be left for the next day; and the gathering a double portion on the sixth day, and none on the seventh.

5. Cf. verses 9, 23.

6. the LORD hath brought you out, i. e. it was Yahweh who had brought them out, not Moses and Aaron, as in verse 3.

7. the glory of the LORD: apparently an appearance, probably of light, seen in the cloud in verse 10. But this appearance seems to have been manifested at once according to verse 10; and here the 'glory' is not to be seen till the morning. Hence the 'glory' here has been explained as the manifestation of Yahweh's power and faithfulness in sending the manna. The explanation of the murmurings against the LORD: and what are we, that ye when the LORD shall give you in the evening flesh to eat, and in the morning bread to the full; for that the LORD heareth your murmurings which ye murmur against him:

 and what are we? your murmurings are not against us, 9 but against the LORD. [P] And Moses said unto Aaron, Say unto all the congregation of the children of Israel,

 10 murmurings. And it came to pass, as Aaron spake unto the whole congregation of the children of Israel, that they looked toward the wilderness, and, behold, the glory of 11 the LORD appeared in the cloud. And the LORD spake 12 unto Moses, saying, I have heard the murmurings of the children of Israel: speak unto them, saying, ^a At even ye shall eat flesh, and in the morning ye shall be filled with bread; and ye shall know that I am the LORD your God.

discrepancy lies somewhere—we cannot say where—in the complicated process of composition and annotation.

what are we, that ye murmur against us. In murmuring against Moses and Aaron they were really murmuring against God.

8 b = 7 b.

9. Come near before the LORD. The words imply some sanctuary at which the Divine Presence would be manifested; the reference might be to the Pillar of Cloud. But this chapter takes for granted much that has not yet been mentioned, but is provided for hereafter, e. g. the law of the Sabbath, verses 5, 23. In verse 23 a pot of manna is to be laid up 'before Yahweh, to be kept for your generations,' and in verse 34 'before Yahweh' is explained as 'before the Testimony,' i. e. 'the Ark'; cf. verse 34.

10. they looked toward the wilderness, perhaps in the direction of the Pillar of Cloud.

13. the quails came up. 'Flesh' has been mentioned, verses 8, 12, but nothing has been said about quails, and nothing more is and covered the camp: and in the morning the dew lay round about the camp. And when the dew that lay was gone up, behold, upon the face of the wilderness a small round thing, small as the hoar frost on the ground. And when the children of Israel saw it, they said one to another, ^bWhat is it? for they wist not what it was.

^a Or, flake

said about them, whereas in Num. xi there is a whole chapter about the quails, preceded by a paragraph on the unsatisfying nature of the manna. Here again the editor has not been quite successful in dealing with his materials; he perhaps intended to omit any reference to the quails here, but has not fully carried out his ideas; cf. above on Sources.

14. a small round thing (marg. flake), small as the hoar frost . . . 15 . . . they said one to another, What is it? (marg. It is manna) . . . 31 . . . the house of Israel called the name thereof Manna (Heb. Man): and it was like coriander seed, white; and the taste of it was like wafers made with honey. The 'round thing' or 'flake,' mehuspās, is translated by the Septuagint, 'like white coriander seed,' an interpretation borrowed from verse 31. The Vulgate has 'as if pounded by a pestle,' pilotusum. The word only occurs here, and its meaning is matter of controversy. Coriander seed is only mentioned here and Num. xi. 7, also in connexion with manna; the so-called seed is really fruit; it is straw-coloured, and about the size of a peppercorn (DB. and EB.). Wafer, zephith, occurs only here. In Num. xi. 7 f. the manna is said to be 'like coriander seed, and the appearance thereof as the appearance of bdellium'; it was ground in mills, or beaten in mortars, and tasted like fresh oil; and the Israelites got very tired of it, so that 'their soul was dried away,' i. e., as we should say, they were dying for something more palatable.

Bdellium, or rather the bedolah it represents, may be a whitish gum, or some kind of precious stone, or a pearl; cf. on Gen. ii. 12. There is nothing in Num. xi to show that the manna was supernatural. In Ps. lxxviii. 24 f. it is spoken of as 'corn from heaven' and 'angels' food.' Cf. also Deut. viii. 3, 6; Joshua v. 12; Neh. ix. 20.

The derivation in verse 15, What is it, Man hu, is one of the usual popular guesses, and has no etymological value. The Hebrew for 'manna,' viz. mān, is an equivalent of the Arabic manna; the name is of a 'sweet, sticky, honey-like' (BDB.)

And Moses said unto them, It is the bread which the 16 LORD hath given you to eat. This is the thing which the LORD hath commanded, Gather ye of it every man according to his eating; an omer a head, according to the number of your persons, shall ye take it, every man 17 for them which are in his tent. And the children of 18 Israel did so, and gathered some more, some less. And when they did mete it with an omer, he that gathered much had nothing over, and he that gathered little had no lack; they gathered every man according to his eating.

juice, exuding in heavy drops, in May or June, from a shrub found in the Sinai peninsula. This also is said to be 'a dirty yellow, but white when it falls upon stones; it falls upon the earth in grains, is gathered in the morning, melts in the heat of the sun, and has the flavour of honey' (KD.). This natural manna would account for the paragraph in Numbers; but the narrative here implies a supernatural provision, on account of the immense quantities which must have been supplied. The basis of the story is no doubt a primitive idea that the natural manna dropped, not from trees, but from heaven. Josephus, Ant. II. iii. 1, tells us that in his time this manna still came down in rain, clearly identifying it with the natural manna.

16. every man according to his eating, as in xii. 4; so much apiece, or less probably an average of so much, reckoning a suitable amount according to age and sex.

omer. The exact values of the Israelite weights and measures are not certainly known. They varied somewhat at different times. When this document, the Priestly Code, was compiled the Ephah might be reckoned as rather less than $2\frac{1}{2}$ pecks, and the Omer, the tenth part of the Ephah (cf. verse 36), as rather less than two quarts. The 'ōmer is only mentioned in this chapter, and must be carefully distinguished from the ḥōmer, which was ten ephahs.

17-18. The sense is not clear; but apparently the meaning is that in some miraculous way, however much or however little a man gathered, when he took it to his tent and measured it, there was just an omer apiece for his family; any excess had vanished, any deficiency had been made up. It has also been interpreted to mean that 'they found that adherence to the prescribed proportion exactly used up the available amount' (Oxf. Hex.); there was just enough for them to gather an omer

And Moses said unto them, Let no man leave of it till 19
the morning. Notwithstanding they hearkened not unto 20 Moses; but some of them left of it until the morning, and it bred worms, and stank: and Moses was wroth with them. And they gathered it morning by morning, every 21 man according to his eating: and when the sun waxed hot, it melted. [S] And it came to pass, that on the 22 sixth day they gathered twice as much bread, two omers for each one: and all the rulers of the congregation came and told Moses. And he said unto them, This is that 23 which the LORD hath spoken, To-morrow is a solemn rest, a holy sabbath unto the LORD: bake that which ye will bake, and seethe that which ye will seethe; and all that remaineth over lay up for you to be kept until the morning. And they laid it up till the morning, as Moses 24 bade: and it did not stink, neither was there any worm therein. And Moses said, Eat that to-day; for to-day is 25 a sabbath unto the LORD: to-day ye shall not find it in the field. Six days ye shall gather it; but on the seventh 26 apiece and none over. But it is difficult to see how this can be got from either the Hebrew or the English; cf. on verse 16.

20, 21. The natural manna does not putrefy rapidly, but it does melt in the sun.

22. The people, without express instructions, were specially inspired to gather a double quantity on the sixth day. This seemed to the rulers a breach of the command to gather only one omer a day, and they report it to Moses.

23. Moses explains that the people have been divinely guided —this seems implied—to provide for the due observance of the Sabbath.

This is that which the LORD hath spoken, i. e. 'This conduct is in accordance with the law of the Sabbath given by Yahweh.' Nothing has been said as to this revelation; another indication that the chapter is not in its proper place: cf. verse 9. It should come somewhere after the Ten Commandments.

a solemn rest, a holy sabbath, shabbathón shabbath qōdesh, a phrase denoting by repetition, 'a day that is specially or assuredly a sacred day of rest.'

27 day is the sabbath, in it there shall be none. And it came to pass on the seventh day, that there went out some of the people for to gather, and they found none.

28 And the LORD said unto Moses, How long refuse ye to keep my commandments and my laws? See, for that the LORD hath given you the sabbath, therefore he giveth you on the sixth day the bread of two days; abide ye every man in his place, let no man go out of his place on

28. The going out to gather manna was work which violated the injunction to rest on the Sabbath.

(A narrative from J E.)

1 a (P). The Israelites come to Rephidim.

1 b, 2 (E). The people strive with Moses because there is no water.

3 (J). The people murmur against Moses because there is no water.

4-6 (E) (J). Moses, at the bidding of Yahweh, smites the rock in Horeb, and water comes forth.

7 a, c (J). The place is called Massah, . . . because the Israelites tempted Yahweh.

7 b (E). [The place is called] Meribah, because the Israelites strove with Yahweh.

Sources, &c. In Num. xx. 1-13 a second version of this story is given, compiled chiefly from J and P. In Numbers Meribah is at Kadesh; Moses strikes the rock in anger, with Aaron's rod taken from the Tabernacle (cf. Num. xvii. 10); and on account of this anger Moses and Aaron are excluded from Canaan. The relation of the two versions is a difficult problem, of which no satisfactory solution has yet been proposed.

1. Rephidim. In Num. xxxiii. 14 the route is—wilderness of Sin, Dophkah, Alush, Rephidim. The last-named is only mentioned in Exod. xvii, xix, and Num. xxxiii. Its position is

2 to drink. Wherefore the people strove with Moses, and said, Give us water that we may drink. And Moses said unto them, Why strive ye with me? wherefore do ye
 3 tempt the LORD? [J] And the people thirsted there for water; and the people murmured against Moses, and said, Wherefore hast thou brought us up out of Egypt, to kill us and our children and our cattle with thirst?
 4 [E] And Moses cried unto the LORD, saying, What shall I do unto this people? they be almost ready to stone me.
 5 And the LORD said unto Moses, Pass on before the people, and take with thee of the elders of Israel; and thy rod, wherewith thou smotest the river, take in thine
 6 hand, and go. Behold, I will stand before thee there upon the rock in Horeb; and thou shalt smite the rock, and there shall come water out of it, that the people may drink. And Moses did so in the sight of the elders of 7 Israel. [J] And he called the name of the place ^a Massah, [E] and ^b Meribah, because of the striving of the children not known, but it must have been somewhere near Sinai—unless the whole section is misplaced, and Rephidim, with the Meribah of Numbers and Deuteronomy, is at Kadesh.

2. tempt, from the root NSH, translated 'prove' in xv. 25, xvi. 4; there Yahweh proved Israel, here vice versa.

5. wherewith thou smotest the river: cf. vii. 20.

6. the rock in Horeb. There is nothing to indicate what rock is meant, and the parallel account in Numbers is equally vague. For Horeb see iii. 1.

7. Massah . . . because they tempted. Massah from NSH; cf. on verse 2. The place is unknown; it is only mentioned elsewhere Deut. vi. 16, ix. 22, xxxiii. 8; see next note.

Meribah . . . because of the striving. Meribah is from the root RYBh, 'to strive.' In Num. xx. 13 'the waters of Meribah' are so called 'because the Israelites strove with Yahweh.' In Num. xx, xxvii. 14, Deut. xxxii. 51, Meribah is at Kadesh—a position which would suit the neighbourhood of Amalek; see verse 8. In the reference to Massah and Meribah in of Israel, [J] and because they tempted the LORD, saying, Is the LORD among us, or not?

[E] Then came Amalek, and fought with Israel in 8 Rephidim. And Moses said unto Joshua, Choose us 9 out men, and go out, fight with Amalek: to-morrow I will stand on the top of the hill with the rod of God in mine hand. So Joshua did as Moses had said to him, 10 and fought with Amalek: and Moses, Aaron, and Hur Deut. xxxiii. 8, Yahweh 'proves' Levi. Levi may stand for Moses and Aaron; or the passage may refer to another version of the story, now lost, but originally connected with xv. 25.

xvii. 8-16. THE DEFEAT OF AMALEK.

(A narrative from E.)

8-13 (E). Amalek attacks Israel. Joshua leads the army, while Moses secures victory by going to the top of 'the hill' and holding up his rod. When he is tired Aaron and Hur hold up his hands. The battle lasts till sunset, and Amalek is completely defeated.

14 (R). The Divine determination to exterminate Amalek is to be recorded in a book.

15, 16 (E). Moses builds an altar, Yahweh-nissi.

Sources, &c. Probably this incident, like the preceding, originally stood at a later stage of the story; a struggle with Amalek appears in Num. xiv. 43, 45, and there Amalek is rather in the neighbourhood of Kadesh than in that of Sinai. At the same time a nomad tribe is quite capable of raids at a distance from its usual home; cf. on verse 9.

xvii. 8. Amalek, a nomad tribe of the wilderness south of Palestine; cf. on Gen. xiv. 7.

Rephidim. See on verse 1.

9. Joshua, mentioned for the first time, without any description, father's name, &c., as if he were a well-known person. Later on, however, xxxiii. 11, E, he appears as 'his [Moses'] attendant, Joshua, the son of Nun, a young man'—as if he were being introduced for the first time. Probably in E this incident originally followed that in xxxiii; cf. above, Sources, also what is said of Hur in verse 10. The name probably means 'Yahweh saves,' in Num. xiii. 16, Hoshea. Jesus is a form of Joshua.

the hill, like 'the rock' in verse 6: there is nothing to show what hill is meant.

the rod of God. Cf. iv. 17.

10. Aaron. The first place where we can be reasonably sure

11 went up to the top of the hill. And it came to pass, when Moses held up his hand, that Israel prevailed: and 12 when he let down his hand, Amalek prevailed. But Moses' hands were heavy; and they took a stone, and put it under him, and he sat thereon; and Aaron and Hur stayed up his hands, the one on the one side, and the other on the other side; and his hands were steady that the mention of Aaron belongs to the ancient tradition, and is not due to the editor; but cf. on verse 11.

Hur, introduced, like Joshua, without any description, either because originally Hur played a larger part in E, and had been described in some omitted passage, or because he was a well-known figure of ancient tradition. He is only mentioned elsewhere in xxiv. 14, again in conjunction with Aaron, unless he is to be identified with the Hur of xxxi. 2, the grandfather of Bezaleel, or the Hur, king of Midian in Num. xxxi. 8. Persons of this name are also mentioned 1 Kings iv. 8, Neh. iii. 9. According to Josephus, Ant. III. ii. 4, vi. 1, he was the husband of Miriam. EB. suggest a connexion with the Egyptian god Horus. Another suggestion (Meyer) is that he, as eponymous ancestor, represents the Horites, the ancient inhabitants of the south of Canaan.

11. his hand. The versions and the Samaritan text have 'hands,' as in verse 12. But there seem to be two views in these verses: according to one, Moses holds up the rod, obviously in one hand; according to the other, Moses holds up both hands, i. e. assumes an attitude of prayer. It seems hardly reasonable to suggest that he held the rod first in one hand, then in the other; if so, why should Aaron and Hur hold up both hands at once? Perhaps in the original tradition Moses held up the rod and only Hur supported him; then the use of the two hands was introduced to make room for Aaron.

he were to carry it out. Actually punishment was inflicted upon Amalek by Gideon, Judges vi. 3, 33 ; Saul, 1 Sam. xv ; and David, 1 Sam. xxx, 2 Sam. viii. 12.

15, 16. Virtually equivalent to 14 ; the altar with its name and (probably) its inscription serves the same purpose as the 'book,' and is no doubt original, verse 14 being an editorial addition.

15. Yahweh-nissi, marg., That is, Yahweh my banner. Perhaps the name Yahweh is an ensign. It is possible that the similarity of 'nissi' to NSH, the root of Massah, may account for the proximity of the two narratives.

16. The LORD hath sworn, taking the rendering, marg. Heb., A hand . . . upon the throne of Jah to denote a gesture which a king would use in taking an oath ; but both the rendering and the interpretation are more than doubtful. The other marg., Because there is a hand against the throne of the LORD is not much better. Probably by a very slight alteration ¹ of the text we should read, 'A hand on the banner of Yah.' In the original story the stone on which Moses sat may have been set up for the altar (Baentsch).

xviii. THE VISIT OF JETHRO.

(A narrative from E, with additions.)

1-7 (E). Jethro brings Zipporah and her two sons to Moses.

8-11 (R). Moses tells Jethro the marvellous doings of Yahweh, and Jethro gives praise to Him.

12 (E). Jethro makes a feast for the Israelite notables.

13-23 (E). Observing how Moses is burdened with judicial duties, Jethro advises him to appoint subordinates to take the lighter cases.

24-26 (E). Moses acts upon this advice.

27 (E). Jethro goes home.

Sources, &c. The names 'God,' 'Jethro,' and other features show that the main narrative is E. It has been supplemented, but to what extent is not clear; nor can we be certain whether the editorial additions are based upon J. Cf. notes on verses 1, 8-12.

In Deut. i. 9-18 Moses reminds the people how he had made these arrangements, but he does not acknowledge his indebtedness to Jethro.

1. Jethro. See on iii. 1, the priest of Midian, the description of Moses' father-in-law in J (cf. ii. 16), inserted here by an editor.

how that the LORD had brought Israel out of Egypt. Also an editorial insertion, the main narrative in this chapter uses 'God'; cf. on verses 8-12, and see Sources.

2. Zipporah. See on ii. 21. This is the last time she is mentioned. It is curious that, as far as the extant narrative is concerned, neither Moses nor any one else takes any notice of the wife and two sons, after the bare announcement in verse 6. In J, ii. 22, which see, Moses has only one son, Gershom, and he takes his wife and son with him to Egypt, iv. 20.

after he had sent her away. The phrase is more obscure in Hebrew than in English; but the meaning seems to be that when Moses arrived in Egypt he sent his wife back to her father. The phrase is an editorial insertion intended to do away with the discrepancy between this chapter and iv. 20.

3. Gershom. See on ii. 22.

4. Eliezer, only here and in 1 Chron. xxiii. 15, 17, xxvi. 25, probably the same as the Eleazar who is frequently mentioned as Aaron's son; see vi. 23. There were several Israelites of this name, some of them priests or Levites.

at the mount of God: and he said unto Moses, I thy 6 father in law Jethro am come unto thee, and thy wife, and her two sons with her. And Moses went out to 7 meet his father in law, and did obeisance, and kissed him; and they asked each other of their welfare; and they came into the tent. [R] And Moses told his father 8 in law all that the LORD had done unto Pharaoh and to the Egyptians for Israel's sake, all the travail that had come upon them by the way, and how the LORD delivered them. And Jethro rejoiced for all the goodness 9 which the LORD had done to Israel, in that he had delivered them out of the hand of the Egyptians. And 10 Jethro said, Blessed be the LORD, who hath delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of Pharaoh; who hath delivered the people from under the hand of the Egyptians. Now I know that the 11 LORD is greater than all gods: yea, in the thing wherein they dealt proudly against them. [E] And Jethro, Moses' 12

6. and he said unto Moses, I thy father-in-law Jethro am come. A slight alteration in the text gives, 'And Moses was told, "Lo, thy father-in-law Jethro has come"'; this is supported by the Septuagint and other authorities, and may be correct.

7. and they came. The Samaritan text and some texts of the Septuagint read 'and he brought him'; other Septuagint texts have 'and he brought them.'

8-11. The use of Yahweh in these verses marks them out from the context; they may be from J, to which verse 7 is often ascribed; but in that case 'Jethro' in 9, 10 must be due to an editor, and the theology in 11 is hardly in the style of J. It is simpler to regard the whole as an editorial expansion.

11. they dealt proudly against them. 'They,' the gods of Egypt, identified with their worshippers; 'them,' the Israelites.

12. The Gentile priest offers a sacrifice, at which Aaron and, presumably, Moses are guests. Such a narrative implies an attitude towards Gentiles very different from that of the Priestly Code.

God: and Aaron came, and all the elders of Israel, to 13 eat bread with Moses' father in law before God. And it came to pass on the morrow, that Moses sat to judge the people: and the people stood about Moses from the 14 morning unto the evening. And when Moses' father in law saw all that he did to the people, he said, What is this thing that thou doest to the people? why sittest thou thyself alone, and all the people stand about thee from 15 morning unto even? And Moses said unto his father in law, Because the people come unto me to inquire of God:
 16 when they have a matter, they come unto me; and I judge between a man and his neighbour, and I make 17 them know the statutes of God, and his laws. And Moses' father in law said unto him, The thing that thou 18 doest is not good. Thou wilt surely wear away, both thou, and this people that is with thee: for the thing is too heavy for thee; thou art not able to perform it thyself 19 alone. Hearken now unto my voice, I will give thee counsel, and God be with thee: be thou for the people 20 to God-ward, and bring thou the causes unto God: and thou shalt teach them the statutes and the laws, and shalt shew them the way wherein they must walk, and the 21 work that they must do. Moreover thou shalt provide out of all the people able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating unjust gain; and place such over them, to be rulers of thousands, rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of thousands, &c. A familiar organization is here traced back to Moses. It is sometimes suggested that 'thousands,' &c., stood for larger and smaller groups, not for numbers. They would often, of course, be only approximate.

rulers of tens: and let them judge the people at all 22 seasons: and it shall be, that every great matter they shall bring unto thee, but every small matter they shall judge themselves: so shall it be easier for thyself, and they shall bear the burden with thee. If thou shalt do 23 this thing, and God command thee so, then thou shalt be able to endure, and all this people also shall go to their place in peace. So Moses hearkened to the voice of his 24 father in law, and did all that he had said. And Moses 25 chose able men out of all Israel, and made them heads over the people, rulers of thousands, rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens. And they judged the 26 people at all seasons: the hard causes they brought unto Moses, but every small matter they judged themselves.
 And Moses let his father in law depart; and he went his 27 way into his own land.

xix-xl. THE LAWGIVING AT SINAI.

xix. PREPARATIONS.

(A composite narrative, mostly J and E.)

1, 2 a (P). The Israelites arrive at Sinai.

2 b, 3 (E). Israel encamps before the Mount.

Moses' first ascent to commune with God.

Yahweh instructs him to tell the people . . .

4-6 a (R). Yahweh promises rewards for obedience.

6 b-9 a (E). Moses descends, and reports the words of Yahweh to the people, who promise obedience.

Moses reports the people's promise to Yahweh. [? Second Ascent.] Yahweh announces that He will appear in a thick cloud, and Moses is to . . .

9 b-10 a (R). Moses reports the people's promise to Yahweh, who bids Moses . . .

were gone forth out of the land of Egypt, the same day 2 came they into the wilderness of Sinai. And when they 10*b*-11*a* (E). . . go to the people and prepare them to behold Him on the third day.

11*b*-13*a* (J). Arrangements are to be made that no living thing touch the mount.

13*b* (E). When the trumpet gives a long blast the people are to come up to the mount.

14-17 (E). The people sanctify themselves ; there is a thunder-storm ; the trumpet sounds ; Moses brings the people to meet God.

18 (J). Yahweh descends to Sinai in fire and earthquake.

19 (E). The trumpet sounds louder and louder ; Moses speaks, and God answers him.

20-22 (J). Yahweh comes down to the top of Sinai, and calls Moses up to Him (third ascent of Moses). Yahweh instructs Moses to forbid the people to break through, and to command the priests to sanctify themselves.

23-24*a* (R). Moses reminds Yahweh that this has already been done. Yahweh bids him go down.

24*b*, 25 (J). Moses may come up, but not the priests and the people, lest Yahweh break forth upon them. Moses goes down to the people and says to them . . .

Sources, &c. The composite character of this chapter is obvious from the lack of coherence, consistence, and smooth sequence. There are abrupt transitions from 'Yahweh' to 'God' or vice versa, 3, 19, 20. In 3*a*, &c. Moses goes up to the mountain to speak to God ; in 3*b* Yahweh calls to him from the mountain ; in 10, 14 all the people are sanctified ; in 22, 24 only the priests, &c. It may be possible by the exercise of great ingenuity to construct a consistent and consecutive account of the goings and comings of Moses up and down the mountain, and of his reports from Yahweh to the people and vice versa ; but any one who attempts this task will soon feel that the original tradition must have been much more simple and dignified.

It is extremely difficult to analyse this chapter into its original sources, and the analysis in the text is only given as a fairly probable approximation to the actual facts. Cf. on 2, 3, 9, 10, 13, 16, 25.

1. the same day, lit. 'in that day.' As our text stands the day has not been given. The Hebrew cannot very well mean 'some time in the third month' ; but probably the day was stated in the original, and words have been dropped out, possibly because they conflicted with the later Jewish tradition that the Giving of the Law took place fifty days after the Passover.

2. And when they were departed from Rephidim, and were were departed from Rephidim, and were come to the wilderness of Sinai, they pitched in the wilderness; [E]and there Israel camped before the mount. And ³ Moses went up unto God, [J]and the LORD called unto him out of the mountain, saying, Thus shalt thou say to the house of Jacob, and tell the children of Israel; [R]Ye have seen what I did unto the Egyptians, and ⁴ how I bare you on eagles' wings, and brought you unto myself. Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, ⁵ and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me ^afrom among all peoples: for all the earth is mine: and ye shall be unto me a kingdom of ⁶ priests, and an holy nation. [E]These are the words come to the wilderness of Sinai, they pitched in the wilderness. The sequence of the narrative would be improved if these words were placed before verse 1; the two sentences may have been transposed in copying or in the process of compilation. The clause 'and they pitched in the wilderness' is omitted by the Septuagint.

3. God . . . LORD. The abrupt change of names indicates two different sources; moreover, in the first clause Moses goes up to God, and is on the mountain with Him; in the second Yahweh calls from the mountain to Moses. Apparently the original account of the interview at this point did not satisfy the later editor, and he substituted a revised version in 3 b-6.

4. how I bare you on eagles' wings. Cf. Deut. xxxii. 11. brought you unto myself, i. e. to Sinai to the holy mount, the sanctuary and dwelling of Yahweh.

5. a peculiar treasure. In Hebrew a single word, segullâ, commonly used of Israel as the chosen and precious possession of God; in Deut. vii. 6, xiv. 2, xxvi. 18 in the phrase people of segullâ; cf. Titus ii. 14, 1 Pet. ii. 9. In two very late passages the word is used of actual treasures, 1 Chron. xxix. 3; 'I have a treasure of my own of gold and silver,' Eccles. ii. 8.

all the earth is mine. The idea of Yahweh as Lord of all things is probably not older than the late monarchy.

6. a kingdom of priests. Cf. Isa. lxi. 5 f. 'Strangers shall stand and feed your flocks, and aliens shall be your plowmen and your vine-dressers. But ye shall be named the priests of Yahweh.'

7 which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel. And Moses came and called for the elders of the people, and set before them all these words which the LORD com-8 manded him. And all the people answered together, and said, All that the LORD hath spoken we will do.
 And Moses reported the words of the people unto the 9 LORD. And the LORD said unto Moses, Lo, I come

XX. 1-17. THE TEN COMMANDMENTS.

1, 2. Introduction.

3. I. Against the Worship of other Gods.

4-6. II. Against Images.

7. III. Against taking Yahweh's Name in vain.

8-11. IV. The Sabbath.

12. V. Filial Duty.

13. VI. Against Murder.

14. VII. Against Adultery.

15. VIII. Against Theft.

16. IX. Against False Witness.

17. X. Against Coveting.

Sources, &c. Another version of the Ten Commandments is given in Deut. v. 6-21. The two versions agree in substance, but differ considerably in wording and in the comments on the actual injunctions. The Septuagint of the two passages in each case differs similarly from the text it is supposed to translate. Another Hebrew text of the Ten Commandments has been recently discovered in a papyrus probably written in the second century A. D., and therefore much older than the earliest Hebrew manuscripts hitherto known. This text, the Papyrus Nash, differs from all those mentioned above. It is apparently another edition of the Exodus-version; but sometimes it follows Deuteronomy when the latter differs from Exodus, and sometimes it presents the peculiarities of one or other of the Septuagint texts. The other versions, Latin, Syriac, &c., and the Samaritan Hebrew

I am the LORD thy God, which brought thee out of 2
the land of Egypt, out of the house of ^a bondage.

text divide their support between the five texts mentioned above, and have other peculiarities of their own. Again, the form of the Commandments given in the quotations in the N.T. is not in absolute agreement with any of the above, e.g. Mark x. 19. Thus both Jews and Christians handled the wording of this section with great freedom. Cf. the notes on verses 8-11, 12, 17.

A different set of Ten Commandments is given in xxxiv. 10-28 (which see), J's account of what was written on the two tables of stone.

The order of the Commandments differs in the various texts, e.g. we have 'Thou shalt do no murder. Thou shalt not commit adultery. Thou shalt not steal' in the Hebrew Text of Exodus and Deuteronomy; but 'Thou shalt not commit adultery. Thou shalt not steal. Thou shalt do no murder' is read by the Vatican MS. of the Septuagint in Exodus; while 'Adultery, Murder, Theft' is the order in Philo¹, the Papyrus Nash, and Rom. xiii. 9.

The number 'ten' is given by the use of the phrase, 'The Ten Words,' E.V. 'Commandments,' in reference to this section in Deut. x. 4, and in reference to J's 'Words'² in xxxiv. 28. But the phrase is not used in chap. xx, or in Deut. v, or anywhere else in the Bible; and we cannot be sure that the original author intended the number to be 'ten.' As the basis of the decimal notation commonly in use, 'ten' is a familiar round number; but no special sanctity attaches to it in the O.T. Including 'Remember,' 'Honour,' and various 'Thou shalt's' and 'Thou shalt not's,'³ there are fourteen verbs each with a clause of its own⁴, setting forth an injunction.

Opinions differ as to how the material of this section is to be divided in order to give just ten commandments. The arrangement in the summary above is familiar to us; it is that of the English Prayer Book, the Greek Church, and the Reformed Church. The Roman Church and the Lutherans make a single commandment of our I and II, the injunction to worship Yahweh only and the prohibition of images; and resolve our X into two; thus IX, 'Thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's wife (so Roman Ch. with Deuteronomy, but Lutherans "house" with Exodus); X, Thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's house (Roman Ch. but Lutherans

² But see on xxxiv. 28.

³ 'Thou shalt labour' is expressed by a single word in Hebrew, and so with the similar clauses.

⁴ In verse 9 there are two verbs to the clause, we only count one of them.

3 Thou shalt have none other gods ^a before me.

^a Or, beside me

“wife”), &c.’ While the Jews make our Introduction into their First Commandment, and combine our I and II into their Second Commandment.

The subsequent inscription upon two tables indicates a division into two groups; these are variously reckoned as I—IV religious duties, and V—X moral duties; or I—V religious, and VI—X moral. The latter classification is defended on the ground that respect for parents was a matter of religion in ancient times, and the commandment has even been regarded, somewhat unnecessarily, as a relic of ancestor worship.

The original form of the Decalogue was probably not that in which we now have it. The comments show the influence of Deuteronomy and the Priestly Code, and were later additions to the ancient Ten Words, which, according to the analysis indicated by the initials in our text, were as follows:—

- I. Thou shalt have none other gods beside me.
- II. Thou shalt not make unto thee a graven image.
- III. Thou shalt not take the name of Yahweh thy God in vain.
- IV. Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy.
- V. Honour thy father and thy mother.
- VI. Thou shalt do no murder.
- VII. Thou shalt not commit adultery.
- VIII. Thou shalt not steal.
- IX. Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour.
- X. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbour’s house.

The origin of the Decalogue is doubtful; it was not composed by the author of either J or E. The original version is often supposed to have been an ancient code, either appropriated independently by E and Deut.; or first used by E and then borrowed from E by Deut.; or, again, it may owe its present position to one of the editors of the Pentateuch, probably the editor who combined J and E.

Many modern scholars are inclined to regard the original Decalogue as the work of Moses. It is regarded as simple and primitive, and the great importance attached to it both here and in Deuteronomy is supposed to point to its antiquity. On the other hand, it is maintained that the pre-exilic literature does not lay any special stress on the Sabbath, and that images of Yahweh do not seem to have been regarded as illegitimate before the time of Amos and Hosea. Hence the composition of the code has also been assigned to the eighth or seventh century B. C.

3. before me, better as R. V. marg., ‘beside me,’ lit. ‘to my face,’ ‘in my presence.’

Thou shalt not make unto thee a graven image, [D] nor ⁴ the likeness of any form that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth: thou shalt not bow down thyself unto them, nor ⁵ serve them: for I the LORD thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, upon the third and upon the fourth generation of them that hate me; and shewing mercy unto ^a thou- ⁶ sands, of them that love me and keep my commandments.

[E] Thou shalt not take the name of the LORD thy God ⁷ ^b in vain; for the LORD will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name ^b in vain.

^a Or, a thousand generations See Deut. vii. 9.

^b Or, for vanity or falsehood

4. a graven image, pesel, properly an image hewn from wood or stone, as distinguished from a massekâ or 'molten image'; but here the addition 'nor the likeness of any form,' &c., shows that it is used of idols in general. The prohibition extends, of course, to images of Yahweh. The verse has often been understood to forbid the making of any kind of sculpture; but it should probably be combined with verse 5, so as to mean 'Thou shalt not make images for the purpose of worshipping them.'

in heaven above may include birds, and idols representing the heavenly bodies as deities.

the water under the earth. According to the Semitic cosmogony the earth rested on an abyss of water, peopled by primaeval monsters.

5. a jealous God. 'Jealous,' qannâ, is only used of God, though cognate words, 'jealousy,' 'to be jealous,' are also used of men. The emphasis is not so much on the mere feeling of discontent as in our 'jealous.' The Hebrew root is also used for 'zeal' and 'fury,' the just indignation of an injured man.

visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, a familiar article of the older Israelite faith, repudiated by Ezekiel xviii, &c., but nevertheless holding its ground in popular theology, John ix. 2.

6. unto thousands. We must understand as in R. V. marg., 'a thousand generations.'

7. in vain, for an unworthy purpose. The phrase would

8, 9 Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy. Six days 10 shalt thou labour, and do all thy work: but the seventh day is a sabbath unto the LORD thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy 11 cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates: [S] for in six days the LORD made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day:
 wherefore the LORD blessed the sabbath day, and hallowed it.

12 [E] Honour thy father and thy mother: that thy days apply to swearing falsely by the name of Yahweh, making vows in His name and not fulfilling them, and perhaps also to any light or blasphemous use of the name; cf. marg.

will not hold him guiltless, i. e. will punish him.

8-11. The wording of this commandment in Deuteronomy differs in many respects from that given here. After the command to hallow the Sabbath, there is added, 'As Yahweh thy God hath commanded thee.' Instead of 'nor thy cattle,' Deuteronomy reads 'nor thine ox, nor thine ass, nor any of thy cattle.' Instead of the reference to the Week of Creation, Deuteronomy has 'that thy slave and slave-girl may rest as well as thou'; Israel had been slaves in Egypt, and had been delivered, therefore Yahweh had ordained the observance of the Sabbath.

8. the Sabbath day. The Hebrew 'Sabbath' is from a root Sh B Th, denoting 'rest'; an observance of seventh days is found in Babylonia, but its relation to the Israelite Sabbath is uncertain; cf. further on Gen. ii. 1-3. The term 'Sabbath' is also applied to the Day of Atonement and the Seventh Year.

to keep it holy, i. e. a day specially devoted to Yahweh by abstinence from ordinary occupations. It must be remembered that the service of Yahweh was associated with cheerful social intercourse; the ordinary sacrifice was connected with a kind of dinner party, and the great sacred seasons were mostly festivals.

10. manservant . . . maidservant, male and female slaves.

stranger. See on xii. 19.

11. Cf. Gen. ii. 1-3. Here, however, Elohim has been replaced by Yahweh, to harmonize with verses 2, 5, and 7.

12. 'The first commandment with promise,' Eph. vi. 2. Here, again, Deuteronomy inserts 'as Yahweh thy God hath commanded thee,' and expands the second half of our verse.

may be long upon the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.

Thou shalt do no murder. 13

Thou shalt not commit adultery. 14

Thou shalt not steal. 15

Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour. 16

Thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's house, thou shalt 17

Honour, kabbēd, render obedience, service, and respect. In Num. xxii. 17 Balak offers 'honouring to honour' Balaam, who understands the offer to include gifts of gold and silver. Ancient nations laid great stress on filial duty and the authority of parents.

13. Thou shalt do no murder, i. e. slay unlawfully or unjustifiably. This is clearly the meaning. It is true that the Hebrew rendered 'do . . . murder,' RCH, is also used in the general sense of 'slay a man'; but O. T. expressly sanctions war and capital punishment.

14. commit adultery, sin with another man's wife. The prohibition would not interfere with polygamy or license as to concubines.

16. bear false witness, i. e. in a court of law. Such false witness has always been common in the East.

17. The corresponding verses, Deut. v. 20f., have a different list in a different order, with other changes in the wording; thus, 'Thou shalt not covet (HM Dh) thy neighbour's wife; nor shalt thou desire (*WH*¹) thy neighbour's house, his field, or his slave, or his slave-girl; his ox, or his ass, or anything that is thy neighbour's.' The Septuagint agrees with the Hebrew Deuteronomy both in Exodus and Deuteronomy, except that after 'ass' it adds in both places 'nor any of his cattle.'

covet. This commandment differs from the rest in dealing not with overt acts, but with inner feelings, with the self-seeking inordinate desire which is the source of wrongful acts. Its presence in the Decalogue indicates a high standard of morals. On account of these two features, the difference from the other commandments, and the high level of ethics, it has been suggested that this verse did not belong to the original Decalogue, and that it may have replaced a prohibition of usury. The suggestion is probably wrong; but 'coveting' may emphasize not so much the feelings as the practical steps which might be taken to give effect to them. This commandment would thus defeat the ingenuity of immoral casuistry, which might evade the previous prohibitions.

house. Probably the original commandment ended here (cf. Sources, &c.), and 'house,' as often in the O. T., meant 'household,' in fact all that is enumerated in the rest of the verse, wife, slaves, beasts, &c. The transposition of 'house' and 'wife' in Deuteronomy indicates that 'house' was understood of the building only; this mistake may have caused the alteration.

XX. 18-21. EFFECT OF THE THEOPHANY ON THE PEOPLE (E).

18, 19. The people, terrified, ask that God may not speak to them directly, but through Moses.

20. Moses reassures them.

21. The people stand afar off, but Moses goes up to God.

Sources, &c. In the Elohist Document xx. 18 was probably the immediate continuation of xix. 18; cf. on verse 19.

trembled, and stood afar off, i. e. remained standing at a distance. If we follow R. V. marg., 'were moved, &c., we might render 'withdrew to a distance.' The Septuagint omits 'trembled.'

19. let not God speak with us. These words imply that so far God had not spoken, and indicate that the Ten Commandments were not included in the document to which this verse belonged.

xx. 22—xxiii. 33. THE BOOK OF THE COVENANT.

This title is derived from xxiv. 7, which, when it was written, probably referred to a part of this section. This section is also described in xxiv. 3 as 'judgements' and 'words,' and in xxiv. 4 it is said that the 'words of Yahweh' were committed to writing by Moses.

xxi. 1. 'Now these are the judgements which thou shalt set before them,' is the heading of an ancient collection of 'judgements,' including xxi. 2—xxii. 17, and perhaps also xxii. 25 ff., xxiii. 4 f. Then the 'words of Yahweh' will consist of xx. 22—26, xxii. 18—24, 28—31, xxiii. 1—3, 6—19. But 'Judgements' and 'Words' have been somewhat annotated, and xxiii. 20—33 has been added as a concluding exhortation.

Both the 'Judgements' and the 'Words' are amongst the oldest extant remains of Israelite literature, older than either the Jehovistic or the Elohist document. They represent the main interests of the people as agricultural; they are designed for farmers, men who cultivate their own corn-land, vineyards, and olive-orchards under comparatively settled conditions. They are, therefore, later by some time than the Israelite conquest of Palestine, and earlier than the development of more complex social conditions under the later Monarchy. They have been dated as early as the eleventh century B. C., immediately before the reign of Saul, or in the reign of Solomon, or somewhat later. Many of the laws themselves are much older than these codes.

Most of the 'Words' also occur in xxxiv. 14—26.

The history of the compilation of this section is probably somewhat as follows:—

The 'Words' were inserted here by the Elohist writer, and also in a somewhat similar place in the Jehovistic Document. The 'Judgements' were originally inserted by the Elohist Writer either as an address of Moses at the close of his life, when unto the children of Israel, [R] Ye yourselves have seen 23 that I have talked with you from heaven. Ye shall not make other gods with me ; gods of silver, or gods of gold, 24 ye shall not make unto you. [E] An altar of earth thou

Israel was encamped in the Plains of Moab, or in connexion with the farewell address of Joshua (Joshua xxiv) at Shechem. When the Deuteronomic legislation was added to the Twofold Document, J E, it took the place of the 'Judgements,' which were transferred to the sojourn at Sinai and combined with the 'Words,' notes being added to both.

The concluding exhortation includes elements from various sources, and has been built up gradually. As it makes no reference to the two Codes, its original substance may have been rather a part of a farewell address of Moses than an epilogue to the 'Judgements.'

It has also been suggested that originally the 'Words' only stood in xxxiv, and were introduced here later.

Various features in the wording of 'Judgements' are commonly held to show that they were inserted by the Elohistic Writer in his work.

A remarkable feature of these 'Judgements' is that they present many close parallels to the Code Hammurabi ; see notes on xxi. 2, 15 ff., 22, 26-32, xxii. 6-12. Cf. Introduction, pp. 13 f.

xx. 22-26. PUBLIC WORSHIP.

22 a. Introduction.

22 b, 23 (R). No idols of silver or gold must be made.

24. An altar of earth for sacrifices may be erected wherever God has manifested Himself.

25. Stone altars must only be built of unhewn stones.

26. There must be no steps up to altars.

23. Ye shall not make other gods with me. As the English version indicates by placing 'other gods' in italics, the sentence is incomplete ; the verb 'make' has no object. Some word or words have dropped out of the text, but we have no means of determining with certainty what they were, although it is probable that our version gives substantially the right meaning.

gods of silver and gods of gold. The later editors of the Pentateuch would understand this as a general prohibition of images of all kinds, whether of Yahweh or other gods ; but originally only gold and silver images may have been forbidden, as too luxurious innovations in contrast to the more simple, primitive images of wood or stone.

24 ff. These verses, which contemplate a multiplicity of altars shalt make unto me, and shalt sacrifice thereon thy burnt offerings, and thy peace offerings, thy sheep, and thine oxen: in every place where I ^a record my name I will come unto thee and I will bless thee. And if thou ²⁵ make me an altar of stone, thou shalt not build it of hewn stones: for if thou lift up thy tool upon it, thou hast polluted it. Neither shalt thou go up by steps ²⁶ of earth or unhewn stones, without steps, indicate a system of worship much simpler, less elaborate, and less rigid than that of the Priestly Code with its single elaborate brazen altar.

peace offerings. The shelem or peace-offering is mentioned here for the first time. It was the ordinary sacrifice, often denoted by the general term 'sacrifice,' zebah; see on x. 25. The E. V. rendering 'peace-offering' suggests a connexion with shâlôm in the sense of 'peace,' perhaps a sacrifice celebrating or promoting peace or good-will between man and God, or amongst men. Shelem, however, may connect with the use of the root Sh LM in the sense of 'repay,' hence 'a thank-offering.'

record my name, better as R. V. marg., 'cause my name to be remembered,' i. e. by sacrifice and other ritual.

where I record. The Syriac Version reads, 'where thou caust to be remembered,' a reading preferred by some scholars. The meaning would then be that God would respond to the worship of Israel wherever it was offered. If we adhere to the reading 'where I cause to be remembered,' the reference will be to sacred places like Bethel, where God manifested Himself to the Patriarchs and others.

25. thou hast polluted it. An altar of unhewn stones was erected by Elijah on Carmel, 1 Kings xviii. 31 f.; compare also the heap of stones piled up by Jacob and Laban at Mizpah, Gen. xxxi. 46. A special sanctity attached to 'monoliths' or large stones in their natural state; hence the use of such stones as maçceboth or sacred pillars; see on xxiv. 4. In Gen. xxviii. 22

Jacob says of the stone that had served for his pillow that it should be 'God's house.' Such a stone was 'polluted,' i. e. lost its sanctity by being hewn, and thus assimilated to ordinary stones hewn from a quarry. The explanation is sometimes given that the idea of the loss of sanctity through hewing arose at a time when the deity was supposed to dwell in the stone, and to be driven out by the blows of a tool. Compare also the prohibition of graven images in verse 4. Solomon built his temple with stones brought ready hewn from the quarry, a kind of compromise, 1 Kings vi. 7.

26. This verse implies that the worshipper wore some slight and simple form of ritual vestment.

Solomon's altars did not conform to the regulations of this paragraph; they were of gold and of brass, 1 Kings vii. 48, viii. 64. Our paragraph may be based on customs more ancient than Solomon, and may come from a school in the Northern Kingdom which regarded Solomon's institutions as heretical innovations. In Isa. lxxv. 3 an altar of brick is spoken of as if it were objectionable. Cf. on xxvii. 1 ff.

XXI. I-II. ON HEBREW SLAVES.

I. Introduction.

2-6. A purchased Hebrew slave is to be set free after serving six years. If he was married when purchased his wife goes with him; but if his owner has given him a wife and there are children, the owner retains the wife and children. If the slave prefers to remain in slavery rather than leave his family, he may become a permanent slave through a religious ceremony.

7-11. The above law does not apply to a daughter whom her father has sold as a slave. Her owner must either marry her himself, or give her in marriage to his son, with all the rights of a wife; or he must let her be bought back again. He may not sell her to a foreigner. If she is stinted of her due, she becomes free without payment.

1. judgements: apparently here laws on civil questions, as distinguished from the previous ritual regulations; but cf. xxiii. 14 ff.

2-II. There are ten clauses introduced by 'if' or 'and if.'

2. Hebrew. Usually the name used for Israelites by foreigners serve: and in the seventh he shall go out free for nothing. If he come in by himself, he shall go out by 3 himself: if he be married, then his wife shall go out with him. If his master give him a wife, and she bear him 4 sons or daughters; the wife and her children shall be her master's, and he shall go out by himself. But if the 5 servant shall plainly say, I love my master, my wife, and my children; I will not go out free: then his master 6 shall bring him unto ^a God, and shall bring him to the or by any one speaking or writing from the point of view of a foreigner, e. g. i. 15. Here, perhaps, of an Israelite as distinguished from a foreigner. The explanation that 'Hebrew' here refers to members of cognate tribes, not actually Israelite, is less likely.

servant, R. V. marg. bondman, rather 'slave.' An Israelite might be sold for a slave by his father, verse 7; or become a slave to a creditor to whom he owed a debt which he could not pay, 2 Kings iv. 1; or might forfeit his liberty by committing a crime. Exod. xxii. 3.

in the seventh he shall go out free. Deut. xv. 12-18 repeats this law, extending it to female slaves, and enjoining the owner to make a liberal present to the emancipated slave. The provisions about the wife and children are omitted. Lev. xxv. 39-41 lays down that Israelites are not to be treated as slaves, though they may be subjected to some milder form of bondage, to be terminated by the Jubilee.

The corresponding law, 117, in the Code of Hammurabi, see p. 13, lays down that when a man's wife, son, or daughter become slaves through his inability to pay his debts, they shall only serve for three years.

In Jer. xxxiv we have an account of an attempt to act on the lines of these laws, which suggests that, in Israel at any rate, they were for the most part a dead letter.

3. if he be married. The passage conveys the impression that the purchaser of the husband would at the same time acquire the wife, but this is not expressly stated.

4. If his master give him a wife. The context implies that this wife would be a slave owned by the master.

i. c. to some sanctuary where the priests acted as judges, as was often the case in ancient times. Elsewhere 'unto God' usually means 'to a sanctuary.' But the rest of the verse implies that the door referred to was that of the master's house, so that the sanctuary here would be the doorpost or its neighbourhood. In ancient times a special sanctity attached to the door and its appurtenances, the threshold, doorpost, &c. The household images were about it or near it; or the household gods were thought of as dwelling there. Hence the formula and the custom are survivals of a time when these ideas still prevailed, and when the original words 'unto Elohim' meant 'unto the household deities.' This meaning had been forgotten before the Pentateuch was compiled, but was still known to the author of Deuteronomy, who therefore omits the words 'unto God,' xv. 17.

shall bore his ear through with an awl. Deut. xv. 17 directs that the awl shall be thrust through the ear into the door, which suggests that the idea of the ceremony was the permanent attachment of the slave to his owner's household. The piercing of the ears of slaves was a common practice in antiquity, possibly to symbolize the duty of obedience, as the ear was the organ of hearing.

7. maidservant . . . menservants. Male and female slaves; cf. verse 2.

she shall not go out. The succeeding verses show that it is assumed that a female slave will become wife or concubine to her owner or to his son, and therefore a permanent member of the family. The altered provision in Deuteronomy (see verse 2) corresponds to the more advanced social conditions of the close of the Monarchy, and implies large households with numerous female slaves, besides the wives or concubines of the men of the family.

8. who hath espoused her to himself. The alternative reading is rendered by the R.V. marg. so that he hath not espoused her, but it is doubtful whether it can have this meaning.

himself, then shall he let her be redeemed: to sell her unto a strange people he shall have no power, seeing he hath dealt deceitfully with her. And if he espouse her 9 unto his son, he shall deal with her after the manner of daughters. If he take him another wife; her ^a food, 10 her raiment, and her duty of marriage, shall he not diminish. And if he do not these three unto her, then 11 shall she go out for nothing, without money.

There is much difference of opinion as to how this verse read originally, and as to what it means. As to this particular clause we may choose between the following interpretations. Having bought a girl with a view to marriage or concubinage, and changing his mind—(i) the owner may not sell her, but must let her family buy her back. (ii) If the owner has not actually made her his wife or concubine, she may be sold or returned to her family, but may not be sold to a foreigner. (iii) Because the owner has made her his wife or concubine, he may not sell her, but must return her to her family.

Of course these views are not simply interpretations of the same Hebrew, but involve different theories as to what the original Hebrew was. Cf. also the following notes.

then shall he let her be redeemed, i. e. bought back by her father, by repayment of the price paid for her. Even if the father had used the money, e. g. to pay a debt, the family might be expected to provide it. It is also proposed to translate 'let her be purchased,' i. e. by some other Israelite.

unto a strange people, i. e. a foreigner, or, according to some, any family other than her own; cf. above.

hath dealt deceitfully with her, either by not fulfilling his engagement to take her as a concubine, or by repudiating her after she had become his concubine.

9. deal with her after the manner of daughters, treat her as a daughter and not as a slave; or perhaps, more particularly, make such provision for her marriage with his son as he would make if he were giving his own daughter in marriage.

10 f. If he take him another wife. Without actually severing his connexion with the girl as concubine, he might take another concubine, and ill-treat and neglect the former. In that case she might return to her own family, and her owner could not claim repayment of the purchase-money.

xxi. 12-32. ON INJURIES TO THE PERSON.

12-17. The following offences are to be punished with DEATH :—

12-14. Murder. A man who has slain another by accident may take refuge at the altar¹, but there is no sanctuary for the murderer.

15 f. Ill-treatment of, or disrespect to, Parents.

20 f., 26 f. Injury inflicted on a slave. No punishment, however, is to be inflicted on a man who has flogged a slave to death, if he or she does not actually die under the master's hand.

22. Causing miscarriage.

[23-7, see above]

28-32. Injury inflicted by an ox. Various penalties, according to whether the ox was known to be dangerous (cf. above); and according to the status of the victim.

12. Cf. Gen. ix. 6; Exod. xx. 13. The murderer would usually be put to death by the 'avengers of blood,' the kinsfolk of the victim, Deut. xix. 12; Num. xxxv. 19.

13. if a man lie not in wait. The wording might, according to our ideas, exclude cases where a man killed another in a fight, not intending to proceed to such extremities, but 18 f. suggests that such slaying would have been regarded by this code as murder. We find only two alternatives, murder or accidental homicide; our 'manslaughter' is not recognized, although verse 30 admits a minor penalty for indirect homicide.

God deliver him into his hand. Rather, 'God hath brought it about through his instrumentality,' i. e. without any intention on the part of the slayer. Primitive faith was quick to discern the workings of the Divine Providence. Cf. the 'Act of God' in English law.

15. Similarly Hammurabi ordains that if a son strikes his father his hands shall be cut off.

16. The corresponding ordinance of Hammurabi is that any one who kidnaps a boy shall be put to death.

18-19. Hammurabi directs that, if one man injures another in a quarrel, he shall take an oath that he did not intend to hurt him, and shall pay the doctor.

Verses 23-25 should follow verse 19; see below.

20-21. It is fairly certain that these verses and verses 26 and 27 are a mitigation of more primitive custom which gave the master absolute control over his slaves; including power of life and death. Thus the harshness does not belong to the author of these laws; their point is the limitation of the master's rights; the intention of the legislator is humane, and his provisions for the welfare of slaves were not restricted by lack of humanity, but

Verses 26 and 27 should follow verse 21; see below.

22. For a similar offence Hammurabi prescribes ten shekels compensation if the woman is free. The same condition is implied by the context here.

according as the woman's husband shall lay upon him . . . as the judges determine. If we accept this translation, we must understand it to mean that the claim of the husband is to be subject to the approval of the judges. The phrase, 'he shall pay as the judges determine,' may be a later addition intended to meet the difficulty that the husband's claim might easily be exorbitant. But it is doubtful whether the R. V. is a possible translation, and whether the Hebrew makes sense as it stands. A slight alteration of the Hebrew would give, 'so he shall pay for the miscarriage.'

23-25. These verses are clearly the sequel of verse 19, and not of verse 22. The transposition was due to the phrase 'if any mischief follow.' A scribe, attending to the words and not to the general sense, thought that this phrase must refer to the 'and yet no mischief follow' of verse 22, and altered the order accordingly.

The principle of these verses—Lex Talionis, 'tit for tat,' 'making the punishment fit the offence'—is obvious, and is more or less in evidence in the laws and customs of most peoples, especially in the earlier stages of civilization. There are many applications of it in the Code of Hammurabi. Thus if a man has deprived a noble of an eye, or a tooth, or maimed him, the culprit is to lose an eye, a tooth, or to be maimed, respectively. But these injuries inflicted on an ordinary freeman¹ may be atoned for by money compensation. Cf. Lev. xxiv. 20; Deut. xix. 21.

¹ The words represented by 'noble,' 'ordinary freeman,' are variously rendered in different translations of the Code; but it seems clear that two social grades are distinguished above the slaves.

And if a man smite the eye of his servant, or the eye of his maid, and destroy it; he shall let him go free for his eye's sake. And if he smite out his manservant's tooth, or his maidservant's tooth; he shall let him go free for his tooth's sake.

And if an ox gore a man or a woman, that they die, the ox shall be surely stoned, and his flesh shall not be eaten; but the owner of the ox shall be quit. But if the ox were wont to gore in time past, and it hath been testified to his owner, and he hath not kept him in, but that he hath killed a man or a woman; the ox shall be stoned, and his owner also shall be put to death. If there be laid on him a ransom, then he shall give for the 26f. These verses should follow verse 20, of which they are the natural sequel. The transposition was probably—in some way not easy to discover—due to the interference with the original order by moving verses 23-25 out of their proper place. When a scribe once begins to alter the arrangement of paragraphs in a document he is copying, anything is possible.

Hammurabi requires that any one who deprives a slave of an eye or maims a limb shall pay half his value to his owner¹.

28-32. Hammurabi lays down that no claim can be made against the owner of an ox which has killed a man, unless the owner knew it was dangerous, and failed to take proper precautions. When he has been thus careless, he must pay a fixed compensation, so much for a freeman, less for a slave.

28. the ox shall be surely stoned, and his flesh shall not be eaten. The ox is regarded as a murderer, and its flesh is considered unclean. Cf. Gen. ix. 5, 'Your blood, the blood of your lives, will I require at the hand of every beast . . . and at the hand of man.'

30. A case of wergeld or substitution of compensation for Blood-revenge. As this offence is not included in the list of capital crimes in verses 12-17, we may conclude that it was usual to accept compensation.

redemption of his life whatsoever is laid upon him.

31 Whether he have gored a son, or have gored a daughter, according to this judgement shall it be done unto him.

32 If the ox gore a manservant or a maidservant; he shall give unto their master thirty shekels of silver, and the ox shall be stoned.

33 And if a man shall open a pit, or if a man shall dig a pit and not cover it, and an ox or an ass fall therein, 34 the owner of the pit shall make it good; he shall give money unto the owner of them, and the dead beast shall be his.

35 And if one man's ox hurt another's, that he die; then they shall sell the live ox, and divide the price of it; and 36 the dead also they shall divide. Or if it be known that the ox was wont to gore in time past, and his owner hath not kept him in; he shall surely pay ox for ox, and the dead beast shall be his own.

whatsoever is laid upon him, probably by the kinsfolk of the person killed, as in verse 22. Custom and public opinion would check exorbitant demands.

32. thirty shekels. A shekel contained rather less silver than our half-crown, but its purchasing power was very much greater; e.g. in 2 Kings vii. 1, under circumstances which could tend to raise prices, a shekel bought a peck and a half of flour. An adult slave in the United States of America in the first half of the nineteenth century often sold for from £100 to £150 and upwards.

the ox shall be stoned. As far as the animal is concerned the killing of a slave is more or less murder; cf. on verse 28.

xxi. 33—xxii. 17. ON OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY.

Punishment or compensation is prescribed as follows:—

xxi. 33 f. Pit left unfenced. The owner must purchase the carcase of an ox or ass killed by falling into it, at the value it had while living.

it; he shall pay five oxen for an ox, and four sheep for 35 f. Vicious ox. If the character of the ox was not previously known, and it kills another ox, the surviving ox is to be sold, and the price, together with the carcase of the dead ox, to be divided between the two owners. But if the ox was known to be vicious, he must purchase the carcase, by providing a live ox.

xxii. 1-4. Theft. If a man has stolen an ox or a sheep, and killed or sold it, he shall pay five oxen for an ox, and four sheep for a sheep. But if he is caught with the animal in his possession, he shall restore it, and provide another like it. If the thief has nothing to pay, he is to be sold as a slave.

A burglar, caught in the act, may be put to death during the night, but not after sunrise.

5. Trespass. If a man turns his beast into another man's field or vineyard he shall make full restitution.

6. Arson. Restitution must be made.

7-9. Loss of money or goods entrusted to a man for safe keeping. If the custodian is at fault he must pay double. (Cf. notes.)

10-13. Loss of, or injury to, an animal entrusted to a man for safe keeping. If the animal dies, or is injured, or is lost by some unknown cause, the custodian may clear himself by an oath, and shall not be held responsible. If it is stolen he must compensate the owner. If it is torn in pieces the custodian is not to be held responsible if he produces the carcase.

14, 15. Death or injury to a borrowed or hired animal. If the animal is under the control of the hirer he shall make restitution, but not if it is under the control of its owner.

16, 17. Seduction. The seducer must marry the girl, or pay compensation.

xxi. 33. A more correct rendering would be, 'If a man open or dig a pit, and leave it uncovered,' &c. The 'open' refers to the uncovering of an existing pit, the 'dig' to the making of a new one.

xxii. 1-4. A law about robbery in general has been inserted in the middle of the law about the theft of an ox or an ass. The two should be separated thus:—

Theft of ox or ass. Verses 1, 3 b, 4. If a man steal an ox or a sheep, and kill or sell it, he shall pay five oxen for an ox, and four sheep for a sheep. He must make restitution; if he have nothing, then he shall be sold for his theft. If the theft be found in his hand alive, ox, or ass, or sheep, he shall pay double.

Robbery. Verses 2, 3 a. If a thief be found breaking in, and be mortally hurt, it shall be justifiable homicide; but after sunrise it shall be murder.

- 2 a sheep. ^a If the thief be found breaking in, and be smitten that he die, there shall be no ^b bloodguiltiness for him. If the sun be risen upon him, there shall be bloodguiltiness for him: he should make restitution; if he have nothing, then he shall be sold for his theft. If the theft be found in his hand alive, whether it be ox, or ass, or sheep; he shall pay double.
- 5 If a man shall cause a field or vineyard to be eaten, and shall let his beast loose, and it feed in another man's field; of the best of his own field, and of the best of his own vineyard, shall he make restitution.
- 6 If fire break out, and catch in thorns, so that the shocks of corn, or the standing corn, or the field, be consumed; he that kindled the fire shall surely make restitution.
- 7 If a man shall deliver unto his neighbour money or Hammurabi's law about stealing animals is only partly legible. In his code housebreaking and brigandage are punished with death.

there shall be no bloodguiltiness, i. e. the relatives of the thief shall not be entitled to claim blood-revenge against the slayer.

4. pay double: cf. analysis above, also verse 6.

5. Hammurabi prescribes a fine or scale of compensation for similar trespasses.

another man's field. After these words we should add, with the Septuagint and the Samaritan text, 'he shall make compensation from his own field according to the produce thereof, and if he has caused the whole field to be eaten' (then follows as in our text) 'of the best of his own field.'

6. If fire break out, &c. 'Arson' is probably not strictly correct in reference to this verse. The case contemplated seems to be one in which a man kindles a fire, possibly to burn up rubbish, in his own field, and it spreads to his neighbour's. We might translate, 'if a fire spread.'

7-9. Hammurabi has laws dealing with similar cases; in one of them he provides that if a man has had charge of another's property, and it has been stolen from him, he shall compensate the owner, and shall recover the property from the thief.

In Israel, under the early monarchy, there was little or nothing corresponding to the protection given by our police ; the safety of a man's property depended on his own household and any help he could get from his neighbours. If he lived in an outlying farm or hamlet he might be glad to deposit his valuables with some friend in a fortified town ; just as with us deeds and bonds are often placed in charge of a bank or a solicitor.

7. unto his neighbour, rather, 'to some other person.'
stuff, gear, goods.

8 f. unto God, to see whether, &c. The two parties would attend at a sanctuary. The analogy of verse 11 suggests that the suspected man would either admit his guilt or take an oath that he was innocent. In some cases, verse 11, the oath would be accepted and the matter would be at an end. But in other cases, according to verse 9, a Divine decision would be given. How this decision was to be made known we are not told. A Divine judgement might fall upon the perjurer, possibly through some form of ordeal. Thus in Num. v. 11-31 a woman suspected of adultery is to drink dirty water with certain ceremonies, and her guilt or innocence is shown by 'her belly swelling and her thigh falling away,' or by her remaining free from disease. Or, again, recourse might be had to the sacred lots or some other form of oracle. The R. V. marg. 'judges' is not a correct translation ; but the sense it suggests is not far wrong, as the priests of the sanctuary would no doubt try to settle the matter by ordinary evidence before resorting to ordeal or oracle.

We may compare the clause in Solomon's prayer at the Dedication of the Temple, 1 Kings viii. 31 f., 'If one man sin against another, and he be made to take an oath, and he come and swear before thine altar in this house : then hear thou in heaven, and act, and judge thy servants, condemning the guilty, to bring his way upon his own head ; and giving judgement in favour of him who is in the right, to give him according to his uprightness.'

Compurgation by oath is recognized in many codes, and plays a considerable part in the laws of Hammurabi ; cf. on verses 10 f.

- 9 his neighbour's goods. For every matter of trespass, whether it be for ox, for ass, for sheep, for raiment, or for any manner of lost thing, whereof one saith, This is it, the cause of both parties shall come before ^a God; he whom ^a God shall condemn shall pay double unto his neighbour.
- 10 If a man deliver unto his neighbour an ass, or an ox, or a sheep, or any beast, to keep; and it die, or be hurt, 11 or driven away, no man seeing it: the oath of the LORD

for any manner of lost thing, whereof one saith, This is it. A man claims that something which he finds in some one else's possession is property of his own which he has lost. Such claims were often mistaken or fraudulent. Hammurabi deals at length with the procedure to be observed in such cases. Amongst other things the witnesses are to give their evidence 'before God.'

shall pay double, i. e. the man found in possession of lost property shall restore it, and add as much again. Perhaps also any one who brought a wrongful claim would have to make similar compensation to the man he had slandered. Hammurabi prescribes that any one who brought such claims and failed to substantiate them should be put to death.

10-13. The idea of these verses is that the shepherd is responsible for his own carelessness, but not for unavoidable accidents. He is supposed to be able to prevent theft, but not disease or injury by wild beasts.

Similarly Hammurabi provides that the shepherd shall compensate the owner for injury due to his carelessness, but that if damage is caused by an act of God or by a lion, the shepherd shall purge himself before God, and shall not be required to pay compensation.

10. driven away, 'taken captive and carried away into captivity,' perhaps referring to the high-handed violence of a band of robbers, whom the shepherd would be powerless to resist, as distinguished from the mere thief of verse 11. But this does not suit the 'no man seeing it.' As the word for 'driven away,' nishbâ, is elsewhere used almost exclusively of men who are taken prisoners, and is also nearly identical with 'hurt,' nishbar, the words 'or shall be between them both, whether he hath not put his hand unto his neighbour's goods; and the owner thereof shall accept it, and he shall not make restitution. But ¹² if it be stolen from him, he shall make restitution unto the owner thereof. If it be torn in pieces, let him bring ¹³ it for witness; he shall not make good that which was torn.

And if a man ^a borrow aught of his neighbour, and it ¹⁴ be hurt, or die, the owner thereof not being with it, he shall surely make restitution. If the owner thereof be ¹⁵ with it, he shall not make it good: if it be an hired thing, ^b it came for its hire.

^b Or, it is reckoned in (Heb. cometh into) its hire

shall accept it, probably the oath. If we omit the 'or driven away,' we might interpret, 'shall accept the injured animal or the carcase, instead of requiring it to be replaced by a sound, living beast.'

13. In Gen. xxxi. 39 Jacob illustrates his fidelity to Laban by saying that he had himself borne the loss caused by wild beasts, and had not brought the mangled carcasses to Laban that the loss might fall upon the latter as owner.

14 f. If a man hires (or borrows) an animal without the owner, it is entirely under the hirer's control, and he is responsible for any accident that may befall it. But if he hires the services of a man and his animal, the animal is still under the control of its owner, and he is responsible.

Hammurabi has several laws dealing with such cases. If a hired animal is killed by a lion in the open country the loss falls upon the owner; but if it suffers through the carelessness or cruelty of the hirer he is responsible.

15. if it be an hired thing, it came for its hire, i. e. in fixing the charge for hiring, the risk of accident is taken into account. The meaning of the Hebrew is doubtful; other interpretations are: (a) 'If the owner of the hired animal has sent a hired servant in charge of it, he shall pay out of his wages for any accident that happens to it.' (b) 'If a hired servant is in charge of an animal working for his master, and any harm befalls it, he shall pay for it out of his wages.' If the last view be taken, this sentence is a separate ordinance, and not merely a comment on, or qualification of, the preceding.

16 f. According to primitive ideas the seduction of a daughter before she was betrothed or married was an offence against property, because the father would in the natural course of events make money by selling his daughter in marriage.

16. that is not betrothed. A betrothed woman was regarded as a wife, and according to Deut. xxii. 23-25, any one seducing or forcing her was to be put to death; similarly Hammurabi.

he shall surely pay a dowry for her to be his wife. Rather 'he must purchase her for his wife at the (usual) price, mohar' ; cf. above on verse 16 f.

17. he shall pay money, &c., i. e. he must pay the mohar, although he is not allowed to have the girl as his wife.

Hammurabi's code opens with two laws as to sorcery; the meaning of which is not clear according to the present translations. These latter seem to suggest that under some circumstances the sorcerer would be put to death, but that under others the practice of magic arts would be regarded as legitimate. From other sources we know that magic was a recognized public profession in Egypt, Babylon, and indeed throughout most of the ancient world.

SORCERESS. A. V. 'witch.' Perhaps in Israel the art was specially practised by women; cf. the Witch of Endor. The Septuagint, however, has 'sorcerers,' and the Syriac Version and the Targum 'sorcerer.'

the strenuous emphasis with which Divine judgement is threatened shows how little was to be expected from any human authority.

21 b-24. for ye were strangers in the land, &c. Such didactic exhortation is not in the manner of the ancient code ; so that these verses, or most of them, are often regarded as an editorial addition.

usury, rather, 'interest,' the word is said to have meant originally 'biting.' The Old Testament consistently forbids the Jews to take interest from their fellow countrymen, Deut. xxiii. 20 ; Lev. xxv. 36 ; Jer. xv. 10 ; Ezek. xviii. 8 ; Ps. xv. 5 ; Prov. xxviii. 8 ; while Deuteronomy expressly sanctions interest on loans to foreigners. The translation 'usury' in the English and Latin versions is due to a desire to avoid an inconvenient—and indeed unjustifiable—application to modern conditions ; the Septuagint has 'interest,' tokos.

At the same time the practice which the Old Testament seeks to prevent is not commercial lending on interest, loans to a merchant who expects to make a profit over and above the interest by using the money borrowed. As our passage shows, the inspired writers desired to inculcate the duty of relieving distress by free loans which might become gifts, and to discourage the practice of making a profit out of the needs of those who were on the verge of ruin. Here, as often, a lax rendering like 'usury' expresses the real spirit of the original better than an exact translation. Nevertheless the authors of these passages probably intended to forbid interest altogether ; they were not familiar enough with the higher commerce to understand that there were circumstances under which interest might be justifiable. Hammurabi, dealing with a civilization much more advanced than that of the Israelite monarchy, recognizes interest as legitimate, though he seeks to protect the farmer from his creditor. If the farmer has a bad harvest, he need pay no interest on his loan for that year. There are a very large number of Babylonian and Assyrian contract tablets extant which deal with the rate of interest, some of them belonging to periods before the settlement of the Israelites in Canaan.

26. If thou at all take thy neighbour's garment to pledge.

The 'at all' is an attempt to represent a Hebrew idiom for which there is no exact English equivalent. The force of the original here might be given by, 'If thou shouldst ever go so far as to take thy neighbour's garment to pledge.'

take . . . to pledge, i. e. as security for a debt.

garment, the upper garment, cloak, or shawl; a large square of cloth. For the pledging of garments cf. Amos ii. 8; Job xxii. 6, xxiv. 9f. Deut. xxiv. 10-13 repeats and expands this verse, and Deut. xxiv. 6, 17 forbids the taking of a mill-stone or a widow's clothes in pledge; and Ezek. xviii. 7 includes the restoring of pledges to debtors amongst the indispensable duties of a good man. It is well to remember that the pledging of garments of small value is carried on to a large extent amongst our own poor.

by that the sun goeth down. A poor man might borrow a tool for use during the day, and deposit his cloak as security. It is difficult to see what use a pledge to be restored at nightfall would be in the case of a loan for some time; but perhaps the transaction gave the lender a more formal and binding claim to repayment.

27. Probably editorial; cf. on verses 21-24.

almost synonymous; the latter is stronger, implying that the curse actually injures its object.

God, so rather than the marg. 'judges'; cf. 1 Kings xxi. 13, where Naboth is accused of 'cursing,' a different word, 'God and the king.'

29. the abundance of thy fruits and of thy liquors, lit. as marg. 'thy fulness and thy tear,' i. e. the overflow of the threshing-floor and the wine-press and olive-press, a poetic or traditional expression for firstfruits. God gives in rich abundance, so that a portion may readily be given back to Him in token of gratitude. The Septuagint renders, 'the firstfruits of the threshing-floor and the wine-press.'

29-30. The firstborn of thy sons shalt thou give unto me. Likewise shalt thou do with thine ox, &c. These clauses raise a serious difficulty, of which there is no satisfactory explanation. The firstborn of oxen and sheep were sacrificed (Deut. xv. 19 ff.), and if Exod. xxii. 29-31 occurred in a heathen code, or if the Book of the Covenant stood by itself, we should naturally understand verse 29 b to mean that firstborn children were to be sacrificed to Yahweh. Such sacrifices were not infrequently offered to the king, *Melech*¹, a title sometimes given to Yahweh. And we gather that human firstborn were sometimes sacrificed to Yahweh under the impression that His law required them, a view which Jeremiah repudiates, vii. 31, xix. 5; but Ezekiel seems to endorse, 'I gave them statutes that were not good . . . in that they caused to pass through the fire all that openeth the womb.' Moreover, the story of the proposed sacrifice of Isaac is intended to teach that God did not require such offerings, and would hardly have been written if the practice were not prevalent in Israel.

Nevertheless, it is clear that a general sacrificing of firstborn children to Yahweh was never part of the religion of Israel (Baentsch, Exodus, 89 f.; E. Meyer, Die Israeliten, &c., 127). The practice appears in the history towards the close of the monarchy; it was probably due to the influence of neighbouring nations, although an attempt seems to have been made to support it from the wording of ancient laws. It is possible that in a remote pre-Mosaic period such sacrifices may have been the custom amongst certain of the ancestors of Israel, and that the wording of our passage is a survival from a barbaric age; but neither the compiler of the Book of the Covenant, nor the author of the Elohistic Document, nor the editor of the Pentateuch, intended these words to be understood as a demand by Yahweh that human children should be sacrificed.

The position of verse 29b, the clause about the firstborn sons between provisions about firstfruits and the firstlings of animals, is curious; the clause may not have originally belonged to this context, or, as some suggest, it may have read 'thy cattle,' miquekha, instead of 'thy sons,' banekha.

Elsewhere we are told that the human firstborn were to be redeemed; some other offering was to be substituted for them; see on xiii. 13, xxxiv. 20, and cf. Num. iii.

31. holy, set apart for the worship of Yahweh; cf. xv. 11, xix. 6.

any flesh that is torn of beasts. The prohibition is no doubt ancient, and rests on primitive religious ideas, being probably connected with the principles that the slaughter of an animal for food should take the form of a sacrifice, and should be so performed that the blood should not be consumed. Neither of these conditions could be observed in the case in question. Cf. Deut. xiv. 21; Lev. xvii. 15f.

1. a false report. The context shows that the meaning is that an innocent man is not to be condemned on false testimony.

3. a poor man. Many recent commentators, e. g. Baentsch, Holzinger, Kittel, propose to substitute for 'a poor man,' DL., 'a great man,' GDL; on the ground that the latter is more suitable to the context, and to the facts of life. An inclination on the part of an Eastern judge to favour a poor, friendless man against a powerful suitor is said to be too rare to need to be guarded against. Lev. xix. 15 is quoted on both sides, the clause which agrees verbally with ours has 'great'; but 'poor' occurs in a parallel clause. The alteration here is unnecessary; dramatic acts of justice to the oppressed, involving the ruin of too powerful nobles, are among the luxuries of despots.

4, 5. These two verses are out of place; verse 6 is the natural continuation of verse 3. The arrangement of the clauses has been somehow disturbed, but it is not clear where these verses stood originally.

7. for I will not justify. Read, with the Septuagint, 'and thou shalt not justify,' i. e. acquit, or declare to be in the right, 'the wicked.'

8 b-9. A didactic addition; cf. xxii. 21.

10, 11. Cf. Lev. xxv and Deut. xv. The institution prescribed here is not the sabbatical year of Lev. xxv, but only a step towards it. These verses only require that all land shall be left fallow one year in seven, not that all land shall be left fallow in the same year, and the reason given is humanitarian and not ritual. Similar practices are still in vogue in Palestine (Nowack, Archaeologie), and such a custom may well have been observed in early times on agricultural grounds ; but the utilitarian object would no doubt be associated with some religious reason and sanction. Deuteronomy omits this law as to the land ; it may have proved unworkable in the later years of the monarchy. We are expressly told that in the period before the Exile the land 'did not enjoy its sabbaths,' Lev. xxv. 35 ; 2 Chron. xxxvi. 21. Traces of the observance of the Sabbatical Year are found in Neh. x. 31, and the later Jewish literature.

In like manner thou shalt deal with thy vineyard, &c. It has been suggested that if vineyards and oliveyards had been left to themselves, to the poor, and to wild beasts, every seventh year, the result would have been disastrous ; and that the last clause of this verse is the mechanical addition of a scribe who did not understand agriculture.

14-19. Cf. xxxiv. 18-26, which repeats most of these verses, partly in the same words.

14-17. The three feasts are also dealt with in Lev. xxiii and Deut. xvi, with additions. If, as is suggested by some, the latter part of verse 15 from 'seven days' onward is a later addition, the three feasts here are purely agricultural. There is nothing here to indicate that these feasts were to be held on fixed dates, or at the same time by all Israelites. Such uniformity belongs to the later codes, which were more interested in exact ritual than in practical utility. Probably in earlier times the harvest and vintage feasts were celebrated at the local shrines, at times suitable to the needs of each district.

18. This, like the corresponding verse xxxiv. 25, may refer to the Passover. In Lev. ii. 11 the offering of leaven is entirely forbidden; it appears, however, from Lev. vii. 13, xxiii. 17; Amos iv. 5 that in ancient Israel leaven was sometimes used in sacrifices; cf. on xii. 15. According to Robertson Smith, Rel. of the Semites, p. 221, a similar rule, that fat or flesh must not be left till the morning, is found in connexion with certain Saracen sacrifices; the idea being that the efficacy of the sacrifice lay all night until the morning. The first of the firstfruits of thy ground thou shalt bring into the house of the LORD thy God. Thou shalt not seethe a kid in its mother's milk.

Behold, I send an angel before thee, to keep thee by in the living flesh and blood of the victim, and that everything must be done to avoid putrefaction. It seems natural, too, that putrefaction should be avoided as a form of ceremonial uncleanness.

19. The first of the firstfruits, rather, 'the choicest'; cf. xxii. 29.

Thou shalt not seethe a kid in its mother's milk. Robertson Smith, in the passage referred to above, suggests that some form of sacrifice is in the writer's mind, and that the milk would be sour and partake of the nature of leaven, so that the sacrifice would be unacceptable. But he considers that the prohibition is more probably directed against some form of heathen superstition. Some peoples reckoned milk as equivalent to blood.

20 (E). Yahweh will send His¹ angel before Israel to give them possession of the land of Canaan.

21-23 (E R). If Israel is obedient the angel will drive out the present inhabitants.

24-27 (R). Israel must not worship the gods of Canaan, but only Yahweh; then shall it be blessed, and its enemies be discomfited.

28 (E). Yahweh will send hornets to drive out the inhabitants of Canaan.

29-30 (E). He will only drive them out gradually, as Israel is able to take their place, lest the wild beasts increase.

31 33 (E D). Israel is to occupy the land from the Red Sea to the Mediterranean, and from the wilderness south of Palestine to the Euphrates. Israel must not worship the gods of Canaan, lest they be a snare; nor must Israel make any covenant with the Canaanites, nor suffer them to live in their midst.

In Deut. vii. 20 the hornet is sent to dispose of the scattered fugitives who had hidden themselves in ravines and caves, where it would be difficult to find them ; cf. Isa. vii. 18 f. According to Joshua xxiv. 12 the hornet drove out Sihon and Og ; and in Wisdom xii. 8 the hornets were sent as forerunners of the Israelite armies. Secular traditions are quoted of tribes being driven out of their homes by wasps, frogs, mice, and other vermin ; and districts of South Africa are said to be rendered uninhabitable by the Tsetse fly. The 'hornet' here is not figurative, but a fragmentary reminiscence of an otherwise lost tradition.

In Judges ii. 3 a portion of the old inhabitants are left to be a thorn in the side of Israel, and that their gods may be a snare ; in Judges ii. 21 f. they are left as a spiritual discipline to Israel ; and in Judges iii. 1 that they may afford the Israelites an opportunity of military training. Evidently the failure of Yahweh to make a clean sweep of the Canaanites very much exercised the minds of the Jewish writers.

 Aaron and Hur in charge of the people.

15-18 a (P). Moses goes up into the mountain.

18 b (E). Moses remains forty days in the mountain.

Sources, &c. Composite authorship is indicated by the repetitions as to Moses going up. Also verse 9 is clearly the continuation of verse 2 ; verses 3-8 interrupt the connexion. The origin of 1, 2, 9-11 is very doubtful ; they are sometimes ascribed to an early document used by E, and often denoted by E¹. As to 'the words . . . the judgements,' see pp. 167 f.

1, 2. It is suggested that 'Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu' is a later addition. The ease with which such additions were made is shown by the fact that the Samaritan text further adds 'Elcazar and Ithamar,' the other two sons of Aaron. The words 'afar off' and the whole of verse 2 are also an addition ; they are inconsistent with 9, 10, in which the seventy elders see God. Further, the 'worship ye afar off' as addressed to Moses is out of place, as Moses is to draw near. The Septuagint has accordingly altered these words to 'and let them worship afar off.'

Thus the original form of this part of the J narrative was :—

'And he said unto Moses, Come up unto Yahweh, thou and seventy of the elders of Israel, and worship.'

These chapters are a section of the main body of the Priestly Code with various additions. They may be partly based on older documents. Cf. 2. offering, marg. heave offering. The Hebrew word terûmâ is from a root rum, denoting 'rise' or 'raise.' It used to be explained as an offering raised as a symbol of presentation to God, but it is more probably an offering lifted off or separated from something else ; it is used of a portion of a sacrifice given to the priest, Lev. vii. 14 ; of firstfruits, &c., Num. xv. 19-21 ; of the portion of the land of Israel dedicated to God, Ezek. xlv. 1-7, &c. The word is chiefly used in the Priestly Code and in Ezekiel, occasionally in Deuteronomy, but not earlier. It occurs in the present text of 2 Sam. i. 21, 'fields of offerings,' but probably only through corruption of the text.

5. sealskins, marg. porpoise-skins. The meaning of the word tahash thus translated is quite uncertain. The A. V. has 'badgers' skins'; the skin of the dugong or sea-cow has also been suggested. The badger is found in Palestine; seals and dugongs are in the Red Sea; porpoises in the Mediterranean, and may have been taken in the Red Sea. A similar word in Egyptian means 'leather,' and possibly our tahash is borrowed from the Egyptian and has that meaning. The word is only found in the Priestly Code.

According to a Jewish tradition in the Talmud, the tahash was a kind of unicorn which specially appeared to Moses for this purpose and then disappeared (Ency. Bibl.).

ark, or chest, 'ārōn, also used for a money-box, 2 Kings xii. 10, and for Joseph's coffin, Gen. l. 26, but usually for this sacred chest. For 'ark' in Noah's Ark and the ark in the bulrushes the word is tēbhā. All the references to the Ark show that it was regarded as specially sacred, in older times the representative, as it were, of Yahweh. Thus it is carried into battle as a talisman. Apart from the doubtful 2 Chron. xxxv. 3, the Ark disappears from history when it is placed in Solomon's Temple, 1 Kings viii. 21. It was lost or fell to pieces some time before the Exile, and a prophetic oracle, Jer. iii. 16, forbade the construction of a substitute. Ps. cxxxii. 8 seems to express the hope that God would in some way replace it. For the possible connexion between the Ark, 'ārōn, and Aaron, 'Ahārōn, see on iv. 14.

The Egyptian monuments constantly depict sacred boats bearing a shrine which contained the figure of the god. These were carried in processions. Erman, Life in Ancient Egypt, p. 276, reproduces one of these pictures, which shows two winged figures within the shrine. The Babylonian gods were also carried about in coffers.

17. mercy-seat, Hebrew kappōreth, from the root KPR, which is constantly used of atoning for sin. Hence the rendering 'mercy-seat,' which is further supported by the fact that the culminating rite of the Day of Atonement was the sprinkling of the kappōreth with blood, Lev. xvi. 14 ff. Thus the Septuagint usually, though not here, renders hilastērion, 'the propitiatory,' so Heb. ix. 5; similarly the Vulgate, propitiatorium. The 'seat' is not justified by the etymology of kappōreth, but is suggested by verse 22 and similar passages, e. g. 1 Sam. iv. 4, 'Yahweh Çebāōth that sitteth upon (or, 'dwelleth between') the Cherubim.'

The rendering of the marg. 'covering' is obtained from the supposed original sense of KPR, 'to cover,' and is supported by the position of the kappōreth, which the Septuagint here renders 'cover,' epithema. It is doubtful whether KPR is ever used in the sense of 'cover' in the O. T., and even whether this was its original meaning.

18. cherubim, i. e. Cherubs, the Hebrew plural form. The Cherubim were originally mythical beings, perhaps personifying the thunderclouds. Here they are symbolical or decorative figures, and may have been suggested by the colossal winged bulls with human faces found in Assyria. The meaning of the Cherubim here is doubtful, but they may symbolize the heavenly court of Yahweh, or, as we should say, the angels. See further on Gen. iii. 24, Ezek. i.

This bread is also called 'the perpetual bread' or 'the bread set in order,' i. e. 'the row or pile of bread,' and 'the holy bread.' Under the latter name it is mentioned in the story of David, 1 Sam. xxi. 5. Doubtless in early times bread was thus presented as actual food for the deity; but here its meaning is akin to that of the firstfruits—it recognizes alike that the produce of the earth is God's gift to man, and that it should be used by man in God's service.

'The custom of placing loaves of sweet or unleavened bread on tables in the temples seems to have originated among the Babylonians, by whom it was also called, Bread of the Presence.'—A. R. S. Kennedy, Cent. Bible on 1 Sam. xxi. 4.

xxvi. THE DWELLING.

1-14 Moses is to construct a 'dwelling,' consisting of ten curtains of tapestry, covered by a tent made of eleven curtains of goats' hair; and the tent is to be protected by coverings of rams' skins and seals' ¹ skins.

15-28. This tent is to be supported by a wooden framework,

29. overlaid with gold.

30. The whole is to be made in accordance with what Moses has been shown in the mount.

31-34. A veil is to be made, similar to the curtains, to divide the Dwelling into an outer chamber, the Holy Place, and an inner chamber, the Holy of Holies. The Ark and the Kappôreth ² are to be put in the Holy of Holies.

35. The Table for the Shewbread, and the Lampstand are to be put in the Holy Place.

cunning workman, 'artist,' as distinguished from an ordinary weaver.

2-4. The ten curtains are to be arranged in two sets of five. Each five are to be fastened together permanently lengthwise so as to make a great sheet 28 cubits by 20 ; these two sheets were to be connected by loops at the top so as to form a roof for the Dwelling and to hang down the sides and back ; they were looped together along the twenty-eight cubit sides so that together they would measure forty cubits in the other direction. The loops would fasten and unfasten when the Dwelling was put together and taken to pieces.

4f. The general sense is clear. There were to be fifty 'loops' along the edge of the end section of one large sheet ; and fifty 'loops' at corresponding points along the edge of the end section of the other large sheet. The exact translation is doubtful, as is shown by the variation between text and marg. of R. V.

6. clasps. As there is only one clasp to each pair of loops, the and couple the curtains one to another with the clasps: and the tabernacle shall be one. And thou shalt make 7 curtains of goats' hair for a tent over the tabernacle: eleven curtains shalt thou make them. The length of 8 each curtain shall be thirty cubits, and the breadth of each curtain four cubits: the eleven curtains shall have one measure. And thou shalt couple five curtains by 9 themselves, and six curtains by themselves, and shalt double over the sixth curtain in the forefront of the tent. the tabernacle, rather, 'Dwelling,' as before. Evidently, to this writer, the huge tent-cloth produced by joining the two sheets is the essential portion of the Dwelling; it is a tent.

7-13. The construction and arrangement, and the words of the description, of the goats'-hair Tent on the one hand, and the Dwelling of tapestry curtains on the other, are largely the same. The chief differences are that the clasps of the Tent are brass; that the dimensions of the Tent are necessarily somewhat larger; and that there is an extra section which is used as a flap to partly cover the front of the Dwelling.

9. shalt double over . . . in the forefront of the tent. This is generally explained to mean that half of the extra section was doubled back over the front end of the top of the Dwelling so as to form a kind of ridge; still leaving a half-breadth extra to hang over at the back according to verse 12. Kennedy¹, however, suggests that the whole of the extra curtain was to hang doubled over the upper part of the screen at the front; thus connecting the top of the screen with the portion of the Dwelling serving as roof, and securing an end obviously aimed at, namely, that of excluding all natural light. In view of the use of the root KPL, 'double' in Aramaic, we might perhaps understand this clause to mean 'thou shalt fold . . . over the front,' i. e. allow the whole of the extra curtain to hang down over the front ; cf. 12, 13. In view of the difficulty of combining the statements in these verses with the rest of the description, it has been suggested (Holzinger) that they are a later addition ; an explanatory note added by some one who had been working out the previous figures, but had misunderstood them. Of the three views given in verse 9, the first, the traditional view, is consistent with the retention of verse 12, from which it is derived. The other two require the omission of verse 12.

12. This verse, if retained, implies some such view as the first of those given in verse 9.

13. The length of the curtains of the Dwelling, 28 cubits, was 2 cubits less than the length, 30 cubits, of the curtains of the Tent. The annotator tries to account for the two extra cubits. He may mean that the Tent was arranged so that the lower ends on each side projected a cubit below the lower ends of the curtains of the Dwelling ; but it is possible that he thought of the latter as laid flat, and the odd cubits of Tent hanging down over their edges.

15. boards. The word for 'board,' qeresh, is only used of the boards of the Dwelling, and in Ezek. xxvii. 6 in the sentence 'they have made thy benches of ivory inlaid in boxwood,' where the original of 'thy benches,' marg. 'thy deck,' is 'thy qeresh.' These 'boards' are 10 cubits long by 1½ cubits broad, i. e. nearly 15 ft. × 2¼ ft.¹; the thickness is not given, some commentators have deduced from the other dimensions that the thickness was a cubit, cf. on verses 22 ff.; but the absence of any stated figure suggests that this dimension was some ordinary one, on a much smaller scale. Still, the thickness must have been substantial, seeing that these upright boards had to carry four heavy tent-cloths, and that the distances between the pillars were ten and twenty cubits. It is doubtful whether such boards could be cut from the 'acacia' or any tree which can be meant by the shittim tree. Some have suggested that each 'board' was made of two or three narrower planks fastened together. Kennedy maintains that the qeresh was a frame, in Ezek. xxvii. 6 a panel. These frames would be much lighter to handle and carry; they would naturally be made of a number of comparatively small planks, and they would allow the tapestry curtains to be seen through them, if the latter were hanging in their natural place over the wooden framework. Cf. also on the verse 17 and Appendix II.

joined one to another. If we take Kennedy's view that the qeresh was a frame like an elongated H, with crosspieces at the top and bottom, as well as the middle, the two pegs would continue the two sides of the frame, and be joined together by the lowest crosspiece.

other. These terms imply that the Dwelling was to face due East; cf. verses 20, 22.

22. six boards, nine cubits . . . 25. eight boards, twelve cubits. It is generally held that the breadth of the Dwelling was equal to the height, ten cubits (verse 16), and so a third of the length, which was thirty cubits (verse 18), so that the Holy of Holies was an exact cube, ten cubits each way (verse 33). If so the two corner 'boards' must have been, to the extent of a cubit each, against the ends of the 'boards' of the long sides, which must therefore have been a cubit thick, cf. on verse 15; unless we can find some interpretation of verse 24 (which see) which will otherwise dispose of the superfluous cubits.

These calculations follow the usual view that the 30, 10, and 10 are inside measurements. Kennedy maintains that they are outside measurements; he understands the corner frames to be used as outside buttresses, and the thickness of the other frames with the bars to be half a cubit, nine inches. Cf. dddc, in illustration, p. 285. The present writer is inclined to reject views which make the thickness a cubit or half a cubit; cf. verse 15.

24. This verse is very difficult. There is no approach to agreement as to how it should be interpreted or emended. We have mentioned Kennedy's explanation that the corner 'boards' or frames were a kind of buttress. It would be useless to quote any full explanation of the verse, because any such would need to be further explained at greater length than is possible here, unless the reader finds commentaries much more lucid than the present writer does.

Practically we may assume that it is intended that extra support should be provided at the two corners, to correspond to the pillars supporting the Veil and the Screen.

26-29. Five horizontal bars are to be fastened to the 'boards' to strengthen the wooden framework. No dimensions are given, except that the middle bar is to run from end to end. These bars pass through golden rings on the boards. Verse 28 applies to the two sides and the back; and if we adopt approximate figures to avoid the question of outside and inside measurements, there would be two bars thirty cubits long and one bar ten cubits long. Nothing is said about the length or position of the other bars. A favourite theory is that each of them was half the length of the middle bar; that two were placed along the top, forming a continuous row, and two along the bottom similarly, thus giving three rows, e. g.

this curtain and the corresponding one in the Temple. It means 'that which shuts off,' and is connected with an Assyrian word parrakku, 'inner shrine.' No dimensions are given of the pārôketh and its pillars; but the other specifications indicate that the pārôketh was 10 x 10 cubits¹; and the pillars 10 cubits high. The two outer pillars would touch the walls, and the other two would be equidistant from them and from each other, thus dividing the breadth into three equal parts.

33. This verse gives us the dimensions of the Holy Place and the Holy of Holies. Between the clasps and the front of the Dwelling were five curtains, each 4 cubits broad, so that this portion of the wooden structure, the Holy Place, was 20 cubits long, and the inner portion, the Holy of Holies, 10 cubits long, thus making the latter an exact cube, 10 x 10 x 10 cubits; cf. on verse 22.

it is to have horns, and is to be provided with the necessary utensils of brass.

8. It is to be made according to the pattern shown to Moses in the Mount.

Above the ledge the altar was entirely overlaid with bronze; the lower half was only covered with a grating.

xxvii. 9-19. THE COURT OF THE DWELLING; cf. xxxviii. 9-20.

9-18. The Court of the Dwelling is to be 100 cubits by 50. It is to be enclosed by linen curtains 5 cubits high, supported on brass pillars in brazen sockets, with silver hooks and fillets; twenty pillars for each of the longer sides and ten pillars for the back.

The Court, like the Dwelling itself, faces East, the gate being in the eastern side. The gate is closed by a screen, twenty cubits broad, supported on four pillars. On each side of the gate are curtains for fifteen cubits supported on three pillars.

court of fine twined linen an hundred cubits long for one side: and the pillars thereof shall be twenty, and their 10 sockets twenty, of brass; the hooks of the pillars and their fillets shall be of silver. And likewise for the north 11 side in length there shall be hangings an hundred cubits long, and the pillars thereof twenty, and their sockets twenty, of brass; the hooks of the pillars and their fillets of silver. And for the breadth of the court on the west 12 side shall be hangings of fifty cubits: their pillars ten, and their sockets ten. And the breadth of the court on 13 the east side eastward shall be fifty cubits. The hangings 14 for the one side of the gate shall be fifteen cubits: their pillars three, and their sockets three. And for the other 15 side shall be hangings of fifteen cubits: their pillars three, and their sockets three. And for the gate of the 16 court shall be a screen of twenty cubits, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen, the work of the embroiderer: their pillars four, and their sockets four. All the pillars of the court round about shall be filleted 17 with silver; their hooks of silver, and their sockets of brass.

9. fine twined linen. See on xxvi. 31.

11. fillets, lit. 'clasps' or 'binders,' only used in the account of the Dwelling, often explained as rods connecting the pillars and supporting the curtains; but probably bands in which were fixed the hooks on which the curtains were hung.

12. The author does not seem to take into account the fact that some of the pillars would be corner pillars; and does not make it clear whether these corner pillars were to count twice over, or what arrangement was intended.

14. A similar difficulty arises here. The intention of the description is that the pillars should be five cubits apart. This would either give five pillars to the 'gate' if the two end pillars are reckoned to the gate, or three pillars if they are reckoned to the side curtains.

16. The material of this screen is similar to that at the door of the Tent.

- 18 The length of the court shall be an hundred cubits, and the breadth fifty every where, and the height five cubits, of fine twined linen, and their sockets of brass.
- 19 All the instruments of the tabernacle in all the service thereof, and all the pins thereof, and all the pins of the court, shall be of brass.

xxvii. 20, 21. THE OIL FOR THE LAMP.

20, 21 (S). Oil is to be provided for the lamp in the Holy Place, that it may be always burning through the night.

Sources, &c. No account of the fulfilling of this command is given in chapters xxxv-xl. It is repeated in Lev. xxiv. 1-3, and has probably been introduced here from Leviticus. It is premature to deal with the oil here, as the priests who are to use it are not yet equipped or consecrated.

20, 21. continually . . . from evening to morning. In view of the common practice of keeping a light or fire burning always, night and day, in a sanctuary, we should naturally understand 'continually' in this sense if it stood alone. On the other hand, 'from evening to morning' would naturally mean by night only. In 1 Sam. iii. 3 the lamp is put out when the priests go to bed.

5. Cf. xxv. 3, 4.

6. ephod, a word of uncertain origin, used in two distinct senses—(a) as an image or some part of the equipment of an image, (b) as a priestly vestment. Thus Gideon, Judges viii. 27, makes a golden ephod which is an object of worship, and Micah, Judges xvii. 5, &c., makes an ephod for his temple. On the other hand, Samuel, 1 Sam. ii. 18, wears a linen ephod. The connexion between the two uses is sometimes explained thus:—The ephods made by Gideon, Micah, &c., were clothing for the image, so that the priests in wearing an ephod were wearing the garment of the god. The description of the ephod here is obscure, and we cannot be sure as to the exact shape of the vestment. It consisted of two 'shoulder-pieces,' kethēphōth, and a 'cunningly woven band,' hēshebh 'aphuddā, rather 'the girdle,' or 'band of the ephod.' The use of these words elsewhere does not throw any further light on the subject. The ephod seems to have been a kind of 'ornamental waistcoat' (Driver, DB.), or sash, supported by two shoulder-straps or braces. Another view is that the band of the ephod covered the breast rather than the waist. The 'robe' has also been regarded as part of the ephod. It is also possible that the writer assumes that the reader knows what an ephod is, and only specifies special features ; cf. verses 7 and 8.

The ordinary priestly ephod in pre-exilic times was probably much simpler.

11. ouches, Elizabethan English for a clasp or similar ornament. The Hebrew word means a network, serving as a setting for the onyx stones.

12. memorial. The presence of Aaron bearing these stones engraved with the twelve names would recall the tribes to the memory of Yahweh ; cf. verses 11, 29.

13-30. Much of the description of the hōshēn, or 'breastplate,' is obscure, especially the account of how it was fastened to the Ephod. The confusion seems to arise partly from the incorporation into the text of notes, e. g. verses 26-28, which were intended to elucidate it. The Septuagint has a different text ; it omits 25a, 26-28, and has another version of 24, thus eliminating the rings altogether. Probably these rings did not figure in the original description.

22. Cf. 14.

23-25. Probably verse 23 and the reference to the rings in verse 24 should be omitted. It seems impossible to combine the various references to rings with each other, and with the rest of the account of the hōshen and the Ephod. If we omit the rings, then we can understand that the two chains were fastened to the upper corners of the hōshen and to 'ouches' on the 'shoulder-pieces' of the Ephod.

25. ouches. These 'ouches' are probably different from those holding the engraved onyx stones in verse 9. The latter may not have figured in the original description; they appear to be superfluous, seeing that the names of the tribes were presented on the hōshen. Cf. also verse 27.

26. This verse repeats verse 23.

27, 28. Here, however, the rings are dealt with differently from verse 23 f. The annotator either misunderstood the former passage, or intended to supply a second couple of rings to fasten the bottom of the hōshen to the band of the Ephod.

^a That is, the Lights and the Perfections.

29. Cf. verses 12 and 30.

30. And thou shalt put in the breastplate of judgement the Urim and the Thummim. The latter were the sacred lots used as an oracle. According to the original text preserved in the Septuagint, these were used by Saul, 1 Sam. xiv. 41, thus:— 'O Yahweh, God of Israel, if the iniquity be in me or in Jonathan my son, give Urim; but if it be in the people, give Thummim.' In the Blessing of Moses, Deut. xxxiii. 8, the custody of the Thummim and the Urim was the special prerogative of Levi, the priestly tribe. According to Ezra ii. 63; Neh. vii. 65, the Urim and Thummim were lost some time before the Return, and were not replaced. They were probably stones—perhaps precious stones.

As the words are now written in the Hebrew, they mean 'Lights and Perfections' (marg.); the Septuagint renders them here by singulars, 'the Manifestation and the Truth.' The original meaning is unknown; but Urim may be connected with hōvâ 'cast,' or 'give a decision,' the root of tōrâ, 'law'; and Thummim may be connected with an Arabic word meaning 'amulets.'

The breastplate is called the 'breastplate of judgement' because of the use of the sacred lots to give decisions.

It should be remembered that the Urim and Thummim had disappeared before this description was written, and that the author may have had no practical experience of any such decisions by lot. The phrases 'breastplate of judgement' and 'Urim and Thummim' were taken over from tradition; and the author may have attached meanings to them other than that which they bore in ancient times. But if he did so, he does not tell us what he understood by the words. The numerous theories on the subject of the ephod. This phrase might support the view that the author, taking for granted that his readers knew just what an ephod was, did not intend to describe it, but only to give an account of the special features which distinguished this particular vestment from an ordinary ephod. Or 'the robe of the ephod' may mean the robe to which the ephod was attached, or over which it was worn.

33. bells, lit. 'strikers' or 'clappers,' perhaps round discs which struck against one another.

35. that he die not. The 'bells' also were probably a survival, having been intended to frighten the demons who were supposed to inhabit the threshold (Baentsch); but the Priestly writer may have regarded them as a respectful mode of announcing to Yahweh the approach and departure of the High Priest.

In the account of Aaron's vestments in Ecclus. xlv. 1-12, we read, 'And he [Moses] compassed him with golden pomegranates, with many bells round about, to send forth a sound as he went, to make a sound that might be heard in the Temple, for a memorial for the children of his people.'

mitre, rather, as R. V. marg., 'turban.'

38. and Aaron shall bear the iniquity, &c., rather, 'that Aaron may bear,' &c. Even the sacred (holy) things and gifts offered to Yahweh would sometimes partake of 'iniquity,' i. e. their physical nature and condition would sometimes be unsatisfactory according to the ceremonial laws; and the dedication and devotion of the High Priest to Yahweh, symbolized by the engraved plate, would induce Him to overlook these defects. There would also, of course, be faults of temper and spirit in the offerers, but these are not in the mind of the writer. Here, again, the practice of bearing religious tribal or official marks on the forehead is ancient; originally such marks were supposed to have a magical efficacy. Such opinions, no doubt, maintained themselves amongst the less enlightened Jews, priests and otherwise.

39. And thou shalt weave the coat in chequer work of fine linen, 'And thou shalt plait the tunic of fine linen.' The exact meaning of the word rendered 'plait' or 'weave in chequer work' is not known, but it probably implies some sort of pattern.

35-37. The ceremonies of the ordination of the Priests and the dedication of the Altar are to continue for seven days.

The account of the carrying out of these instructions is given in Lev. viii.

1. hallow, the same word as 'sanctify' in xxviii. 41, which see.

shalt wash them. Nothing is said about the arrangements for this function; if it was to be public, due decorum would of course be observed.

5, 6. Cf. previous chapter.

7. the anointing oil: cf. xxv. 6. Only Aaron, i. e. the High Priest, is anointed. In the earlier literature kings are anointed.

And thou shalt gird them with girdles, Aaron and his 9 sons, and bind headties on them : and they shall have the priesthood by a perpetual statute : and thou shalt consecrate Aaron and his sons. And thou shalt bring 10 the bullock before the tent of meeting : and Aaron and his sons shall lay their hands upon the head of the bullock. And thou shalt kill the bullock before the 11 LORD, at the door of the tent of meeting. And thou 12 shalt take of the blood of the bullock, and put it upon the horns of the altar with thy finger ; and thou shalt pour out all the blood at the base of the altar. And thou 13 shalt take all the fat that covereth the inwards, and the caul upon the liver, and the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, and burn them upon the altar. But the 14 flesh of the bullock, and its skin, and its dung, shalt thou burn with fire without the camp : it is a * sin offering.
 Thou shalt also take the one ram ; and Aaron and his 15 sons shall lay their hands upon the head of the ram.
 And thou shalt slay the ram, and thou shalt take its 16 blood, and sprinkle it round about upon the altar. And 17

10. lay their hands upon the head of the bullock, rather, 'rest' or 'lean their hand.' The meaning of this rite is much disputed. It has been supposed to make the victim a representative of the offerer ; or, more probably, to symbolize the transference of the sacrifice from the worshipper to God. Cf. Lev. iv. 4.

11. thou shalt kill the bullock. Aaron and his sons, not being yet ordained, are in the position of ordinary lay worshippers ; and Moses acts as priest.

14. sin offering, hattâth, see on Lev. iv. 3. Before Aaron is fit to act as priest he must be purged of sin.

thou shalt cut the ram into its pieces, and wash its inwards, and its legs, and put them ^a with its pieces, and ^a with its 18 head. And thou shalt burn the whole ram upon the altar: it is a burnt offering unto the LORD: it is a sweet 19 savour, an offering made by fire unto the LORD. And thou shalt take the other ram; and Aaron and his sons 20 shall lay their hands upon the head of the ram. Then shalt thou kill the ram, and take of its blood, and put it upon the tip of the right ear of Aaron, and upon the tip of the right ear of his sons, and upon the thumb of their right hand, and upon the great toe of their right foot, and 21 sprinkle the blood upon the altar round about. [S] And thou shalt take of the blood that is upon the altar, and of the anointing oil, and sprinkle it upon Aaron, and upon his garments, and upon his sons, and upon the garments of his sons with him: and he shall be hallowed, and his garments, and his sons, and his sons' garments with him.
 22 [P] Also thou shalt take of the ram the fat, and the fat tail, and the fat that covereth the inwards, and the caul of the liver, and the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon sweet savour. The phrase is a survival from times when men thought that the actual smell of burning flesh or spices pleased the deity; cf. Gen. viii. 21. In the present document the words are used figuratively to denote that the offering was acceptable to God. The burnt-offering on this occasion would be a natural expression of Aaron's devotion.

19-21. As in the ritual of the Day of Atonement, two animals are taken, the one is sacrificed as a sin-offering, and the characteristic rites of the special occasion are connected with the second animal. Cf. also Lev. xiv. 1 ff.

20. Similar rites are prescribed for a person cleansed of leprosy, Lev. xiv. 14 ff., 25 ff. They may symbolize the devotion of the whole body to God.

And thou shalt take them from their hands, ²⁵ and burn them on the altar upon the burnt offering, for a sweet savour before the LORD: it is an offering made by fire unto the LORD. And thou shalt take the breast ²⁶ of Aaron's ram of consecration, and wave it for a wave offering before the LORD: and it shall be thy portion. wave offering, usually something symbolically presented to God by being moved to and fro before the altar, but not actually consumed; such offerings being the perquisites of the priests. Here, however, the wave-offering is consumed on the altar, but is placed there, not by Aaron and his sons, who are not yet priests, but by Moses.

thou . . . shalt wave, &c. It is not clear how Moses could 'wave' loaves and joints of meat which were in the hands of Aaron and his sons. The translation sometimes proposed, 'shalt cause them to wave,' does not suit the context; it causes Aaron to act prematurely as a priest, and is not justified by the usage of the Hebrew word. Perhaps this clause is an addition; cf. previous note and verse 26.

26. it shall be thy portion, as officiating priest. In Lev. vii. 31 the breast of the wave-offering is the perquisite of the priests.

27. heave offering, terûmâ, 'something lifted or taken up.' Sometimes explained as an offering, like the wave-offering, symbolically presented by being raised on high. But the terûmâ is rather a part lifted off from a larger whole, that the part may be dedicated to God; or the portion taken from a sacrifice, to be

 30 anointed in them, and to be consecrated in them. Seven days shall the son that is priest in his stead put them on, when he cometh into the tent of meeting to minister in 31 the holy place. And thou shalt take the ram of consecration, and seethe its flesh in a holy place. And Aaron and his sons shall eat the flesh of the ram, and the bread that is in the basket, at the door of the tent of meeting.
 33 [S] And they shall eat those things wherewith atonement was made, to consecrate and to sanctify them: but a stranger shall not eat thereof, because they are holy.

28. peace offerings. See on xx. 24.

33. There is nothing corresponding to this verse in Lev. viii; no previous mention has been made of 'things wherewith atonement was made,' nor is it easy to understand that any of the edibles enumerated can be meant; possibly the flesh of the ram and the bread, in which case verse 33 a repeats verse 32 a. The command that a foreigner (R. V. 'stranger') shall not eat is superfluous after verse 32. This verse is probably an addition.

cleanse the altar. The altar was constructed from materials originally common or profane, and according to primitive ideas a kind of sinfulness or unworthiness attached to it from which it needed to be cleansed. In Christian times ceremonies of purification have been performed for sacred buildings which have been physically defiled.

37. shall be holy : i. e. dedicated to the service of Yahweh, and forfeited by its owner. Probably such things or persons could be redeemed by a fine. The idea of the contagiousness of sanctity is common in primitive religions. Cf. also Ezek. xlvi. 20 ; Hag. ii. 12.

xxix. 38-42. THE DAILY OFFERINGS (S).

38. Two firstling lambs to be sacrificed every day.

39. One in the morning, one in the evening.

40, 41. A meal-offering and a drink-offering to be presented with each.

42. This is to be a permanent institution.

Sources, &c. This section is also premature. The main body of the legislation, the foundation code, is still occupied with the construction and dedication of the Tabernacle, and the ordination of its priests. Moreover, if these verses were in their right place here, 'thou' in verse 38 must refer to Moses as in verse 24 ; but in the permanent service Aaron, and not Moses, was the priest. Moreover, verse 43 a repeats verse 42 b.

Verses 38-41 also occur with slight verbal changes in Num. xxviii. 3-8. Daily morning and evening sacrifices were instituted xxix. 43-46. CONCLUSION OF DIRECTIONS AS TO THE SANCTUARY AND THE PRIESTHOOD.

43. Yahweh will meet with the Israelites at the Altar, and the Tabernacle shall be consecrated by His visible Presence.

44. He will consecrate the Tabernacle, the Altar, and the Priests.

45, 46. Yahweh will dwell among the Israelites as their God, Who delivered them from Egypt.

there I will meet with the children of Israel ; and the Tent shall be sanctified by my glory. And I will sanctify the 44 tent of meeting, and the altar : Aaron also and his sons will I sanctify, to minister to me in the priest's office. And I will dwell among the children of Israel, and will be 45 their God. And they shall know that I am the LORD 46 their God, that brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, that I may dwell among them : I am the LORD their God.

[S] And thou shalt make an altar to burn incense 30

43. there . . . the Tent. R. V. rightly supplies the latter words ; it is within the Tabernacle that the Glory of Yahweh appears, xl. 34, 35. 'There' might also refer to the Tabernacle, but may mean the altar where the fellowship of Yahweh and Israel is effected by the sacrifices. The obscurity of the language may be due to the insertion of the previous section.

glory, the visible Presence of Yahweh in the fiery cloud.

44. I will sanctify. The physical acts, dealing with material objects, did not effect consecration by themselves. They were only valid because Yahweh appointed and accepted them, and Himself set apart the Sanctuary and its Ministers for His service.

XXX. 1-10. THE ALTAR OF INCENSE (S).

1-3. An altar is to be made of acacia-wood overlaid with gold, with a golden rim. The altar is to be a cubit broad, a cubit long, and two cubits high.

4, 5. It is to be provided with rings to hold the staves with which it is to be carried.

6. It is to be put in the Holy Place.

7, 8. Aaron is to burn incense on it morning and evening.

9. It is not to be used for any other purpose.

10. It is to be cleansed with the blood of the sin-offering once a year. It is a most sacred thing.

Sources, &c. This and some of the following sections belong to the later additions to the Priestly Code. The main body of that document only knows of one altar, that of burnt-offering, which it consistently calls 'the altar,' xxix. 44 and passim. The passage also implies directions given at a later stage. Thus the 'strange incense' in verse 9 implies Lev. x. 1 ; and verse 10 implies the ritual of the Day of Atonement in Lev. xvi. In the Samaritan Pentateuch the passage comes after xxvi. 35.

- 2 upon : of acacia wood shalt thou make it. A cubit shall be the length thereof, and a cubit the breadth thereof ; foursquare shall it be : and two cubits shall be the height thereof : the horns thereof shall be of one piece with it.

There are many difficulties about this Altar of Incense, and it has been doubted whether it ever existed. If we render ' censers ' instead of ' spoons ' in xxv. 29, the offering of incense has already been arranged for ; there is no such altar in Ezekiel ; nor among the spoil taken by Titus. According to 2 Macc. ii. 5 ff., Jeremiah hid the Ark and Altar of Incense in a cave. On the other hand, there are references to this altar in 1 Macc. i. 21, iv. 49 ff. The reference to ' the golden altar ' in 1 Kings vi. 22, vii. 48 is said (Kennedy) to be a late addition to that work, based on our passage. This altar is not mentioned amongst the contents of the Tabernacle in Heb. ix. 2-5 : R. V. rightly translates thumiaterion in verse 4, ' censer, ' and not, as marg., ' altar of incense. '

This altar may be simply the Table of Shewbread in another form, the Table being sometimes thought of and spoken of as an altar ; the idea arose that at one time there was an altar within the Tabernacle ; and the author of our passage gave an account of his theory of the nature and object of that altar.

Kennedy and Skinner, however, hold that such an altar did exist in the Second Temple.

3-5. Cf. xxv. 24, 26, 28.

6. This verse, together with xl. 5, has led to misunderstanding. If we take the existing text, we should interpret, ' Thou shalt put the altar before the veil that is by the ark, ' i. e. ' in the Holy over the testimony, where I will meet with thee. And 7 Aaron shall burn thereon incense of sweet spices : every morning, when he dresseth the lamps, he shall burn it.

 And when Aaron ^a lighteth the lamps ^b at even, he shall 8 burn it, a perpetual incense before the LORD throughout your generations. Ye shall offer no strange incense 9 thereon, nor burnt offering, nor meal offering ; and ye shall pour no drink offering thereon. And Aaron shall 10 make atonement ^c upon the horns of it once in the year :
 with the blood of the sin offering of atonement once in the year shall he make atonement ^d for it throughout your generations : it is most holy unto the LORD.

Place or outer chamber, outside of the veil separating the Holy Place from the Holy of Holies.' The writer speaks from the point of view of a person entering the Tabernacle, to whom an object in the outer chamber is 'before the veil.' Then, similarly, 'before the Mercy-seat' applies to the veil, not to the altar.

The rival opinion that the altar stood within the veil, in the inner chamber, in front of the Ark, is not justified by the language here, or by the general account of the Tabernacle.

Perhaps, however, we should follow the Septuagint, the Samaritan Hebrew text, and a number of Hebrew MSS. in omitting 'before the mercy-seat that is over the testimony.'

10. The writer has in mind the ritual of the Day of Atonement, Lev. xvi. In that chapter incense plays an important part, but it is offered in a censer ; and there is no reference to an altar of incense. The 'altar before Yahweh' is the altar of burnt-offering ; cf. verses 12, 18, 20, 25 of Lev. xvi.

XXX. 11-16. THE POLL-TAX (S).

11-15. When a census is taken, the Israelites are to offer half a shekel a head to Yahweh.

16. This money is to be devoted to the service of the Sanctuary.

Sources, &c. This also appears to be a later addition. In

- 13 when thou numberest them. This they shall give, every one that passeth over unto them that are numbered, half a shekel after the shekel of the sanctuary: (the shekel is twenty gerahs :) half a shekel for an offering to the LORD.
- 14 Every one that passeth over unto them that are numbered, from twenty years old and upward, shall give the offering

Neh. x. 32 the people covenant to pay a third of a shekel a head yearly.

12. Primitive superstition regarded a census as dangerous or even impious; unless special precautions were taken Divine judgement would follow. Thus when Yahweh was angry with Israel He induced David to take a census, which was followed by a plague. So 2 Sam. xxiv; but 1 Chron. xxi. 1 judiciously substitutes Satan for Yahweh. In Num. i-iv this law is ignored, and other means are taken of averting God's wrath.

13. the shekel of the sanctuary, or rather, 'the sacred shekel,' commonly supposed to be about half as much again as the ordinary shekel, 224 grains as against 173. The phrase is only found in the Priestly documents; cf. on xxi. 32. This tax is understood as an annual one in 2 Chron. xxiv. 6-9; but in our passage it seems only intended for special occasions.

gerahs only occur in the Priestly documents and Exekiel; they are identified by the Septuagint with the Greek obol, i. e. about 11 grains of silver. We may compare a small Babylonian weight called giru mentioned in Nebuchadnezzar's inscriptions.

And Aaron and his sons shall wash their hands and their 19 shall wash with water, that they die not; or when they come near to the altar to minister, to burn an offering made by fire unto the LORD: so they shall wash their 21 hands and their feet, that they die not: and it shall be throughout their generations.

17, 18. Moses is to make a Brazen Laver, and place it between the Tabernacle and the Altar.

19-21. From this laver Aaron and his sons are to wash their hands and feet when they minister at the Tabernacle.

22-25. Moses is to compound an oil for anointing, after a certain recipe.

26-30. With this he is to anoint the Tabernacle, its belongings, and Aaron and his sons.

31. This recipe is always to be followed in making oil for anointing the sacred persons and things.

32. The oil is not to be used for any other purpose.

33. Any one who imitates it or misuses it is to be 'cut off from his people.'

36. This verse is obscure. It might possibly mean that a portion of the incense was to be kept, as a sample or a memorial, before the Ark in the Holy of Holies, like Aaron's rod and the manna. But the verse is commonly expounded thus : As occasion required, portions of the incense were to be prepared and burnt on the altar of incense in the Holy Place, before the Ark, but separated from it by the Veil. If our author meant all this, he might have said so ; he is usually fond of details.

And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, Speak thou also unto the children of Israel, saying, Verily ye shall keep my sabbaths: for it is a sign between me and you throughout your generations; that ye may know that I am the LORD which sanctify you. Ye shall keep the sabbath therefore; for it is holy unto you: every one that profaneth it shall surely be put to death: for whosoever doeth any work therein, that soul shall be cut off from among his people. Six days shall work be done; but on the seventh day is a sabbath of solemn rest, holy to

xxx. 12-17. THE SABBATHS.

12-14 a. The Sabbath is to be observed; Sabbath-breakers to be put to death.

14 b-16. The Sabbath is to be observed; Sabbath-breakers to be put to death.

17. The Sabbath a sign between Yahweh and Israel. At the Creation Yahweh rested on the Seventh Day.

Sources, &c. One of the Priestly equivalents of the Fourth Commandment. The repetitions indicate compilation from various sources or the presence of later additions.

14. shall surely be put to death . . . shall be cut off from among his people. The combination indicates the intention to 'cut off from among his people': cf. also verse 15. According to Num. xv. 32-36, P, a man who gathered sticks on the Sabbath was stoned to death. Cf. on xii. 15.

 children of Israel shall keep the sabbath, to observe the sabbath throughout their generations, for a perpetual

 Israel for ever: for in six days the LORD made heaven and earth, and on the seventh day he rested, and was refreshed.

 The phrase is also applied to the Day of Atonement, and the Sabbatical Year. Sabbāthôn by itself is used of the Feast of Trumpets, and certain days of the Feast of Tabernacles.

xxx. 18—xxxii. 35. THE GOLDEN CALF (E R).

xxx. 18 (S E). Yahweh gives Moses the Two Tables.

xxxii. 1-4 (E). On account of Moses' prolonged absence the people induce Aaron to make a molten image of a calf in gold, which they hail as the god which brought them out of Egypt.

5-6 (E). Aaron builds an altar before the Calf, and celebrates a feast to Yahweh.

7-14 (R). Yahweh bids Moses go down; He tells him what the people have done; and declares that He will destroy the people and make Moses the ancestor of a great nation. Moses intercedes, and Yahweh relents.

15 (E R S). Moses comes down from the Mount with the Two Tables.

16 ff. (E). Joshua and Moses hear the noise in the camp.

19 f. (E). Coming nearer, Moses sees the Calf and the dancing; he throws down the Tables and breaks them; grinds the Calf to powder, and makes the people drink water in which the powder has been strown.

21-24 (E). He reproaches Aaron, who pleads that he acted under constraint.

25-29. (J). At the command of Moses the Levites massacre

down from the mount, the people gathered themselves together unto Aaron, and said unto him, Up, make us 30-34 (R). Moses intercedes with Yahweh for the people, and asks that if they are destroyed he may share their fate. Yahweh answers that He will deal with each man according to his desert. Moses is to lead the people to Canaan; Yahweh's Angel will go before them; and in due season Yahweh will punish them.

35 (E). Yahweh sends a plague amongst the people.

Sources, &c. The various repetitions and discrepancies show that this section includes work from several hands. Thus in 7 f. Yahweh tells Moses what is happening, but in 16 f. Joshua and Moses are taken by surprise by what they see and hear. Again, in 9 f. Yahweh declares that He will destroy the people, but Moses intercedes, and He relents. Nevertheless in 31 f. Moses intercedes as if he knew nothing of Yahweh's relenting. Punishments are heaped upon the unhappy people; they are compelled to drink water with which the dust of the Calf has been mixed, verse 20; 3,000 are massacred, verse 28; and the people are smitten with a plague, verse 35. Yet verse 34 speaks of the punishment as postponed to some uncertain future. Aaron, the most conspicuous culprit, gets off scot-free; but that is what often happens in real life.

It is generally held that a narrative from the Elohist Document, E, is the basis of this chapter, and that there is no trace of P; but there is no agreement as to the details of the analysis. It is uncertain which verses, &c., are E, which J, and which by later hands. It is also possible that the E narrative belonged to the later portions of that document. The analysis given in the text is only put forward as one out of many possible divisions of the text. Where so much is doubtful, it seemed convenient to prefer what is comparatively simple.

Any attempt to recover the original tradition represented by this chapter is beset with many difficulties. The following suggestions are made with great diffidence.

It must be remembered that Bethel was long regarded as a legitimate sanctuary founded by Jacob or some other patriarch, Gen. xxviii. 11; for centuries it was the scene of the official worship of Yahweh under the form of a Calf. The original form of our narrative may have ascribed the origin of this Calf to Moses, or some other ancient worthy. When both Bethel and its Calf were discredited, it was felt that the Calf was ancient, it must have been made not by Moses, but in spite of Moses. Our chapter is the result of a long literary process influenced by this and similar reflections.

The part assigned to Aaron is puzzling; Aaron is usually con-

^a gods, which shall go before us ; for as for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we 2 know not what is become of him. And Aaron said unto them, Break off the golden rings, which are in the ears of your wives, of your sons, and of your daughters, and
 3 bring them unto me. And all the people brake off the golden rings which were in their ears, and brought them
 4 unto Aaron. And he received it at their hand, and fashioned it with a graving tool, and made it a molten calf : and they said, ^b These be thy gods, O Israel, which 5 brought thee up out of the land of Egypt. And when Aaron saw this, he built an altar before it ; and Aaron made proclamation, and said, To-morrow shall be a feast
 6 to the LORD. And they rose up early on the morrow, and offered burnt offerings, and brought peace offerings ; and the people sat down to eat and to drink, and rose up to play.

7 [R] And the LORD spake unto Moses, Go, get thee down ; for thy people, which thou broughtest up out of 8 the land of Egypt, have corrupted themselves : they have nected with the Ark and its priesthood at Shiloh and Jerusalem, and not with Bethel. It is possible—the idea of course is a mere conjecture—that at one time there was an image of Yahweh in the form of a Calf in the Temple, and its construction was attributed to Aaron, the connexion being regarded as honourable both to him and to the image. The present narrative takes a different view, but does its best to excuse him ; he acted under compulsion, hardly knowing what he did, verses 22-24.

1. gods, rather, as marg., 'a god.'

4. fashioned it with a graving tool, and made it a molten calf. One does not fashion metal with a graving tool, before melting it. The former clause may be a mistaken reading, or the two clauses may come from different sources. The Egyptian god Apis was worshipped in the form of a calf.

turned aside quickly out of the way which I commanded them : they have made them a molten calf, and have worshipped it, and have sacrificed unto it, and said, These be thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt. And the LORD said unto Moses, I have 9 seen this people, and, behold, it is a stiffnecked people : now therefore let me alone, that my wrath may wax hot 10 against them, and that I may consume them : and I will make of thee a great nation. And Moses besought the 11 LORD his God, and said, LORD, why doth thy wrath wax hot against thy people, which thou hast brought forth out of the land of Egypt with great power and with a mighty hand ? Wherefore should the Egyptians speak, 12 saying, For evil did he bring them forth, to slay them in the mountains, and to consume them from the face of the earth ? Turn from thy fierce wrath, and repent of this evil against thy people. Remember Abraham, Isaac, 13 and Israel, thy servants, to whom thou swarest by thine own self, and saidst unto them, I will multiply your seed as the stars of heaven, and all this land that I have spoken of will I give unto your seed, and they shall inherit it for ever. And the LORD repented of the evil 14 which he said he would do unto his people.

[E] And Moses turned, and went down from the 15 mount, with the two tables [R] of the testimony [E] in his hand : [S] tables that were written on both their sides ; on the one side and on the other were they written. [E] And the tables were the work of God, and 16

12. repent, a natural, almost necessary, anthropomorphism. Whatever theological views we may hold as to the unchangeableness of the Divine purpose, the course alike of Providence and of spiritual experience often impress us as a relenting on the part of God ; cf. on Gen. vi. 6f.

the writing was the writing of God, graven upon the 17 tables. And when Joshua heard the noise of the people as they shouted, he said unto Moses, There is a noise of 18 war in the camp. And he said, It is not the voice of them that shout for mastery, neither is it the voice of them that cry for being overcome : but the noise of them 19 that sing do I hear. And it came to pass, as soon as he came nigh unto the camp, that he saw the calf and the dancing : and Moses' anger waxed hot, and he cast the tables out of his hands, and brake them beneath the 20 mount. And he took the calf which they had made, and burnt it with fire, and ground it to powder, and strewed it upon the water, and made the children of Israel drink 21 of it. And Moses said unto Aaron, What did this people unto thee, that thou hast brought a great sin upon them ?
 22 And Aaron said, Let not the anger of my lord wax hot : 23 thou knowest the people, that they are set on evil. For they said unto me, Make us gods, which shall go before us : for as for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we know not what is become 24 of him. And I said unto them, Whosoever hath any gold, let them break it off ; so they gave it me : and I 25 cast it into the fire, and there came out this calf. [J] And

18. shout . . . cry . . . sing. Each of these three words renders the same Hebrew consonants ; as 'shout' and 'cry' both have a qualifying phrase, probably some such phrase has been lost after 'sing.' The Septuagint has 'for wine.' Other versions understand 'the sound of transgressions.'

20. burnt it. The image would be cast over a wooden core.
made the children of Israel drink of it. Perhaps, as in the ordeal of the wife suspected of adultery, Num. v. 11-31, it is implied that this drinking would cause disease in those guilty of idolatry ; hence the plague in verse 35.

25-29. It is not certain that these verses originally had anything to do with the episode of the Golden Calf ; they may have when Moses saw that the people were broken loose; [R] for Aaron had let them loose for a ⁿ derision among their enemies: [J] then Moses stood in the gate of the camp, ²⁶ and said, Whoso is on the LORD'S side, let him come unto me. And all the sons of Levi gathered themselves together unto him. And he said unto them, Thus saith ²⁷ the LORD, the God of Israel, Put ye every man his sword upon his thigh, and go to and fro from gate to gate throughout the camp, and slay every man his brother, and every man his companion, and every man his neighbour. And the sons of Levi did according to the word ²⁸ of Moses: and there fell of the people that day about three thousand men. And Moses said, ²⁹ b Consecrate yourselves to-day to the LORD, ^c yea, every man ^d against his son, and ^d against his brother; that he may bestow belonged to an account of some other of the many rebellions of the Israelites. The ascription to J is not made with any confidence; cf. above.

25. were broken loose, cast off restraint.

for a derision among their enemies. There is nothing here to explain the reference to 'enemies,' which seems to indicate that the paragraph originally stood in a different context; cf. next note.

26. This verse implies that the misdoing of the Israelites was some disloyalty against Yahweh, therefore not the making of an image of Yahweh. The Levites had remained faithful.

27. every man his brother, &c. As, according to verse 26, all the Levites were for Yahweh, these phrases must refer to their fellow Israelites.

29. Consecrate yourselves. Cf. xxviii. 41. The exact reading and translation here are doubtful. The Septuagint partly suggests 'ye have consecrated yourselves.' The general sense is clear: the Levites were invested with the priesthood—not necessarily an exclusive priesthood—as a reward for their loyalty on this occasion; cf. Deut. xxxiii. 9.

30 upon you a blessing this day. [R] And it came to pass on the morrow, that Moses said unto the people, Ye have sinned a great sin: and now I will go up unto the LORD; peradventure I shall make atonement for your 31 sin. And Moses returned unto the LORD, and said, Oh, this people have sinned a great sin, and have made them 32 gods of gold. Yet now, if thou wilt forgive their sin--; and if not, blot me, I pray thee, out of thy book which 33 thou hast written. And the LORD said unto Moses, Whosoever hath sinned against me, him will I blot out 34 of my book. And now go, lead the people unto the place of which I have spoken unto thee: behold, mine angel shall go before thee: nevertheless in the day when I

 Aaron made.

30. I shall make atonement, KPR, as usual; cf. xxv. 17. There is no question of Moses appeasing Yahweh by sacrifices. Apparently he proposes to atone for the sin of the people by offering himself as a victim—a proposal which Yahweh declines.

32. if thou wilt forgive their sin—. The broken words give striking expression to Moses' deep feeling.

blot me . . . out of thy book, i. e. expunge my name from the roll of God's people, implying destruction by death. This figure of the book is also found in Ps. lxix. 28; Isa. iv. 3; Dan. xii. 1; Mal. iii. 16.

xxxiii. INSTRUCTIONS AND DISCUSSIONS CONCERNING THE MARCH AFTER LEAVING SINAI.

1-4 (J). Yahweh bids Moses and Israel leave Sinai for Canaan. He will not go with them, but will send His angel.

At these evil tidings the people mourn, and do not put on their ornaments.

5, 6 (R E). At the command of Yahweh the people take off their ornaments.

hence, thou and the people which thou hast brought up out of the land of Egypt, unto the land of which I swore unto Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, saying, Unto thy seed will I give it: and I will send an angel before thee; and I will drive out the Canaanite, the Amorite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, the Hivite, and the Jebusite: unto a land flowing with milk and honey: for I will not go up in the midst of thee; for thou art a stiffnecked people: lest I consume thee in the way. And when the people heard these evil tidings, they mourned: and no man did put on him his ornaments. [R] And the LORD said unto Moses, Say unto the children of Israel, Ye are a stiffnecked people: if I go up into the midst of thee for one moment, I shall consume thee: therefore now put off thy ornaments from thee, 7-11 (E). Moses' practice was (whenever Israel encamped) to pitch the Sacred Tent at some distance from the camp. Moses used to go out to the Tent to meet with Yahweh, who descended in a pillar of cloud. Joshua ben Nun was the custodian of the Tent.

12-23 (R). Moses seeks the favour and help of Yahweh for his leadership. Yahweh promises that His Presence shall go with Israel; He declares that Moses enjoys His favour. Moses begs that he may see the Glory of Yahweh. Yahweh replies that He will proclaim His Name; Moses cannot see His face; but Yahweh will show him His back.

Sources, &c. There is general agreement as to the ascription of verses 7-11 to E, and as to the presence of passages from J with later additions in the rest of the chapter. Verses 12-23 may not have belonged to the original J.

Note the inconsistency between 4 b, where the people do not put on their ornaments, and 5 f, where they take them off at the bidding of Yahweh.

Again, in 11 Yahweh speaks to Moses face to face, as a man to his friend; but in verse 20 he may not see His face. See also notes on 7-11, 12-23.

7 Now Moses used to take the tent and to pitch it without the camp, afar off from the camp; and he called it, The tent of meeting. And it came to pass, that every one which sought the LORD went out unto the tent of 8 meeting, which was without the camp. And it came to pass, when Moses went out unto the Tent, that all the people rose up, and stood, every man at his tent door, and looked after Moses, until he was gone into the Tent.
9 And it came to pass, when Moses entered into the Tent, the pillar of cloud descended, and stood at the door of 10 the Tent: and the LORD spake with Moses. And all the people saw the pillar of cloud stand at the door of the Tent: and all the people rose up and worshipped, every 11 man at his tent door. And the LORD spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend. And he turned again into the camp: but his minister Joshua, the son of Nun, a young man, departed not out of the Tent.

6. stripped themselves. The word for 'strip' is that used in iii. 22 for 'spoil,' in 'they spoiled the Egyptians.'

7-11. The Tent in this paragraph is clearly the Sanctuary; but, according to chapters xxv f., xxxv ff., P, the Sanctuary was not yet in existence. Moreover, in P, the Sanctuary is in the middle of the camp, Num. ii, and is in charge of Aaron and his family and the Levites; here it is at some distance outside, and is in charge of the Ephraimite Joshua, who, according to P, would apparently have been excluded from the Tabernacle. The passage has no connexion with its present context; it was probably the sequel to E's account of the construction of the Tent, which has been omitted to make room for P's elaborate specifications.

12-23. The sequence of ideas in these verses is difficult to follow. It seems as if the original arrangement of sentences had been accidentally altered. The following has been proposed as a probable order (Oxf. Hex.):—

17. Yahweh declares his goodwill towards Moses.

12 f. Moses begs that Yahweh will show this goodwill by clear instructions, 'Shew me now Thy ways.'

14. Yahweh promises that His Presence shall go with Israel.

15 f. Moses replies that he can only accomplish his mission if Yahweh's Presence goes with Israel and if Yahweh gives clear signs that Israel is His Chosen People.

19. Yahweh promises to declare His Name, to reveal His 'goodness,' and to show favour according to His sovereign will.

18. Moses begs that He may see the glory of Yahweh.

20-23. Yahweh declines to show Moses His face, but agrees to show him His back.

One cannot be certain that the above was the original order, but some such rearrangement seems needed.

12. I know thee by name, &c. This 'saying of Yahweh' is only found in verse 17; cf. above.

14. My presence, lit. 'my face,' not actually Yahweh Himself, but a manifestation, an alter ego, rather more closely identified with Him than was the Angel of Yahweh. From 2 Sam. xvii. 11 we gather that 'thy face' was a courtier-like mode of speaking of a king to himself, like 'Your Majesty.'

Sources, &c. In this chapter we have the account given by the Primitive Document, J, of the Two Tables of Stone and the Covenant between Yahweh and Israel. There are many similarities between these two corresponding sections of J and E. Originally, no doubt, both stood—each in its own document—as the immediate sequel of the appearance of Yahweh on Sinai; the

2 tables, [R] which thou brakest. [J] And be ready by the morning, and come up in the morning unto mount Sinai, and present thyself there to me on the top of the present position of J's version is due to the editor, who, wishing to include both, found room for J's account by making it a sequel instead of a parallel to that of E. Each contains a set of 'Ten Words,' which, in each case, is probably older than J or E respectively. Each has been somewhat freely annotated. There is much material common, word for word, between the two ; and the same ancient document may be one of the sources of both. It is also possible that editors or copyists supplemented later editions of E from J and vice versa, just as copies of the Synoptic Gospels were supplemented from each other.

J's 'Ten Words' are purely ritual, and do not include the ethical precepts found in E.

1. I will write. In verses 27 ff. Moses writes the words that were on the first tables. But, according to verse 27, what was written was the substance of verses 10-26, something very different from the Ten Words on the Tables of chapter xx. These discrepancies indicate a later addition ; or according to some, all verse 1 belongs to E.

3. Parallel to xix. 11 b-13, 21, 24.

5. proclaimed the name of the LORD, worshipped Him.

6-9. The continuation of the secondary passage xxxiii. 12-23. It contains one of the most exalted descriptions of the Divine Character in the Bible, still, however, retaining the doctrine of LORD, the LORD, a God full of compassion and gracious, slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy and truth; ^a keeping 7 mercy for thousands, forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin: and that will by no means clear the guilty; visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, and upon the children's children, upon the third and upon the fourth generation. And Moses made haste, and bowed 8 his head toward the earth, and worshipped. And he 9 said, If now I have found grace in thy sight, O Lord, let the Lord, I pray thee, go in the midst of us; for it is a stiffnecked people; and pardon our iniquity and our sin, and take us for thine inheritance. [J] And he said, 10 Behold, I make a covenant: [R] before all thy people I punishment for the sins of ancestors, which Jeremiah and Ezekiel repudiated.

6. A similar description of Yahweh is found in Ps. lxxxvi. 15, cxi. 4, cxii. 4, 5, cxlv. 8, 9. It is not safe to assume that any four of these five passages (this verse and the Psalm verses) are quotations from the fifth. It is possible that some such description of Yahweh was part of the liturgy of some Israelite sanctuary, before either our paragraph or the Psalms were written.

6. full of compassion and gracious. In Hebrew 'full of compassion' is a single word, rahim, which is quite as emphatic and significant as the English phrase. Both these terms are used only of God, and they mostly occur together. The similar Arabic phrase 'the Merciful and Compassionate' is one of the favourite Mohammedan titles of God.

Asherim. The 'asherâ' was a wooden pillar erected at sanctuaries, perhaps originally a sacred tree, and then a pole representing a sacred tree. In early times the 'asherâ' was regarded as a legitimate adjunct, or 'ornament'—to use a modern ecclesiastical term—of the worship of Yahweh ; but it was condemned by the Deuteronomic lawgivers, doubtless because it was connected with superstitious ideas and practices. Perhaps 'asherâ' is sometimes, e. g. 1 Kings xviii. 19, the name of a Canaanitish goddess of Fortune ; and the 'asherâ', the sacred pole, may have been regarded as a symbol of this deity.

And Moses called unto them; and Aaron and all the rulers of the congregation returned unto him: and Moses spake to them. And afterward all the children of Israel came nigh: and he gave them in commandment all that the LORD had spoken with him in mount Sinai. And when Moses had done speaking with them, he put a veil on his face. 33. a veil. The word thus translated only occurs in this passage. The object of the veil would be to prevent the Israelites being distressed by continual exposure to the supernatural radiance. The explanation of 2 Cor. iii. 12-16, that Moses wore the veil that the Israelites might not see this radiance die out, does not suit the context here.

THE CONSTRUCTION OF THE TABERNACLE AND ITS FURNITURE, AND THE MAKING OF THE PRIESTLY VESTMENTS AND ORNAMENTS (S).

Sources, &c. This section is chiefly an account of the carrying out of certain of the instructions recorded in xxv-xxviii, and was composed by one of the later Priestly writers. As the wording of the instructions is usually followed exactly, with only the necessary changes of person, tense, &c., it has not been necessary to give analysis and notes, except where there are alterations.

The Septuagint of these chapters differs very widely from the present Hebrew text. There are numerous omissions, both long and short, and the order of the various sections is different.

xxxv. 4-29. THE COLLECTION, &c.

And let every wise hearted man among you come, and make all that the LORD hath commanded; the tabernacle, its tent, and its covering, its clasps, its boards, its bars, its pillars, and its sockets; the ark, and the staves thereof, the mercy-seat, and the veil of the screen; the table, and its staves, and all its vessels, and the ^bshewbread; the candlestick also for the light, and its vessels, and its lamps, and the oil for the light; and the altar of incense, and its staves, and the anointing oil, and the sweet incense, and the screen for the door, at the door of the tabernacle; the altar of burnt offering, with its grating of brass, its staves, and all its vessels, the laver and its base; the hangings of the court, the pillars thereof, and their sockets, and the screen for the gate of the court; the pins of the tabernacle, and the pins of the court, and their cords; the ^cfinely wrought garments, for ministering in the holy place, the holy garments for Aaron the priest, and the garments of his sons, to minister in the priest's office.

And all the wise men, that wrought all the work of the sanctuary, came every man from his work 5 which they wrought; and they spake unto Moses, saying, The people bring much more than enough for the service of the work, which the LORD commanded to make. 6 And Moses gave commandment, and they caused it to be proclaimed throughout the camp, saying, Let neither man nor woman make any more work for the offering of the sanctuary. So the people were restrained from 7 bringing. For the stuff they had was sufficient for all the work to make it, and too much.

to the hangings of the court. And their pillars were ¹⁹ silver, and the overlaying of their chapiters and their fillets of silver. And all the pins of the tabernacle, and ²⁰ of the court round about, were of brass.

 22 the priest. And Bezalel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah, made all that the LORD commanded 23 Moses. And with him was Oholiab, the son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan, ^a an engraver, and a cunning workman, and an embroiderer in blue, and in purple, and in scarlet, and fine linen.

24 All the gold that was used for the work in all the work of the sanctuary, even the gold of the offering, was twenty and nine talents, and seven hundred and thirty shekels, 25 after the shekel of the sanctuary. And the silver of them that were numbered of the congregation was an hundred talents, and a thousand seven hundred and threescore and fifteen shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary:

 thousand seven hundred seventy and five shekels he made hooks for the pillars, and overlaid their chapiters, and made fillets for them. And the brass of the offering was 29

And they did beat the gold into thin plates, and cut it into wires, to work it in the blue, and in the purple, and in the scarlet, and in 4 the fine linen, the work of the cunning workman. They made shoulderpieces for it, joined together: at the two 5 ends was it joined together. And the cunningly woven band, that was upon it, to gird it on withal, was of the same piece and like the work thereof; of gold, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen; as the LORD commanded Moses.

8 ^a And he made the breastplate, the work of the cunning workman, like the work of the ephod; of gold, of blue, 9 and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen. It was foursquare; they made the breastplate double: a span was the length thereof, and a span the breadth thereof, 10 being double. And they set in it four rows of stones: a row of sardius, topaz, and carbuncle was the first row. 11 And the second row, an emerald, a sapphire, and a 12 diamond. And the third row, a jacinth, an agate, and 13 an amethyst. And the fourth row, a beryl, an onyx, and a jasper: they were inclosed in ouches of gold in their 14 settings. And the stones were according to the names of the children of Israel, twelve, according to their names; like the engravings of a signet, every one according to his 15 name, for the twelve tribes. And they put the two wreathen chains of gold on the two rings at the ends of the breastplate. And the other two ends of the two wreathen chains they put on the two ouches, and put them on the shoulderpieces of the ephod, in the forepart thereof. And they made two rings of gold, and put them upon the two ends of the breastplate, upon the edge thereof, which was toward the side of the ephod inward. And they made two rings of gold, and put them on the two shoulderpieces of the ephod underneath, in the forepart thereof, close by the coupling thereof, above the cunningly woven band of the ephod. And they did bind the breastplate by the rings thereof unto the rings of the ephod with a lace of blue, that it might be upon the cunningly woven band of the ephod, and that the breastplate might not be loosed from the ephod; as the LORD commanded Moses.

^a And he made the robe of the ephod of woven work, all of blue; and the hole of the robe in the midst thereof, as the hole of a coat of mail, with a binding round about the hole of it, that it should not be rent.  had done it; as the LORD had commanded, even so had they done it: and Moses blessed them.

And he spread the tent over the tabernacle, and put the covering of the tent above upon it; as the LORD commanded Moses. And he took and put the testimony into the ark, and set the staves on the ark, and put the mercy-seat above upon the ark: and he brought the ark into the tabernacle, and set up the veil of the screen, and screened the ark of the testimony; as the LORD commanded Moses. And he put the table in the tent of meeting, upon the side of the tabernacle northward, without the veil. And he set the bread in order upon it before the LORD; as the LORD commanded Moses. APPENDIX I

THE ORIGIN OF THE PASSOVER

It has been pointed out in the notes¹ that the Passover, Pesah, was originally distinct from the Feast of Unleavened Bread, Maççóth. The antiquity of the Passover is generally accepted by scholars, and it is believed to have been derived from the nomad period of the History of Israel. Indeed it is sometimes thought to be older than Moses, and to be one of the features of ancient Semitic religion, which were retained by the worshippers of Yahweh, and were finally adopted by Revealed Religion.

The late Prof. W. Robertson Smith wrote²:—

‘Among the annual piacula of the more advanced Semites which, though they are not mystical sacrifices of an “unclean” animal, yet bear on their face the marks of extreme antiquity, the first place belongs to the Hebrew Passover, held in the spring month Nisan, where the primitive character of the offering appears not only from the details of the ritual, but from the coincidence of the season with that of the Arabian sacrifices in the month Rajab.’

Similarly Prof. Rudolph Smend³:—

‘The Passover sacrifice was not originally connected with Yahweh; it is older than the God of Israel.’

The Passover is generally regarded as a later modification of the spring sacrifice of the firstlings of cattle by the nomads; but Benzinger⁴ and others regard the sprinkling of the doorposts, &c., with blood as the essential and primitive element of the ritual. Such ceremonies were common in early times either as an offering to the household gods, who were supposed to have their seat at the door or the threshold, or were represented there by their images; or as a protection against hostile demons who might wish to force their way into the tent.

APPENDIX II

THE TABERNACLE

(Cf. Introduction, pp. 6 ff. and notes on xxxi ff.)

THE account of the Tabernacle is in many respects incomplete and obscure. The various models and pictures with which most of us are familiar can only be constructed by supplying much as to which the Bible is silent; by putting a more or less probable, but far from certain, interpretation on ambiguous phrases; and by ignoring minor details of the description which are inconsistent with more important passages. The use of some such method is inevitable, if we are to try to realize the intention of the author.

Up to a certain point these intentions are obvious; but in other matters there are gaps in our information, or the author's meaning is doubtful.

(i) Let us take first what is obvious. Even here we obtain our results partly by interpretation; the general intention is, as it seems to us, perfectly clear, and up to a certain point can be used to interpret what is ambiguous, and to supplement what is inadequate.

The Tabernacle, then, was to be a movable Sanctuary, provided with a movable barrier which was to be arranged so as to form an enclosure round it. The Tabernacle itself had a wooden framework, consisting of boards or wooden frames. These were provided with sockets in which they were to be fixed, so that they could stand upright. These were to be overlaid with gold. They formed two sides and a back, leaving the front open.

This framework was to be covered by a tent—the Dwelling—composed of a series of curtains fastened together, and also a veil dividing the Tabernacle into two parts, and a screen shutting in the open front of the wooden framework. The curtains were supported by the framework, and the veil and screen by pillars. Over this Dwelling were three upper coverings.

This Tabernacle was divided into an inner chamber, the Most Holy Place, containing the Ark; an outer chamber, the Holy Place, containing a seven-branched Lampstand, a Table for the Shewbread, and—perhaps—an Altar of Incense (cf. on xxx. 1-5).

The outer barrier consisted of curtains, supported on pillars, standing in sockets, and formed an oblong enclosure. Here stood the Altar of Sacrifice in front of the Tabernacle.

It is clearly the intention of the author that the Most Holy

MODEL OF TABERNACLE in perspective, with the two upper coverings removed, showing the framework covered by the tapestry curtains, a a with the cherubim figures, the goats'-hair curtains of 'the tent' b b, one of the corner frames c, the bars d d d, the veil e, and the screen f. (From Prof. A. R. S. Kennedy's Article TABERNACLE in Hastings's Dictionary of the Bible.)

Place, 'the Holy of Holies,' should be a cube of $10 \times 10 \times 10$ cubits; and that the outer chamber, the Holy Place, should be also 10 cubits high, and 10 cubits broad, but double the length, i. e. 20 cubits.

The enclosure or court was 100 cubits by 50 cubits, with a barrier 5 cubits high.

The Holy of Holies formed exactly the centre square of the hinder or western half of the court; and corresponding to it, the Altar of Sacrifice stood in the middle of the centre square of the front or eastern half of the court.

The Tabernacle and its court stand east and west, facing the east.

The materials, gold, silver, brass, costly clothes dyed various bright colours, show that the Sanctuary was intended to provide a unique example of conspicuous splendour, erected regardless of expense.

PLAN OF THE COURT OF THE TABERNACLE

(From Hastings's Dictionary of the Bible.)

The Tabernacle is made up of comparatively small portions, curtains, boards, &c., so that it may be readily put up and taken down, and moved from place to place.

The structure is a compromise between two kinds of sanctuaries; the wooden framework corresponds to a Temple such as Solomon's, the coverings represent a Tent.

(ii) Next let us consider the omissions and ambiguities of the description.

(a) Floor. No provision is made for any covering for the ground.

It seems strange that this should be so in a description of a magnificent structure, and that nothing should be said about it. Egyptian temples, however, had no marble floors; carpets or other coverings are sometimes laid on the floor in the tents of Bedouin sheikhs.

(b) Tent-ridge, &c. The present writer consulted a friend with much practical experience in manufacturing tents and other structures of wood, cloth, &c.; and his opinion is that the Tabernacle would not be stable without numerous supports in addition to those mentioned in Exodus, joists, cross-pieces, &c. Some sort of wooden ridge to support the four heavy cloth coverings seems required.

At first sight we might find a way out of the difficulty in the indefiniteness of Exodus—thickness of the boards is not given, and we may imagine them as substantial as we like. But this only lands us in a dilemma. If they are thin, they will not stand the strain to which they are exposed; but if they are thick—and some maintain they are $1\frac{1}{2}$ cubits thick—the difficulties of transport become enormous, and no timber accessible in the wilderness would furnish such beams.

(c) Inner and Outer Measurements, &c. Other considerations, too, are involved in the thickness of the boards. While all, practically, are agreed that the Holy of Holies was a cube of 10 cubits each way, much time has been spent on discussing whether the ten cubits are to be measured inside or outside. The present writer does not feel that either view will work, and is convinced that the Priestly author did not take into account the difference between inner and outer measurement, i. e. he quite ignored the thickness of the boards. In the same way he ignores the adjustments necessary at corners; his arrangement of pillars will not work as he obviously intends it should; and he does not allow for folds and slackness of curtains—he assumes that they will be perfectly rigid.¹

(d) The Arrangement of the Curtains, &c. It is not expressly said how the Curtains and other coverings are to be placed over the wooden framework; but the dimension of the goats'-hair curtains from edge to edge, across the framework, viz. 30 cubits, i. e. the sum of the breadth and the height of the two sides, implies that the coverings were to be laid over the wooden framework, as a pall is laid over a coffin.

Another view, however, has been taken. It has been supposed that there was to be a roof-ridge higher than the sides, so that the edges of the curtains hung at some 4 or 5 cubits from the ground. But this view would add considerably to the difficulty of understanding the description.

(iii) The Tabernacle and the Temples. The same general plan is common to the Tabernacle and the four Temples—those of Solomon, Zerubbabel, and Herod, and that designed by Ezekiel; in all four there is a building with inner and outer chambers, with an altar in front and an enclosure or court. The contents of the chambers were the same, except that there was no Ark in the post-exilic Temples.

In the Temples of Solomon and Ezekiel the dimensions of the two chambers were double those of the Tabernacle, the Holy Place was $40 \times 20 \times 20$ cubits, and the Holy of Holies $20 \times 20 \times 20$ ¹. There were cells or small chambers built on to these; and there were additional courts, &c., &c. Instead of the one seven-branched lampstand Solomon's Temple had ten single lampstands; but the seven-branched stand reappeared in the Temple of Herod.

(iv) Origin and Nature of the Priestly Description of the Tabernacle. We know from the other documents of the Pentateuch that the Israelites had a tradition of a Sacred Tent in use amongst their ancestors during the wanderings. It is possible, though not probable, that this tradition as it reached the Priestly writers included some general statements as to its dimensions, arrangement, and equipment. But whatever tradition may have been available was clearly supplemented and corrected by reminiscences of Solomon's Temple.

As, however, the purpose of the description was to guide the Jews in restoring the Temple; the writer had introduced modifications which seemed desirable. What we know of the later Temples shows that those who built them understood that this was the purpose of these chapters, and used them accordingly.

¹ There is a difficulty as to the height.

THE DATE OF HAMMURABI.

(Cf. Introduction, pp. 10, 13 ff., and notes 168 ff.)

THE reader may be surprised at the variety and range of the dates given for Hammurabi. They are due to a recent discovery that certain Babylonian dynasties before supposed to be consecutive were really contemporaneous, so that there was only a single period, during which two or more dynasties ruled side by side, instead of a number of periods. Hence the reduction in the figures for Hammurabi and other ancient dates. There is not at present any exact agreement amongst Assyriologists as to what the new date is to be. One friend, who is an authority on this subject, mentioned to the present writer about B. C. 1920. Dr. Paul Haupt gives in a letter B. C. 1958-1916. Others, as in the notes, give B. C. 2100; thus Tofteen, Ancient Chronology, Part I, gives B. C. 2109-2066.

Attempts are made, for apologetic purposes, to show an agreement between the Babylonian and the Biblical Chronology. But in addition to the inconsistencies pointed out in the Introduction, the Biblical data are rendered uncertain by the variations between the figures in the Massoretic Hebrew text, the Samaritan Hebrew text,¹ and the various MSS. of the Septuagint. In view of the uncertainties on both the Biblical side and the Babylonian, it would be premature to build on any supposed agreement between them.
